BUSINESS NOTES.

BARRE, VT.—Smith & Robins have removed their book and stationery store into the Durkee block.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mr. Lamson, of the firm of Lamson, Wolffe & Co., will go to Kansas City, Mo., where he has taken a position.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Mutual Book Company will remove on the 10th inst. to much more commodious quarters at 79 Franklin Street, where they will also carry a larger stock of books and stationery.

CHICAGO, ILL.—It is reported that the firm of Hayes, Cooke & Co. is bankrupt. We believe the firm at the last consisted only of H. H. Cooke, R. B. Hayes having long ago separated from the concern and Walter M. Hill more recently.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — George H. Felt, bookseller, has sold out.

MABLE, MINN.—O. K. Flaater, bookseller, has sold out to Caroline Thompson.

NEWPORT, R. I.—George H. Carr has removed his book and stationery business into the large double store in the Daily News building.

NEW YORK CITY.—The accounts of John De C. Ireland, receiver of the Merriam Company, book publishers and jobbers, formerly at No. 67 Fifth Avenue, have been passed upon by Nelson Smith, referee. The receiver has collected $8649 and paid out $4005, leaving a balance of $4644, together with other assets not disposed of worth $1400, against which there are charges of $1595, leaving $4449 available for the creditors.

NEW YORK CITY.—The following circular letter has been issued by William R. Rose, receiver for Brentano's: "I hereby notify you that on Monday, May 1st, I shall transfer all of the assets and effects of the firm of Brentano's in my hands as receiver unto Malcolm R. Lawrence, and from and after to-day [May 1] I shall not be accountable for any sales which may be made by you to Brentano's. Any balance for which I am indebted to you for purchases made by me during the term of my receivership, will be paid promptly at maturity at the office of Brentano's, No. 31 Union Square, as heretofore." Mr. Lawrence was the highest bidder at the recent public sale of the effects of the firm of Brentano's, at New York, Chicago, and Washington. As already noted, the firm of Brentano's has been incorporated, as Brentano's Incorporated, and commenced business under a new regime on May 1.

NEW YORK CITY.—Lewis R. Hamersley, of 38 Park Row, filed a petition in bankruptcy April 21, with liabilities of $84,576, and no assets. Mr. Hamersley was for twenty years identified with the publishing business in Philadelphia, pushing a line of army and navy books and a magazine, and has been a special advertising agent here for several years.

NEW YORK CITY.—Mitchell Kennerley, until recently in charge of the American branch of John Lane's publishing house, "The Bodley Head," expects to start a publishing house of his own in this city.

PEKIN, ILL.—Charles Duisdieker has bought H. G. Bass's stock of books (subject to a chattel mortgage,) and will place the business in charge of his son Charles.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—Charles P. Penfield has leased the store at 328 Broadway, opposite the Grand Union Hotel, and has removed his book and stationery business into it.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 6, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

THE KIPLING "EDITION."

MR. KIPLING'S law suit against G. P. Putnam's Sons, and, nominally, others, will not be tried until autumn, the taking of testimony so far being simply a preliminary step necessitated by the temporary presence in this country of the witnesses. It is difficult to see from the testimony, and from the facts so far developed in the case, what ground there may be for either copyright or trade-mark suit. That, however, is for the courts to determine, should the case come to trial. The question of equity or of recognition outside the law of an author's right to control his own works, is another matter.

As we indicated last week, the use of the word "edition," in binding up a set of books, certainly tends to confuse trade terms and to mislead the public, and it is to be regretted that a firm which stands among those at the front of the American publishing trade, particularly with reference to copyright and the recognition of authors' rights, should have set so unfortunate a precedent. It is gratifying that this fact has been recognized to the extent of giving up the use of the phrase Brushwood Edition and simply calling the set a "complete collection."

Mr. Kipling's grievance as an author seems to be founded not so much on copyright or trade-mark bases, as on these three facts: that Will M. Clemens's "Ken of Kipling," the correctness of which he repudiates, should have been included with a set of his works as though authorized; that the "Recessional," dedicated to the public without copyright by its original method of publication, and "The Vampire," which was a poem written as a personal matter and not for publication, should have been included with "The Seven Seas" in the binding-up, as apparently a part of that volume; and that the "Departmental Ditties," of which there was no authorized American edition, should have been coupled with the copyright editions of his other books. It appears that the reason Mr. Kipling's "Departmental Ditties" have not been published here in an authorized edition is that he had originally sold this work in England outright without reserving royalty or other rights in that volume. Probably any author would feel aggrieved by this treatment from a publishing house; and although this was an enterprise essentially of the retail or bookselling department of the publishing house in question, yet that department assumed some of the functions of a publishing department, and thus identified the Brushwood Edition with the Putnam house as publishers. Mr. Kipling would seem to have been entitled to, and we presume would have received apologies from a house like the Putnam's, when the importance of the matter was called to their attention; and it is much to be regretted that the controversy should have been so promptly put in such shape as to make an appeal to the courts the remedy.

We regret to learn that the example set by the Putnam house is likely to have the effect of starting up a crop of incomplete "editions" made by collecting Kipling's books that are not under American copyright; but we presume that any such move will be met by Mr. Kipling's authorized publishers with editions which can hold the market against such competition.

THIRTY-ONE YEARS OF LAW-BOOK PUBLISHING.

OTTO MÜHLBRECHT, in the introduction to his "Uebersicht der gesammten staats- u. rechtswissenschaftlichen Litteratur des Jahres 1898," gives statistics of the production of law-books in Germany, France, England and America, Italy, the Netherlands, Scandinavia (including Denmark, Sweden, and Norway,) and Spain, from 1868 to 1898 inclusive. The total of books published in the countries named for the thirty-one years amounts to 111,954. Of this number Germany (including Austria and German Switzerland) published 55,319; France, 20,556; England and America, 15,771; Italy, 8978; the Netherlands, 5413; Scandinavia, 3973; and Spain, 1944. The figures for Spain are incomplete, as the compiler was unable to obtain statistics of the years 1869, 1873, and 1874. In 1898 Germany published 2171, or 51 more than in 1897; France, 739, an increase of 141; England and America, 613, or 25 more than in 1897; Italy, 316, a gain of 15; the Netherlands, 141, showing a decrease of 64; Scandinavia, 90, against 94 of the preceding year; and Spain, 77, or 9 less than in 1897. The total for the year was 4147.

The totals by years of the book production of the countries named are as follows: 1868, 3204; 1869, 3051; 1870, 3129; 1871, 2788; 1872, 2512; 1873, 2594; 1874, 2749; 1875, 3187; 1876, 3407; 1877, 3396; 1878, 3393; 1879, 3920; 1880, 3756; 1881, 3975; 1882, 3515; 1883, 3761; 1884, 4394; 1885, 4192; 1886, 4051; 1887, 3621; 1888, 3872; 1889, 3796; 1890, 3623; 1891, 3765; 1892, 3761; 1893, 4003; 1894, 4125; 1895, 4139; 1896, 4136; 1897, 3992; 1898, 4147.

BOOK STEALING.

BORROWERS of books, according to Albert Sim in La Révue Bleue (as translated for the London Bookseller,) have always, and that much more so even than rats or bookworms, fire or water, been the terror of bibliophiles. "Ite ad vendentes!" Scarron had inscribed over the entrance to his library. "The devil take all borrowers of books," was one of the humorous mottoes with which the cynical and learned artist Du Moustier, in the reign of Louis XIII., ornamented the door of his study in the garrets of the Louvre.

But something beyond selfishness and jealousy are found to be connected with the passion for books: a mania for appropriating them, it has been often proved, occasionally and by degrees creeps in; occasionally and unconsciously the lover of books becomes a thief. How many people even are tempted to think as Tallemant des Reaux once said, "That to steal books is not stealing, provided that one does not afterwards sell them." In support of this avowal, the tell-tale author of the "Historiettes" relates the curious scene which took place one day between Monsignor Pamfili, who became later on Pope Innocent X., and the artist Daniel du Moustier, he who consigned so emphatically to the devil all borrowers of books. "Cardinal Barbarini having come to France as legate during the pontificate of his uncle, felt a curiosity to see the study of Du Moustier and Du Moustier himself. Innocent X., then Monsignor Pamfili, was at the time datary and chief officer of the legate's suite. He accompanied Barbarini on his visit to Du Moustier, and seeing on the table 'L'Histoire du Concile de Trente,' in the beautiful London edition, he said to himself: 'What on earth does a man like that want with such a precious book?' Accordingly, he takes it and hides it under his cassock, thinking that no one observed him. But the little man (Du Moustier,) who was on the lookout, saw what the datary had done, and, furious, said to the legate that 'he was greatly obliged by the honor his excellency did him, but it was a scandal that he should bring thieves in his company;' and on the instant, taking Pamfili by the shoulders, he thrust him out of doors, having first taken the book from him. Later on, when Pamfili was elected Pope (September 15, 1644,) some one said to Du Moustier that the Pope would excommunicate him, and that he would turn as black as a coal. 'He will do me a great kindness,' returned the artist, 'for I am only too white as it is' (meaning his hair and his beard)."

Another Italian church dignitary, Cardinal Dominique Passionei, who himself was very nearly made Pope, and of whom the President de Brosses has given us, in his "Lettres sur l'Italie," such a lively and amusing portrait, had succeeded in getting together a magnificent library by means similar to that told of Innocent X. Being sent in 1721 to Lucerne in the capacity of Nuncio, Passionei was seized with an extraordinary curiosity with regard to the abbeys and convents of Switzerland, and with a vast admiration for them. He was unflagging in his inspection of them, remaining for long hours in the libraries of these establishments; and he never left without having his cloak well lined and bulging extensively. He went so far as to contrive a less compromising and more expeditious way of getting the books into his possession. He pretended to be engaged in serious study, and that he had to make minute research in these libraries, had himself locked in, that he might be undisturbed, and then threw out of the window to one of his trusty servants the most precious volumes.

The most singular and dramatic testimony to the follies and crimes begotten by a fondness for books is furnished us by a bookseller of Barcelona, who lived in the early part of this century. This dealer, named Vincente, seeing that one of his fellows had got the better of him at a sale, and acquired a very rare work, a copy supposed to be unique, of the "Ordonaciones por los Gloriosas Reyes de Aragon" (1482,) was filled with such vexation and fury on this account that he did not stick at getting admittance the next night into the house of his successful rival and murdering him to get possession of the inestimable treasure. When arrested the following day Vincente did not attempt to deny it. He was imprisoned and brought to trial, but what caused him the deepest concern and engrossed his mind to the point of making him forget his judge and the fate that threatened him, was learning that in London there had been discovered a second copy of this book, for the possession of which he had not hesitated to commit a murder. And this is not all. The inquiry elicited that this terrible amateur of books was not at his first essay—that he had already murdered twelve of his customers merely to get back the rare works that he himself had sold them! This brutal monomaniac was condemned to be garotted; and up to the day of his execution he had but one solicitude: he asked but one favor, which was that after his death his private books and his stock-in-trade should not be put up to auction and dispersed, but that they should be placed religiously, and as a whole, in the public library of Barcelona.

Amongst the most famous and the least scrupulous borrowers of books is cited, by common consent, Edme Courtois, concerning whom Louis Paris, formerly librarian at Rheims, tells us in his "Souvenirs" some very amusing anecdotes. The academician Villemain, so Jules Richard affirms in his treatise on "L'Art de Former une Bibliothèque," "never returned borrowed books, and the co-operation of his secretary was necessary, that the lender might go surreptitiously and recover his property." Another immortal, Louis de Loménie, according to the same bibliographer, was touched with the same foible.

But it is not always to stow away in bookcases, to contemplate and gloat over, that amateurs lay violent hands upon volumes that come in their way and happen to take their fancy, it is also for the sake of traffic. In this second category of unhandsome bibliophiles belongs the case of Harmand, whose trial took place before the Assize Court of the Aube in February, 1883. Auguste Harmand had filled the post of librarian to the town of Troyes since 1842. The havoc made by him in the establishment confided to his care baffles all attempt at computation. Being informed against by the porter of the mayoralty, who had noticed the abstraction of books, Harmand was condemned to four years' imprisonment. He tried to pass himself off as a political martyr, and attributed the proceedings instituted against him to personal enmity, and in particular to the ill-will of a former mayor of Troyes. Harmand had taken care to remove from the catalogue the names of the books he appropriated, so that the experts, Ludovic Lalanne and Anatole de Montaiglon, could find no trace of these volumes, and their task became an almost impossible one. A discovery, which one may call providential, enabled them to complete anew a good part of the original catalogue, and to offer proof as to a portion of what had been carried off. The loose slips which had been used in compiling the catalogue had been consigned to the garret. During many years the mice overrunning these attics had had plenty of opportunity to nibble at these papers; so that whole sections of the catalogue, "Fine Arts" and "Polite Literature," were reduced to shreds. On the other hand, other sections, "Theology" and "History," the loose slips of which were in another corner of the garret, under a loft, had remained intact; and it was these which enabled the experts to restore the catalogue to its entirety as regarded those sections. But what had saved these last-named portions from the depredations of the mice? An owl, which had slipped in under the tiles of the loft, had for long had her dwelling there, thus taking "History" and "Theology" under her wing.

Removals effected from public libraries by the caretakers are very difficult, and consequently relatively infrequent. The curator always has some assistant, whose vigilance it would be necessary to elude or whose complicity would have to be bought. Thefts effected by readers are also not at all easy, and, considering the number of readers, they are very rare. Everywhere the most minute precautions are taken to baffle thieves. Every work which comes into a public library, whatever it may be and from whatever source, whether purchased, given, or taken in exchange, is, as soon as received, entered in the register, marked with a number corresponding with this entry, and stamped with the stamp of the establishment. This last impression, which is in indelible ink, is made in several places, two at least, on the title-page to begin with, then on another page, which is always the same in each respective library. If the plates or illustrations are bound up with the volume, it is usual to stamp each one of them; and in addition very often the binding bears on the sides the arms of the library. How many almost indestructible tokens, therefore, has the thief to get rid of if he wishes to sell the stolen goods? But, even supposing the expunging and erasing to have been effected with the greatest skill, where is the dealer in old books, who at the moment of purchase, in turning over the leaves, will not detect some trace of the operations? And what trouble, what care, labor, time, what ingenuity, to achieve more or less successfully these erasures and suppressions!

Lately a wretched clerk was detected by a bookseller to whom he offered a work purloined from the Sainte Geneviève Library, a "Traité de Machines à Vapeur." He had effaced—God knows at what pains! the four marks of this establishment—that is to say, the monogram on the binding, the stamp on the title-page, on page 41, and on the last page—and thought himself safe from discovery. He had not observed, however, that the treatise was composed of two volumes bound in one; he had, therefore, not erased the stamp from the title-page nor from page 4 of the second volume, and these marks, striking the notice of the bookseller, betrayed the theft immediately.

STRUGGLES OF A BOOK AGAINST TAXATION.

In June, 1833, Charles Knight began the publication of the "Penny Cyclopedia" in numbers and monthly parts. At the time it was issued there was nothing of the kind in the English language, and the value and importance of the book was very great, and Charles Knight must be regarded as the father of modern cheap literature on account of this and other business ventures. The attitude of the British Government at that time toward literature, according to the Scientific American, certainly did not tend to the multiplication of works. The "Cyclopedia" was begun in 1833 and was completed in 1846, and the result to the originator was a loss of $150,000. This loss was practically caused by the excessive taxation of the British Government, and the story of its publication is interesting now as showing how printed matter was discriminated against in those days. The quantity of paper required to produce a single copy, was two reams, which weighed 35 pounds. At the time when its publication was begun an excise duty of six cents per pound was collected on all paper. Of the entire edition 20,000 reams paid this duty, which amounted to about $42,000, and the remaining 30,000 reams paid a reduced duty of three cents per pound, which amounted to $32,000, so that the total duty was not far from $75,000. In addition, a duty was charged on the millboards employed in binding the volumes and on the wrappers for the monthly parts, so that, with interest and various losses caused by stocks on hand at the time the paper duty was reduced, the total amount of duty paid on the work was between $150,000 and $160,000, and the loss to the publisher was just about the same amount.

THE SIX BEST-SELLING BOOKS IN APRIL.

According to the Bookman, the six books which have sold best in the order of demand during the month are:

1. David Harum. Westcott. D. Appleton & Co.
2. Day's Work. Kipling. Doubleday & McClure Co.
3. Aylwin. Watts-Dunton. Dodd, Mead & Co.
4. When Knighthood was in Flower. Caskoden. Bowen-Merrill Co.
5. Red Rock. Page. Charles Scribner's Sons.
6. Mr. Dooley in Peace and War. Dunne. Small, Maynard & Co.

It is said that the sales of "David Harum" are averaging nearly 1500 a day.

THE KIPLING COPYRIGHT SUITS.

THE taking of testimony in the suit brought by Kipling against G. P. Putnam's Sons was not resumed. The testimony was taken on April 27, because the witnesses were going to Europe and it was necessary to get their statements before they went. Mr. Watt, the literary agent, sailed on April 29, and Mr. Kipling's father is going to the northern part of this country for a short tour before sailing for Europe. It is not known when the case will be brought before a jury. It is expected that it will come up at the October term of the court. If Mr. Kipling's health permits of his testifying before then, his testimony will be taken; otherwise it will be taken in October.

A perpetual injunction protecting the copyright of Rudyard Kipling's poem, "The White Man's Burden," was granted April 29 by Judge Kohlsaat, in the Circuit Court at Chicago, against the publishing firm of F. B. Whipple & Co. It was charged by Mr. Kipling and his publishers that the defendant had published and circulated his poem in a pamphlet without permission. By the order of the Court the defendant is obliged to surrender as many copies of the poem as he can recover.

LITTLE-HOLT LIBEL SUIT DISMISSED.

JUDGE COWING in the Court of General Sessions, New York, on April 28, dismissed the indictment against Prof. Nicholas Murray Butler, editor, and Henry Holt and Charles Holt, publishers, of the Educational Review, which was alleged to have criminally libelled Joseph J. Little, President of the Board of Education, last February, by referring to him as a "fine old educational mastodon." The indictment was dismissed on the ground that the legal evidence before the grand jury does not prove that alleged crime was committed within the jurisdiction of the court.

AUTHORS ASK FOR REDUCTION OF POSTAGE ON THEIR MSS.

THE SOCIETY OF AMERICAN AUTHORS has started a movement to procure the passage of an act of Congress for the reduction of postage on authors' manuscripts, to send them as second instead of first-class mail. The bill is to come up at the next session of Congress. If this law is enacted the charge for authors' manuscripts will be placed on an equality with other merchandise. In England manuscript goes at third-class rates. It costs four cents to send a manuscript in England that here would cost sixteen cents.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE regular monthly dinner of The Booksellers' League will be given at the New Amsterdam, 265 Fourth Avenue, S. E. corner of Twenty-first Street, New York, on Wednesday evening, May 10, at 6.30 o'clock sharp. Mr. E. H. Mullin, a well-known writer, will deliver an address on the occasion on "English Novelists of the Second Rank, 1850–1875." Members are requested to notify Cass Richardson, at E. P. Dutton & Co.'s, 31 West Twenty-third Street, not later than the 8th inst., otherwise no provision will be made for them. Extra tickets may be had at $1 each.

NOTES OF ENGLISH AUCTION SALES.

AT Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's London auction-rooms there was sold on April 25, for the large sum of £510, one of the two copies known of "The Troublesome Raigne of John, King of England," 1591, the other copy being in the Capell collection, Trinity College, Cambridge, England. Bale's "Kynge John," a manuscript play of about 1560, is thought to have been used by the anonymous author of the "Troublesome Raigne," which, once attributed to Shakespeare, is now believed to be the work on which he based his "King John," the first genuine text of which appeared in the First Folio, 1623. Collier says that Shakespeare converted the two parts of the "Troublesome Raigne" into one drama, and, in many of its main features, followed the story, not as he knew it in history, but as it was fixed in popular belief. A facsimile of the title-page of the "Troublesome Raigne" was given in Halliwell's folio edition of Shakespeare, volume viii., page 276, and also in Winsor's "Original Quartos and Folios of Shakespeare," plate 20. The Capell copy, which was long since removed beyond the reach of all collectors, is a fine one. The copy, sold last week, according to the New York Times, lacks the title-page to the first part, the leaf to the "Gentleman Readers" is cut round and mounted, a corner of B 4, first part, is one-sided, A 4 and B 1, second part, are remargined, and the text of these leaves is rubbed. A few headlines also are cut into. Rumor says that the collector who secured the present copy is Marsden J. Perry, of Providence, who possesses the Halliwell Shakespeare collection, one of two copies known of the "Venus and Adonis" of 1636, and other precious things.

On April 27 Sotheby's sold an important collection of the minor works of R. L. Stevenson, many of which are but rarely seen. These were given by the author to his mother and are being sold by order of her executor. The most noticeable entries in the catalogue comprise a copy of the original unpublished leaflet edition of "Kidnapped," "Father Damien," the original Sydney edition, 1890, the scarce "Notice of a New Form of Intermittent Light for Lighthouses," 1871 (four copies,) several copies of "The Pentland Rising," 1866, "Black Canyon," an extremely scarce brochure of four leaves, printed by the author at Davos-Platz, and the single leaf of the "advertisement" of the same pamphlet, which, if anything, is scarcer still. It has been said that one of those Davos pamphlets, a little four-page pamphlet lettered "The Marguerite, Lawks! What a beautiful flower!! T. S." is unique, and in the collection of a well-known London amateur, but no fewer than eight other copies figure in the catalogue. The "T. S." stands for Thomas Stevenson, the author's father, and Robert Louis used to say that it was the only "poetry" he was ever guilty of. It is curious that collectors should be prepared to pay such high prices for trifles which have only a sentimental interest. Among the other entries in this catalogue we notice "The Graver and the Pen," "A Martial Elegy for some Lead Soldiers," and "Moral Emblems."

Sotheby's sold on May 1 and following days that portion of the remarkable collection of ancient MSS. made by the late Earl of Ashburnham known as the "Appendix," which was sold en bloc by the Earl to a gentleman by whose instructions they were offered for sale. The MSS. (catalogued into 177 lots) were mostly on vellum and more or less illuminated, and extended from the eighth to the seventeenth centuries, with two or three quite modern. The bulk of them, however, were the work of scribes of the thirteenth to the sixteenth centuries. In some cases the documents were bound in old pigskin or leather and boards, but the bindings were not generally contemporaneous with the writing. The last lot was a somewhat late copy of Wycliffe's Bible, in double columns of about sixty lines, written in the early part of the fifteenth century and known as the "Bramhall MS." On one of the originally blank pages is this note: "This book I will (God willing) leave for an heireloome to my right heiress of Bramhall.—William Davenporte, 1620." It was sold by one of the heirs, and was the last MS. bought by the late Earl of Ashburnham. It fetched at the sale this week $8750. There were also Latin Bibles of the eleventh, thirteenth, and fourteenth centuries, a New Testament and Psalter of the thirteenth century, and the Four Gospels of the twelfth century, besides several Missals, Books of Hours, and Offices of various early dates.

OBITUARY NOTES.

EDWARD R. PELTON died suddenly at Lakewood, N. J., on the 2d inst., aged 58 years. We must defer until another issue an extended account of Mr. Pelton's career as a publisher and bookseller.

EUGENE BURRITT MYERS, the senior partner of the law publishing firm of E. B. Myers & Co., of Chicago, died in that city April 19. He was born in Schoback, N. Y., in 1833. He went to Chicago early in life, and in 1860 established the firm of E. B. Myers & Co., which succeeded to the business of D. B. Cooke & Co.

FRIEDRICH KARL CHRISTIAN LUDWIG BÜCHNER, author of "Kraft und Stoff" (Force and Matter,) died at Darmstadt, Hesse-Darmstadt, on the 1st inst. Dr. Büchner was born at Darmstadt, March 28, 1824, and studied medicine at Giessen, Strasburg, Würzburg, and Vienna. After practicing his profession for some years in his native city he settled at Tübingen as a private lecturer and assistant clinical professor. In 1855 he published "Kraft und Stoff," setting forth an atomistic and materialistic view of the universe, which raised such a storm in Germany that he was obliged to resign his position in the university and return to his private practice. His book had great influence in its day as a popular exposition of the ideas of modern materialism. He wrote many other works of the same character—"Natur und Geist," "The Darwinian Theory," "The Idea of God and Its Meaning To-Day," "The Power of Heredity," "Future Life and Modern Science," and "The Book of Long Life." He was a brother of George Büchner, the poet Herwegh's friend; of Louisa Büchner, the novelist, and of Prof. Alexander Büchner, the literary historian. Dr. Büchner's fame rests on his popularizing works on materialistic philosophy at a time when the ideas were not accepted as subjects of general discussion even in Germany.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

POULTNEY BIGELOW is continuing his history of Germany, beginning with 1815, where his already published work left the subject of his study.

DR. JAMES MARTINEAU on April 21 reached his ninety-fifth birthday. It is nine years since his last book, "The Seat of Authority in Religion," was published; his first work, "The Rationale of Religious Inquiry," was published in 1836.

JOKAI, the Hungarian novelist, is preparing to show at the Paris Exhibition a copy of every edition of his works that has appeared in any language. A special pavilion will contain these books—not a small one, by the way, for this author has written over three hundred novels, and some of them have been translated into every European language.

PROF. J. L. WORTMAN has been chosen by the Yale Corporation to succeed the late Prof. O. C. Marsh as Professor of Paleontology and curator of the scientific collection in Peabody Museum. Dr. Wortman was born in Oregon City, Oregon, August 25, 1856. Dr. Wortman is the author of numerous bulletins published by the American Museum of Natural History, at New York, where he has acted as Assistant Curator of Vertebrate Paleontology since 1891. "The Ganodonta and Their Relationship to the Edentata" (1897) is one of the most important of these publications. It goes into the subject of the origin of the entire group of edentata, and is probably Dr. Wortman's best piece of scientific work. He contributed in 1883 to the Revue Scientifique of Paris a series of papers on "The Origin of the Horse." He has written many works on paleontological subjects. His connection with the American Museum of Natural History will in all probability continue until the completion of the usual summer explorations in the West. It is expected that Dr. Wortman will furnish the treatise on the fossil bones of the great reptiles, which his predecessor was working at up to his death. Dr. Wortman had already entered into an agreement to assist Professor Marsh in the preparation of this work for the United States Geological Survey.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

EDOUARD ROUVEYRE, Paris, the well-known editor and publisher of "Connaissances Nécessaires à un Bibliophile," is now bringing out a fifth edition of this celebrated book with many critical notices and bibliographic documents which he has been collecting for years. He has also collected illustrations on all subjects connected with printing, bookmaking, cataloguing, etc., and the new edition of his book will run into ten volumes. The first, which is now ready, deals with the origin of books, with amateurs, bibliophiles, and bibliomaniacs, the establishment of libraries, the preservation and housing of books. Beginning with April a volume is to appear every month. Each volume will be complete in itself with special title. (Pt. 1, xxiv.+176 p. 8°, pap., 6 francs.)

PUTTKAMMER & MÜHLBRECHT, Berlin, have issued in one volume, with comprehensive index and statistical prefatory matter, the twelve numbers of their Allgemeine Bibliographie der Staats- und Rechtswissenschaften, under the title of "Uebersicht der gesammten staats- und rechtswissenschaftlichen Litteratur des Jahres 1898, zusammengestellt von Otto Mühlbrecht." We note that the work appears for the thirty-first time. Each year this work has gained in fulness, and consequently in usefulness and importance. (30 + 274 p. [4147 titles,] 8°, pap., 6 marks.) Mr. Mühlbrecht has in preparation an enlarged edition of his "Wegweiser durch die neuere Litteratur der Rechts- und Staatswissenschaften, für die Praxis bearbeitet." The new volume will embrace the literature from 1892 to 1899 inclusive.

THE FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA has issued No. 2 of its bibliographic Bulletin, devoted to a "Descriptive Catalogue of the Series of Works known as the Library of Old Authors," compiled by John Thomson, librarian. In style and arrangement this is modelled upon the preceding bulletin, which catalogued and indexed the works of Walter Scott. The sixty-one volumes of the "Library of Old Authors" are catalogued alphabetically by authors, with full biographic and descriptive annotations, while a 24-page two-column index gives clue to all persons, places, and subjects alluded to in the entries and notes. The whole is a revelation of the variety and extent of the information concealed in this series, while in details of execution the bulletin is most creditable to its compiler and to the library. (2+70 p. 8°.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish at once Justin McCarthy's eagerly expected Reminiscences.

F. TENNYSON NEELY, New York, will publish shortly Dr. Madison C. Peters's remarkable lectures, entitled "Justice to the Jew, the story of what he has done for the world."

"THE Satchel Guide for the Vacation Tourist in Europe," published for twenty-seven years anonymously, makes its appearance for 1899 with Dr. W. J. Rolfe's name as editor.

C. DE HASBROUCK, 57 Bromfield Street, Boston, will publish in the fall "Two Summer Island Papers," a new book about Bermuda, "in effect a literary history of the islands," by J. C. L. Clark.

DODD, MEAD & CO. have secured a biographical work of considerable literary importance in "The Autobiography of Mrs. Margaret Oliphant, 1828–1897." It will probably not be published until the fall.

WILLIAM B. HADLEY, New York, has brought out a new fine edition, in four volumes, of "The Tatler," edited with introduction and notice by George A. Aitken, author of "The Life of Richard Steele," etc.

GINN & CO. have nearly ready in their College Series of Greek Authors, "The Hippolytus of Euripides," edited, with introduction, notes, and critical appendix, by Professor J. E. Harry, of Georgetown (Ky.) College.

MARLIER, CALLANAN & CO., Boston, have in press an interesting pamphlet on "The Friars in the Philippines," by Rev. Ambrose Coleman, O.P. The matter first appeared as separate articles in an English magazine, and attracted considerable attention.

D. VAN NOSTRAND COMPANY have just published a work on "The Purification of Sewage," giving a brief account of the scientific principles of sewage purification and their practical application, by Dr. Sidney Barwise. The volume contains several illustrations and diagrams.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish shortly the fourth and fifth volumes of the Murray edition of Byron's works. One volume will contain Byron's correspondence from 1814 to 1816, and the other a portion of his verse beginning with the "Thyrza" poems and "Childe Harold."

THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION OF THE REFORMED (DUTCH) CHURCH IN AMERICA, 25 E. Twenty-second Street, New York, announces for immediate publication a new edition, with map, of "Forty Years in South China," being a biography of the late Rev. J. V. N. Talmage, by the Rev. J. G. Fagg.

ASSEMBLYMAN O'CONNOR seems ambitious to go down to posterity as the friend of the school-book publisher. After July 1, 1899, he wants all school-books that have been in use in Greater New York for six months or more to be burned. This semi-annual holocaust is, he declares, in the interest of health and not of the school-book publishers.

FREDERICK WARNE & CO. announce a work entitled "The Romance of Wild Flowers," by Edward Step, which is to be the first volume of The Library of Natural History Romance; "The Day of Recompense," a new novel by Silas K. Hocking, whose latest novel, "God's Outcast," is now in its seventh edition; and "Fortune's Tangled Skein," a novel of the detective character, by Jeanette H. Walworth, an American writer.

As the teaching of Spanish is receiving some attention at the present moment, Isaac Pitman & Sons, Ltd., announce the early publication of several volumes of a new series of their "Rapid" Modern Language Manuals. The first will be a Spanish edition of the "Tourist's Vade Mecum," on the same lines as their French and German handbooks. The subjects of photography and cycling will be enlarged and brought up to date.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish shortly a new book by David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Stanford Junior University, entitled "Imperial Democracy," which is said to present a series of striking studies of the subjects so much discussed at present. They will publish at once "A Double Thread," a new novel by Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, author of "Concerning Isabel Carnaby." The new novel deals for the most part with English country-house life.

HENRY CAREY BAIRD & Co., 810 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, will publish on the 10th inst. the fourth edition (revised throughout and enlarged by about 310 pages,) of "The Prospector's Field Book and Guide in the Search for and the Easy Determination of Ores and other Useful Minerals," by Prof. H. S. Osborn, LL.D. This edition, which has been revised with the greatest care, is believed to be a complete and thoroughly reliable guide to the intelligent searcher after ores and other useful minerals, including gems and gem stones. The volume has been illustrated by 58 engravings.

MOSES KING, New York, has recently published a sumptuously illustrated volume, entitled "Notable New Yorkers of 1896–1899," which properly form a companion volume to "King's Handbook of New York City." The volume is unique from a literary point of view, inasmuch as the text proper consists of 2337 portraits with the name and a condensed biography of each person represented. The portraits are exact reproductions of photographs from life. More than 1500 original portraits were made specially for the collection. The portraits are arranged mainly in a succession of groups, and are fully indexed, by name and by topics. The work will have more than temporary interest, and its value will undoubtedly increase with years.

R. H. RUSSELL will publish on May 10 the long-expected "Eden vs. Whistler—The Baronet and the Butterfly," J. McNeil Whistler's book, promised for last fall, but kept back by Mr. Whistler, who objected to the great publicity given the book by advance notices. About May 28 will be ready Charles Henry Meltzer's English version of Gerhart Hauptmann's "Die Versunkene Glocke," (The Sunken Bell,) which is next season to be added to E. H. Sothern's diversified repertoire. This publisher has also just ready "The Peace Cross Book," containing the order of services gone through on the occasion of raising the Peace Cross on St. Alban's Hill, Washington, on the proposed site of the Protestant Episcopal Cathedral. The address of the Bishop of Washington and of President McKinley are included in the pretty little volume.

FOREIGN NOTES.

GIBBON'S autobiography is to be edited with introduction, elaborate notes, and an index by Dr. Birkbeck Hill.

JAMES BOWDEN, London, will publish this summer "The Musical Memoirs of Sir Arthur Sullivan," written by Arthur Lawrence.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & Co. will publish shortly the exhaustive "History of Free Thought" upon which John M. Robertson has long been working. Free thought in India, Persia, Greece, and Rome, under Christianity and down to modern times has been carefully studied by the author.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & Co. are about to publish "The Cathedral Builders," by Mr. Baxter, who writes on Italian art under the pseudonym of "Leader Scott." The work will be divided into four sections, treating respectively of the Romano-Lombard, the Romanesque and the Italian, Gothic and Renaissance architects.

NOVELS are rapidly running into specialist treatises. Rider Haggard's latest is all about vaccination, and a female dipsomaniac is the heroine of Mrs. Atherton's "A Daughter of the Vine." All diseases, it is clear, will soon have each its "study" in a romance, and, as an English alarmist suggests, we may expect such titles as "The Elephantiasis of Esther Egerton," "The Sequelæ of Irene's Influenza," and "Chloe the Chloralist."

GEORGE ALLEN, London, is publishing in portfolios two sets of plates associated with Dickens, which, in some mysterious way, have been lost for twenty years. They are steel engravings by Onwhyn, one of the original illustrators of Dickens, who used the pseudonyms of "Peter Palette" and "Sam Weller." The first set of thirty-two pictures was evidently intended to supplement those in "The Pickwick Papers," and the other set of thirty-eight those in "Nicholas Nickleby." In their present form they appear on India proof paper.

C. J. CLAY & SONS, of the Cambridge [Eng.] University Press Warehouse, will publish at once the first part of the "Fauna Hawaiiensis, or the Zoölogy of the Sandwich Isles," being results of the explorations instituted by the joint Committee appointed by the Royal Society and the British Association, and carried on with the assistance of those bodies and of the Trustees of the Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum at Honolulu. This work is published by the Committee and edited by their secretary, David Sharp, Curator in Zoölogy of the Museum of the University of Cambridge. When complete it will probably consist of two volumes, as it is intended to give an account, more or less full, of the whole of the land-fauna of the islands. This fauna is of very great interest, not only from its geographical isolation, but also on account of its being rapidly extirpated by the progress of cultivation, and the introduction of foreign species which prey upon, or consume the food of, the original natives—many of the latter being already extinct. This first part will include the "Hymenoptera Aculeata" (bees, wasps, and ants.) of which about 200 species, mostly undescribed, have been obtained, and has been prepared by R. C. L. Perkins, who has carried out the explorations under the direction of the Committee and Prof. Auguste Forel. For the remainder the Committee is receiving the assistance of numerous British and foreign naturalists, and the parts will appear as soon as they can be completed.

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

MAY 10, 11, 3 P.M.—Miscellaneous. (622 lots.)—Bangs.

MAY 15-17, 3 P.M.—The 6th and final sale of the stock of Geo. H Richmond & Co., including rare Americana, bibliography, rare engravings, etc. (991 lots.)—Bangs.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

HAVE READY TO-DAY:

A SYSTEM OF ETHICS.

By FRIEDRICH PAULSEN. Translated and edited by Frank Thilly, Professor of Philosophy in the University of Missouri. 8vo, $3.00 net.

Professor Paulsen's work is a guide for all persons interested in ethics as a practical science of conduct. The first book surveys moral philosophies from Greek times to the present. The second reviews the fundamental questions of ethics, answering them in each case with soundness of judgment and common sense. The third defines virtues and duties. The passages treating of modern pessimism, hedonism, and Nietzscheanism, suicide, temperance, the lie of necessity, and other applications of ethical principles, are bound to attract as much attention in this country as they have already excited in Germany.

A THEORY OF REALITY.

An Essay in Metaphysical System upon the Basis of Human Cognitive Experience. By GEORGE TRUMBULL LADD, Professor of Philosophy in Yale University. 8vo, $4.00.

This new volume by Professor George Trumbull Ladd brings to its close the series of books in which the author has dealt with the general problem of reality—things and minds—and the possibility and the validity of knowledge. The former volumes were "Philosophy of Knowledge" and "Philosophy of Mind."

ACROSS THE CAMPUS.

A Story of College Life. By CAROLINE M. FULLER. 12mo, $1.50.

Miss Fuller's book is a story of the college life of a group of girls, and reflects the atmosphere of the place with extraordinary fidelity, and with delightful humor, enthusiasm, and gaiety of spirits. The story carries the girls through the four years' course and deals with the gradual development of their characters in that period, as affected by the social side of college life and as revealed by their relations with each other.

A TEXAS RANGER.

By N. A. JENNINGS. 12mo, $1.25.

The true story of surprising adventures on the Mexican border by a young man who enlisted in the early eighties in a company of the famous Texas rangers. The book is as thrilling as a border romance, and in addition is a hitherto unpublished record of a body of troops who were the prototypes of the Rough Riders.

A CIVILIAN ATTACHÉ.

A Story of a Frontier Army Post. By HELEN DAWES BROWN. The Ivory Series. 16mo, 75 cents.

A charmingly told love story, with a series of pictures of life at a frontier army post on the plains as a background.

JUST PUBLISHED:

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

A Political, Geographical, Ethnological, Social, and Commercial History. By JOHN FOREMAN, F.R.G.S. Second edition, revised and enlarged. With 3 maps and 32 illustrations. Large 8vo, $5.00.

Mr. Foreman is undoubtedly the highest living authority on the Philippines. He was consulted as an expert by our Peace Commissioners at Paris. His work is full, accurate, exhaustive, and authoritative, and brought down to date. It is indispensable to any one wishing to visit the Philippines. Besides containing the most comprehensive historical account of the islands in English, the book treats in detail of its commercial and agricultural opportunities, its mineral wealth, the character and disposition of the natives, and gives the itineraries of 22 journeys through the interior of the islands. The additional matter in this new edition, which enlarges the volume to nearly double its former size, includes the history of the Naval Battle of Cavite, the surrender of Manila, and the occupation by the United States.

THE THIRD
International Congress of Publishers,
LONDON, 1899.

President, Mr. JOHN MURRAY. Secretary, Mr. EDWARD G. FAIRHOLME.

The Congress will take place at Stationers' Hall, London, E. C., on June 7th, 8th and 9th.

Delegates and other invited guests are earnestly requested to send in their replies and subscriptions (£1) at the earliest date possible to the Secretary, together with the titles of any papers to be read or questions to be discussed.

English will be the official language and all papers must be written or translated into English, but French and German will be permitted in the discussions, and for this purpose it has been decided to obtain the services of an interpreter for both these languages.

The Worshipful Company of Stationers has expressed its intention of giving a dinner at Stationers' Hall, on Wednesday, June 7th, to the delegates and guests of the Congress, and as the space at its disposal is somewhat limited it is of great importance that the list of adherents should be completed at once.

The Secretary will send copies of the programme, together with all papers relating to the Congress, to the delegates and guests attending the Congress, and he is prepared, should such be the wish of any guest, to arrange for hotel accommodation for the guests during the time of the Congress.

EDWARD G. FAIRHOLME,

Secretary to the Organizing Committee.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To be Published May 16

A New Story by the author of "By Right of Sword."

A DASH FOR A THRONE.

By ARTHUR W. MARCHMONT.

Large 12mo, $1.25.

A new novel by the author of that popular story, "By Right of Sword," will be welcomed by all lovers of good fiction. The scene is laid in Bavaria, mostly in the neighborhood of Munich, and the plot centres around the throne of the late King Ludwig, known as the "Mad King," whose eccentricities were the talk of Europe a few years ago. The characters, one of whom is the present Emperor of Germany, are excellently drawn, and the interest of the reader is sustained from start to finish.

The publishers are pleased to note that the advance orders bid fair to exhaust the first large edition in advance of publication.

The Market-Place

By HAROLD FREDERIC,

Author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," "March Hares," etc.

The last work of the greatest American author of this decade.

A story of finance and business schemes for business men and of social struggles and English country life for women.

It deals in part with a phase of English life that has no counterpart in this country and that was so fully exposed in the Hooley scandals. It compares so closely with these disclosures that recently shook London to the centre, that it would seem almost as if the talented author had the gift of prophecy.

The story represents the best work of Mr. Frederic. It holds the reader enthralled until the end.

The book's merit, coupled with the fact that it is Mr. Frederic's last book, should ensure it a tremendous sale.

"Summer Reading."

To Retail Dealers:

THE SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for twenty-one years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers in working up business during the slow summer season, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The twenty-second issue, with an attractive cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

☞ Orders for imprint editions at subscription rates should be sent in at once, as the quantity is limited.

Terms for Editions with Imprint:

100 copies,	$3 50
500 "	15 00

Directions for shipping should be given with the order. If sent by mail, postage will be charged extra.

RAPHAEL

In his short life of thirty-seven years (1483–1520), condensed an amount of work that has been the marvel of three centuries. In composition and drawing he has never had an equal, and Jean François Millet, the greatest of modern idealists, said that the Raphael drawings for his paintings were the ne plus ultra of design in its best sense. The volume on Raphael in Knackfuss' brings out that Raphael must be given, if not the supreme rank which his contemporaries gave him, at least a place in the front rank among the half-dozen who have endowed art with a higher nobility. Among them all he stands first for the sense of beauty, and next to Michelangelo for refinement; first as academician and composer, and side by side with Giotto for fertility of invention. The comparison between the modern type of painter who holds the mirror up to nature and thinks more of his brush-work and means of expression than of his conception and the classic painters to whom the beautiful idea was first, gives suggestive thoughts for many who perhaps can hardly appreciate the paintings artistically.

MONOGRAPHS ON ARTISTS

Every bookseller will find it profitable to keep the volumes of this series in stock. There are now ready the volumes on Raphael and Holbein. Others are in preparation. Each, profusely illustrated, $1.50.

NEW BOOKS

Children of the Mist

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS, author of "Down Dartmoor Way," "Lying Prophets," etc. 8vo, $1.50.

Mr. R. D. Blackmore, the author of "Lorna Doone," writes of this book: "I was simply astonished at the beauty and power of this novel. A pleasure is in store for many, and literature is enriched with a wholesome and genial and noble tale."

George Borrow

The Life, Writings, and Correspondence of George Borrow, 1803–1881. Based on Official and other Authentic Sources. By WILLIAM I. KNAPP, Ph.D., LL.D. With 22 illustrations. In two vols. 8vo. $6.00.

George Borrow was born in East Dereham, Norfolk, England, in 1803. He was noted for his eccentricities, his fondness for the gypsies, his passion for athletic exercises, his scorn for the gentilities of life, and his vigorous advocacy of the doctrines of the Church of England. Borrow was the author of many works and translations, the most important of these being "Lavengro" and "The Bible in Spain."

Gladstone

Life of William Ewart Gladstone. By SIR WEMYSS REID. In two vols. With over 200 illustrations. 8vo, per set, $4.50.

Mr. Gladstone's life was so full and his interests and work were so diverse that the editor of this biography, Sir Wemyss Reid, felt the expediency of dividing the many phases of his subject's career and character for treatment among different writers, each the person most fitted by association with Mr. Gladstone or by knowledge of public affairs to discuss the subject treated by him. In the editing the various contributions have been welded into a harmonious and well-balanced biography. Among the contributors are Canon MacColl, G. W. E. Russell, Henry W. Lucy, Arthur J. Butler, Alfred F. Robbins, F. W. Hirst, and others.

The People of England in the 19th Century

Vol. II. now ready

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY, M.P. In two vols., Nos. 53 and 54 in The Story of the Nations Series. Fully illustrated. 12mo, each $1.50.

"The Story of England's Nineteenth Century" is a picture, rather than a record, of England's development in all the arts of peace since the close of the great war with Napoleon. Since that time a complete revolution has taken place in all that relates to applied and industrial science. Railways, ocean steamships, the electric telegraph, the submarine cable, the telephone—all these are the growth of this wonderful century, which has done more for the practical movement of civilization than all the centuries that went before.

The Most Famous of Legal Biographies.

KENYON.

The Lives of the Chief Justices of England.

By LORD CAMPBELL.

A New and Extensively Annotated Edition by James Cockcroft.

ILLUSTRATIONS. A striking feature of this edition of Lord Campbell's splendid classic is the extensive illustration. Each volume contains as a frontispiece a colored plate representing one of the best known of the Chief Justices attired in his robe of office. Scattered through the volumes are numerous full-page portraits and many pictures of famous places.

The Notes are principally biographical and historical, and many valuable side-lights are thrown upon persons and events mentioned by the distinguished author.

In Paper, Print, and Binding the work has been given a worthy setting. The type is large and clear, the margins are wide, and the binding is sumptuous.

COMPLETE IN FIVE VOLUMES, SIZE 10½ x 8.

In cloth (red and white), $5.00 per volume.
In half calf or half morocco, $6.50 per volume.

Of Lord Campbell's great work at this day it can be necessary to say but little. For many years it has been a classic of legal literature and has placed its learned author in the front rank of biographers. Although written by a lawyer and primarily for lawyers it has always been of great interest to every student of English history. The present edition, both mechanically and textually, undoubtedly surpasses any yet published. A complete index makes it valuable as a work of reference apart from its great literary merit and interest.

Booksellers who cater to the interest of the best bookbuyers—the legal profession—will not fail to place this work on their counters.

The price to the trade will be made known on application to

NOTES IN SEASON.

HERBERT S. STONE & CO. will publish on the 17th inst. "The Carcellini Emerald," a collection of six stories, by Mrs. Burton Harrison.

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish at once an account of the Jackson-Harmsworth Expedition to Franz-Josef Land, entitled "A Thousand Days in the Arctic," by F. G. Jackson. Mr. Jackson, it will be remembered, was the first to greet Nansen after his escape from the frozen North.

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. announce among their first preparations for the fall two new series of books in which they have included many of their most successful standard publications. The Children's Friend Series will consist of handy illustrated volumes, choicely printed and attractively bound, containing works by Louisa Alcott, Susan Coolidge, Laura E. Richards, Louise Chandler Moulton, Juliana H. Ewing, A. G. Plympton, Helen Hunt Jackson, and others. The Golden Books will be a collection of 12mo volumes devoted to the books of Dumas, Hugo, George Sand, Sienkiewicz, Jane Austen, Charles Lever, Charles Lamb, Philip Gilbert Hamerton, etc., finely printed, with frontispieces in photogravure.

THOMAS NELSON & SONS have issued a new series of Self-pronouncing Teachers', Reference and Text Bibles, which are marked according to the latest revision of Webster's Dictionary. As these markings are known and taught in many of our schools, they will prove helpful in the pronunciation of many of the difficult words in the Bible. They also announce a new edition of the Minion 16mo Reference Bible, printed on superfine India paper, which in this size of type is only five-eighths of an inch thick; a handsome edition of the Long Primer New Testament, in French, with 200 illustrations, entitled "Le Nouveau Testament Illustré"; also, new editions of the English 8vo and the Small Pica square 16mo Testaments. As the editorial labors of the revisers are approaching completion, the "American Standard Edition of the Revised Bible" will also soon be published.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. publish to-day a volume of stories by Mary Hartwell Catherwood, entitled "The Queen of the Swamp and other Plain Americans," which describe life in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois during successive stages of the present century; "Tiverton Tales," twelve stories of rural life in New England, by Alice Brown, author of "By Oak and Thorn;" "The Life and Work of Thomas Dudley, Second Governor of Massachusetts," by Augustine Jones, who incidentally gives much of the history of the beginnings of the Commonwealth; also, "Economic Aspects of the Liquor Problem," by John Koren, containing the results of "an investigation made under the direction of Professors W. O. Atwater, Henry W. Farnam, J. F. Jones, Doctors Z. R. Brockway, John Graham Brooks, E. R. L. Gould, and Hon. Carroll D. Wright, a sub-committee of the Committee of Fifty to investigate the liquor problem," with an introduction by Professor Henry W. Farnam, and many tables of statistics.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish at once "Wordsworth and the Coleridges, with other Memories Literary and Political," a volume of reminiscences by Ellis Yarnall, whose memory carries the reader back to Lafayette's visit to Philadelphia in 1824. In 1849 he visited Wordsworth, and he enjoyed a life-long friendship with Sir John Taylor Coleridge and Lord Coleridge. He talked with Gladstone and John Bright and Charles Francis Adams in the wake of the Civil War. His recollections of the Tractarian movement and his talks with Keble have a special interest for the churchman, while the student of nineteenth century politics will find much that is important and many things that are new in his memories of Sumner, Lincoln, and Gladstone, W. E. Forster, John Stuart Mill, and John Bright. They have also nearly ready "Side Lights on American History," by Henry W. Elson, lecturer on American history in the University Extension Society of Philadelphia; and W. H. Mallock's new novel, "Tristram Lacy, or, the Individualist."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc. is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Atterbury, Anson P. Islam in Africa, its effects, religious, ethical, and social, upon the people of the country; with introd. by F. F. Ellinwood. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 24+208 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1500

A study of Mohammedanism, by the pastor of the Park Presbyterian Church, N. Y. He takes a middle ground between those who view Islam as wholly an imposture, destitute of all true ethics, wholly opposed through all its history to enlightenment, and breathing only cruelty and destruction, and therefore unworthy of serious study, and those who go to the other extreme of laudation, claiming that Islam is a sort of preparatory school by which such countries as Africa, for example, may most successfully be brought to an ultimate civilization.

Baldwin, D: A., M.D. The family pocket homœopathist: a concise manual of homœopathic practice for families and travellers. 3*d ed.* Rochester, N. Y., E. Darrow & Co., 1898. 148 p. 24°, cl., 50 c.; bds., 25 c. [1501

Barwise, Sidney, M.D. The purification of sewage: being a brief account of the scientific principles of sewage purification and their practical application. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1899. 12+150 p. S. cl., $2. [1502

The author, who is Medical Officer of Health to the Derbyshire [England] County Council, says in his preface: "The question of the purification of sewage is dealt with chiefly from a chemical and biological point of view, and in the light of experience gained in the discharge of my duties as the medical officer of health of a large county. I have endeavored to set out in these pages as succinctly as possible, and yet (it is hoped) with sufficient fulness for the purpose in view, the conditions which appear favorable for particular processes for the purification of sewage and their necessary limitations."

Bellord, Ja. (Bp.) Meditations on Christian dogma; with an introductory letter from the Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster. St. Louis, Mo., B. Herder, 1899. 2 v., 40+732 p. 12°, cl., net, $2.50. [1503

Bickerdyke, J: The passing of Prince Rozan: a romance of the sea. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 5+286 p. D. cl., $1. [1504

The incidents are similar to those brought out in the recent Hooley investigations in England, where impecunious peers were paid huge checks for the use of their names as bait in companies of dishonest intent Prince Rozan is the capitalist of these schemes; he lives in London in magnificent style and has a beautiful daughter. He finds himself on the verge of discovery, and invites a number of people, several of whom have it in their power to testify against him, to a yacht voyage to the Arctic seas One of the men is a barrister, who tells the story. It is he who discovers Rozan's intention to make away with the whole party. From here on is a series of thrilling adventures, in which Rozan's mysterious personality is unfolded.

Blaisdell, Etta Austin and Mary Frances. Child life: a first reader. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 127 p. il. sq. 12°, bds., net, 25 c [1505

Britton, Wiley. The civil war on the border: a narrative of military operations in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, and the Indian Territory during the years 1863-65, based upon official reports and observations of the author. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. '98. 21+546 p. O. cl., $3.50. [1506

The first volume of the work, covering the years 1861 and 1862, was published in 1890, and noticed in "Weekly Record" of P. W., June 21, 1890, [960.]

Brown, Helen Dawes. A civilian attaché: a story of a frontier army post. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. 2+161 p. nar. S. (Ivory ser.) cl., 75 c. [1507

A young girl from the east, who spends a summer with an old friend whose husband, an army officer, was stationed at a frontier post, is the "civilian attaché." She goes out "fancy free," but is the heroine of a love-story. The climax comes in the summer of '94, during the Pullman strike around Chicago. Returning home, the heroine's car is stopped by the rioters, and her young hero, called out by the government to protect the trains, performs a dramatic act of bravery.

Charbonnel, Victor. The victory of the will; tr. by Emily Whitney; with an introd. by Lilian Whiting. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. c. 11+331 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1510

In her introduction Lilian Whiting says of this essay: "It is a wonderful plea for living the life of one's own soul; a plea for the development of one's own personality by means of its own inner power and its free will to live. Victor Charbonnel is the Emerson, the Maeterlinck, of France; and his book, which has aroused such enthusiasm there, will touch here the same magnetic thought. It is a clarion call to that nobler life which is just as possible to us as is the ignoble. The moment one will assert his freedom from petty cares, perplexities, troubles, and anxieties, that moment they fall off of themselves."

Chopin, Mrs. Kate. The awakening. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. 2+303 p. D. cl., $1 50. [1511

A Kentucky girl, brought up among strict Presbyterians, had married a Creole speculator, chiefly because her family had actively opposed the marriage because the man was a Catholic. He took her to New Orleans, and when the story opens she is twenty-eight, the mother of two boys, spending her summer at Grand-Isle. In strong contrast is her Creole friend, devoted to husband and children. The descriptions of Creole summer pastimes, the hotel life, the flirtations, chiefly occupy the author. This summer Madame Montpellier awakens to the fact that her indulgent, good-natured husband and her children and home do not satisfy her. Two men stir her emotional nature for a short time. There is a tragical ending.

Diplomat (pseud.) The rise and fall of the United States: a leaf from history, A.D. 2060. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, 1899. c. '98. 205 p. D. buckram, $1. [1514

A prophetic sketch of the future of the United States. Our downfall is to come through the socialistic element, after it has obtained a division of the wealth of the few; this drives capitalists out of the country, brings all business and great enterprises to a standstill for the lack of experienced and skilful leaders, and ruins the country generally. The country divides itself into four independent nations, which war against each other until the race is extinct.

Knapp, W: I. Life, writings, and correspondence of George Borrow, 1803-1881: based on official and authentic sources. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 2 v., 15+376; 8+392 p. pors. il. O. cl., $6. [1543

The author of "The Bible in Spain" and "Lavengro" has for the first time a full and authentic biography. After his death in 1881 Professor Knapp, late of Yale, made a collection of his printed books, the magazines that contained his early fugitive pieces, and the articles that discussed him and his works. Eventually he also secured his papers, the correspondence of half a century and more, his manuscripts, and the scattered remains of his library. From this mass of authentic records it now became possible for the first time, to give a full and reliable account of his origin, his early struggles and employments, his later triumphs, his withdrawal from the "trumpery society of London," and also to explain his disinclination to furnish correct data for his personal history. Chronological bibliography of the writings of George Borrow, 1823-1874 (33 p.). Index.

Parker, Gay. The fight for dominion: a romance of our first war with Spain; il. by G. Bertrand Mitchell. N. Y., E. R. Herrick & Co., [1899.] c. 3+316 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1558

"The fight for dominion" has for one of its prominent characters General Oglethorpe, the first Governor of Georgia, and the scenes of the tale shift from Georgia to Florida, the period being that time when the latter state was under the dominion of Spain. The contest between the Spaniards and the Georgians forms the historical basis of the plot, but a contest equally interesting is that between a Spanish don and an Englishman for the heart and hand of a fair señorita.

Paulsen, F: A system of ethics; ed. and tr., with the author's sanction, from the 4th rev. and enl. ed., by Frank Thilley. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. 18+723 p. O. cl., net, $3. [1559

The author expressly declares that his book was not written for philosophical experts, but for those who are interested in the problems of practical philosophy, and who are in need of some one to guide them in solving the same. The first book surveys moral philosophies from Greek times to the present. The second reviews the fundamental questions of ethics, answering them in each case with soundness of judgment and common sense. The third defines virtues and duties. Modern pessimism, hedonism, and Nietzscheanism, suicide, temperance, and the life of necessity are among the subjects discussed.

Phillpotts, Eden. Children of the mist. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. '98. 5+550 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1560

The author of "Down Dartmoor way" again describes conditions in Devonshire. His descriptions of nature, of superstitions and character are realistic, but full of poetry. Several families are studied during a period of ten years. The hero is a quixotic, hot-tempered young fellow, bent on having his own way, who is constantly getting into trouble with his less honest and more conservative neighbors. His wife suffers much while her husband, through honesty and bravery, finally conquers a place in his little world.

Pierson, Arthur Tappan, D.D. George Müller of Bristol and his witness to a prayer-hearing God; with an introd. by Ja. Wright. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., [1899.] c. 4–462 p. por. O. cl., $1.50. [1561

This work was largely prepared at Bristol, the home of Mr. Müller, and with the co-operation of his family. It covers not only the same period as the four volumes of the "Narrative of the Lord's dealings with George Müller," but also the remainder of his life, from 1885 to 1898. Mr. Müller's son-in-law, Mr. James Wright, says of Dr. Pierson and his book: "He had had exceptional opportunities twenty years ago in the United States, and in later years when visiting Great Britain, for becoming intimately acquainted with Mr. Müller, with the principles on which the Orphanage and other branches of 'The Scriptural Knowledge Institution' were carried on, and with many details of their working. I knew that Dr. Pierson most thoroughly sympathized with these principles, and that he could, therefore, present not merely the external facts and results of Mr. Müller's life and labors, but could and would, by God's help, unfold, with the ardor and force of conviction, the secret springs of that life and of those labors."

Poland, W: The kingdom of Italy and the sovereignty of Rome. St. Louis, Mo., B. Herder, 1899. 42 p. 8°, pap., net, 35 c. [1562

The volume is the work of many hands, the writers having been selected who had special means of dealing authoritatively with particular aspects of Mr. Gladstone's many-sided life and character. Contents: Mr. Gladstone's character and career, a general appreciation by Sir Wemyss Reid; Mr. Gladstone's ancestry and early years, by Alfred F. Robbins; Mr. Gladstone and the Oxford Union Society, by F. W. Hirst; Mr. Gladstone as a scholar, by A. J. Butler; As a Tory, 1832–1841, by F. W. Hirst; As a theologian, by Canon MacColl; Mr. Gladstone and the reform of the tariff, 1841–1846, by F. W. Hirst. Mr. Hirst writes most of the remaining chapters on Gladstone as a Peelite, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, as leader of the House and reformer, his first and second premiership, in relation to home rule, etc., etc.

This story of a crime committed by an unprincipled woman, baffled in winning a man's love, is somewhat similar in detail to a crime that recently occurred in New York City. A gold holder with a package of poisoned powder is sent to a young woman anonymously; she does not taste it herself but offers it to her father, who offers it at the same time to a friend. The two men, after drinking, die instantly. There is a trial of an innocent man, the real murderer being finally discovered.

The Jamesons were the first boarders ever taken in a little New England country-place. They consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Jameson, Mrs. Jameson's mother, two daughters and a son, all characters possessed of strong individualities. They boarded with a character. Mrs. Jameson was up to date, and felt it her duty to instruct the inhabitants of the countryside in all she had learned at clubs and lectures, such as the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, Browning readings, health foods, physical culture, etc.

A collection of studies of child-nature and child life, written with that sympathetic insight into the heart of childhood for which the author is so justly noted. Some of the chapters have appeared as editorials in the magazine Childhood, others in other magazines. They relate to the aims and tastes of the child, religious instincts and ideas, social relations, manner and peculiarities of disposition and temperament. The book is intended quite as much for teachers as for parents.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 13, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

A HALF CENTURY RECORD OF ITALIAN BOOK PRODUCTION.

A REMARKABLE achievement in bibliography has been accomplished by the Associazione Tipografico Libraria Italiana, which between September, 1897, and the present time has completed a bibliography of the books published in Italy during the past fifty years, and has the material in such shape that printing may be begun almost immediately. Many excellent bibliographies of special departments of literature existed in Italy prior to 1897, but in that year it was decided to combine them all in a general bibliography, for which the catalogues of the Italian publishers should furnish a general foundation. Professor Attilio Pagliaini, of the University of Genoa, was put in charge of the gigantic undertaking as chief compiler, responsible to the Association and to a special executive committee who planned the details of publication. Periodicals not intended for scientists or the book trade, the proceedings of parliaments and societies, necrologies, school-books, compilations of literature, etc., are not included in the catalogue. The books are entered under author and title, with the particulars as to editor, if any, and place of publication, publisher or printer, date, number of volumes, size and price. Books out of print will be distinguished by a special mark, thus avoiding much unnecessary correspondence. The plan of the comprehensive index to the great work is not yet quite decided upon.

The years from 1867 to 1899 were covered in the Bollettino published by the Florence Library, making a total of 130,000 titles; by the end of 1899 15,000 more will be added. For the years preceding that period the titles were gathered from all kinds of catalogues of libraries and publishers, and amounted to about 40,000. It is estimated that the new bibliography will contain about 160,000 titles, excluding duplicates, etc. The titles will be so printed that they can be duplicated and used for various purposes in cataloguing libraries, etc. It is hoped that this undertaking will be followed by a catalogue of Italian periodicals, society publications and pamphlets, which are always so difficult to trace bibliographically, and often contain such valuable material for writers on politics, economics, and social history.

THE NEW JAPANESE COPYRIGHT.

A COPY of the new Japanese copyright law, promulgated March, 1899, has just been received by the State Department at Washington. The copyright law is in four chapters of fifty-two articles, the more important ones of which are the following:

CHAPTER I., Rights of authors. Article 1, The author of documents, lectures, drawings and paintings, moulds for engravings, photographs, and other matters belonging to the province of literature, science, and the fine arts, shall have the exclusive right of reproducing his work. The copyright of literary and scientific productions includes the right of translating them, and that of all kinds of theatrical plays and musical notes includes the right of their performance in the public.

Article 2, The copyright can be transferred to another person.

Article 3, The copyright for productions published or exhibited shall remain in effect during the lifetime of the author concerned, and may be continued for thirty years after his death. The copyright of joint productions of many persons may be kept in effect for thirty years from the death of the person who died last.

Article 4, The copyright of posthumous productions may be kept in effect for thirty years from the date of their first publication or exhibition.

Article 5, The copyright in works under nom de plume or in anonymous productions may be kept in effect for thirty years from the date of their publication or exhibition, provided that Article 3 be applied if the true name of the author is registered during the interval.

Article 6. The copyright of works published or exhibited in the name of Government or public offices, schools, temples, shrines, associations, companies, or other bodies shall continue in effect for thirty years from the date of publication or exhibition.

Article 7, The author will lose the right of translating his original works if he does not publish the translation within ten years from the date of publication of his ordinary work. If the author has published the work translated into the language for which he wants to receive protection within the foregoing period, the right of translating into that language will not be lost.

Article 10, The copyright will disappear when there is no successor.

Article 11, The following cannot be made the object of copyright: Legal instructions and Government and public documents; miscellaneous reports, political opinions, or current topics mentioned in newspapers and periodicals; lectures or speeches delivered in open judicial courts, Diet, or political assemblies.

Article 12, The publisher or exhibitor of a nom de plume or anonymous works can hold the right belonging to the author, provided that this is expected if the author has registered his true name.

Article 13, The copyright of works produced jointly by several persons shall be their common property. When an author refuses to publish or exhibit works, in cases where the part of the work borne by each author is uncertain, the other may obtain his share by paying compensation to the refuser, provided that this will be excepted in cases where an agreement to the contrary exists between the parties. In case the part of the work borne by each author is known, and one or more of them refuses to publish or exhibit the works, the other authors may separate the parts they have done and publish or exhibit them, provided that this will be excepted if an agreement to the contrary exists.

Article 14, Persons who have edited several works according to regulations shall be recognized as authors, and they can enjoy copyright for the whole of the works edited, provided that the copyright of each work shall belong to the respective author.

Article 15, Persons entitled to copyright may obtain the registration of copyright. Unless the author registers the copyright of works he has published or exhibited, he cannot institute civil action against plagiarists. No copyright case can be transferred or hypothecated to a third party unless it is registered. The author of works under nom de plume, or of productions for which he gives no name, may obtain the registry of his true name.

Article 19, No copyright will be obtained by adding kana, punctuation, inflections, criticisms, notes, supplement, or drawings to original works, or by making other revision, addition, or reduction remodelling the original work, provided that exception will be given to those which can be considered as new works.

Article 20, Any article or note published in newspapers and periodicals (novels and fictions excepted) may be reproduced by giving its origin if the author does not conspicuously mention in his paper that its transferrence is prohibited.

Article 23, The copyright of photographs shall be kept in effect for ten years.

Article 28, The provisions of this law shall be applied with respect to the copyright of foreigners (those specially determined by Treaty excepted.) Provided that in no case provision is made in the Treaty relative to the protection of copyright, those foreigners who have published their works for the first time in the Empire shall alone be entitled to enjoy the protection of the law.

CHAPTER III., Plagiarism, [Punishment of.] Article 37, Plagiarists or persons who have knowingly sold or distributed plagiarised works shall be punished by a fine ranging from $24.90 to $249.

Article 39, Persons who have reproduced works without mentioning their origin shall be fined from $4.98 to $49,80.

Article 40, Publishers of works on which the name and title of a person other than the author is mentioned shall be punished with a fine of from $14.94 to $249.

Article 41, Persons who have made alterations in the works of other persons and injured their authors or changed their title, or have hidden the names and titles of the authors and published the works as works of other persons, shall be punished, even though the copyright of the original works has disappeared, by a fine of from $9.96 to $99.60.

Article 42, Persons who have obtained the registration of plagiarised works shall be fined from $4.98 to $49.80.

Article 43, Plagiarised works and instruments and apparatus employed for plagiarism shall be forfeited when they are in possession of the plagiarists or other persons concerned.

WHAT THE JAPANESE READ.

ERNEST W. CLEMENT writes to The Dial from Tokyo, under date of April 5, 1899, as follows:

"The tastes of the Japanese in reading are illustrated in a table accompanying a recent official report from the Imperial Library at Tokyo, of which I send you a summary. During a period of twenty-four days covered by the report the readers numbered 7770, and the books called for were classified as follows:

	Japanese and Chinese works.	European works.
Theology and religion.	635	14
Philosophy and education	2,368	145
Literature and languages	8,038	998
History, biography, geography, travel	9,768	460
Law, politics, sociology economy, statistics	6,577	304
Mathematics, natural philosophy, medicine	9,506	388
Engineering, military arts, industries	4,943	205
Miscellaneous books	4,840	530

"The table will interest American readers as showing how large is the number of European works included. It may be added that the Japanese are decidedly a reading people. Even the 'jinrikisha man,' waiting on the street-corner for a customer, is generally to be seen reading a newspaper, magazine, or book. And in Japan also, 'of making many books there is no end.'"

AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

THE seventy-fourth annual meeting of the American Tract Society was held in the chapel of the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, New York, on the 10th inst. Gen. O. O. Howard, the president, was in the chair, and made an address on the work of the Society in the army during the past year. Nearly all of the officers, including General Howard, were re-elected. The Rev. Drs. John Wesley Brown, J. M. Booth, and David Steele, the last named of Philadelphia, were elected honorary vice-presidents in place of three deceased members —the Rev. Drs. John Hall, J. T. Duryea, and T. W. J. Wylie.

ENGLISH NOVELISTS OF THE SECOND RANK DISCUSSED AT THE BOOK-SELLERS' LEAGUE.

THE regular monthly dinner of the Booksellers' League, given on the evening of the 10th inst., at the New Amsterdam, was well attended, and the address of Mr. E. H. Mullin, on "English Novelists of the Second Rank, 1850–1875," which we print in full below, was greatly enjoyed. The League will rest during the months of June, July, and August, and therefore the next entertainment will not be given until the second week in September. If enough members agree, the Entertainment Committee will arrange for another trolley ride, possibly through the picturesque region of the Oranges, in New Jersey.

Mr. Mullin's address was as follows:

The continuous publication now going on of new editions of English novels written between 1825 and 1875 is a remarkable fact in more than one of its aspects. It may be due to the demand for fiction exceeding the supply, though the stock of new novels and new writers was never so great as it is to-day; or it may arise from a combination of expired copyrights, cheap paper and printing processes, and the vast extension of popular education making it worth the great publishers' while to attempt a fresh distribution of novels, once well known, among the newly enfranchised masses; or it may have its source in a reaction against the various forms of realism in modern fiction in favor of the "old masters" and their followers, even if some of the latter be only second or third rate. Probably each of these causes has been contributory to the general result.

The half century which covered the period between 1825 and 1875 witnessed a great expansion in the literary tastes of the British middle classes. The moderate-priced monthly magazine, with its serial stories, and the circulating library brought the works of novelists of every grade within the reach of all who cared to read them. It was possible then, as it is not now, for any one with a little leisure to keep himself informed of the whole range of current English fiction, selecting and pursuing the authors he liked, and dropping those whose stories or whose style did not appeal to him. Moreover, when an author's popularity was once established he did not lose it after a few years under the crushing avalanche of a host of younger novelists; it was the custom of fathers and mothers to recommend novels which they had earlier enjoyed to their sons and daughters, and thus the boy of 1870 plunged into Marryat and Lever with as much zest as his father had done thirty or forty years before, when these works first appeared in serial form; while the girl of the same age found it a duty and a pleasure to read Jane Austen and Charlotte Brontë.

The reading public in the United Kingdom, during the period already referred to, were fortunate in having their wants supplied by these novelists of the first class. Much as critics may differ about the relative merits of Dickens, Thackeray, and George Eliot, no one has, as yet, had the temerity to deny to this trinity their places among the five or six supremely great writers of English fiction. Although Thackeray died in 1863, and Dickens in 1870, and, although both had done their best work before 1855, the influence of their leadership upon contemporary writers of English fiction was as great in 1875 as in any previous year since their best works first appeared. This, be it observed, was the influence of authors upon authors. Scott had yielded his place as the direct exemplar of young writers to Dickens and Thackeray, though the sale of the Waverley Novels in every decade between 1830 and 1870 always far exceeded that of the works of any other writer of fiction.

If we have a complaint to make of the influence of Dickens and Thackeray upon their contemporaries, it is that the overpowering shadow which they cast upon their own generation has tended to eclipse in our day the good work done by many of their conscious and unconscious followers. This is especially true of the novelists who were in their prime at any time during the twenty-five years between 1850 and 1875. Granting that these writers were at best only second rate, and often only high in the third-rate class; that they were not pioneers in their respective fields, but simply followers in the beaten track; and that if Dickens and Thackeray had not lived, they would either not have written novels at all or would have done so with very different results—granted all these things—still much remains to be said against condemning them to unmerited obscurity. Reflecting, as they did for the most part, the conditions prevailing in the middle and upper classes of English society of their day, they devoted much of their attention to the portrayal of outdoor life, nowhere enjoyed in the form of hunting and shooting so much as in England; to descriptions of the beguilements of the well-filled country house; to tracing the moulding effects, for good or evil, of a residence at the University of Oxford or Cambridge; to displaying the interior workings of the game of politics, as played by well-bred veterans who could not afford to be caught cheating; to celebrating the triumph of love between penniless young couples over the efforts of their elders to make mariages de convenance; and, finally, speaking generally, to depicting the reward of virtue and the punishment of vice.

It is not to be denied that the novels erected on these foundations were frankly Philistinic in tone; romantic, or even melodramatic in plot; and, with few exceptions, utterly commonplace in dialogue. On the other hand, the authors of these novels were free from many of the faults of the self-crowned writers of fiction of to-day. They avoided or glossed over topics not suitable for discussion in polite society and left untouched the exploration of the dissecting-room and other malodorous places. They kept far away from micrometic realism, with its phonographic reproductions of irrelevant conversational twaddle and its long-drawn-out catalogues of household furniture. They wrote sound idiomatic English, neither paying heed to the anæmic pedagogic purists, nor resorting to the tricks of slang or uncouth dialects to impart to their stories a meretricious interest. Writing as they did during the reign of the utilitarian Manchester school, they never overloaded their stories with the deadly purpose of reforming anybody or anything (though reforms sometimes incidentally followed their widespread researches for startling plots,) but wrote each story so that it might sell for the highest possible price.

These authors had the advantage of writing for a generation at once less and more critical than ours—less critical in its demand for accuracy in the stage setting, and more critical in its insistence upon the pure recreation afforded by a well-told story. Between 1850 and 1875 a general acquaintance with the works of Thackeray, Dickens, and George Eliot was almost indispensable for participation in the ordinary conversation of the dinner-table or the drawing-room. Becky Sharp and Major Pendennis, Dora and Sam Weller, Maggie Tulliver and Bulstrode, and other characters whom these names suggest, were "familiar in their mouths as household words," and afforded perennial opportunities for discussion or quotation. With such high standards for constant comparison, it followed that the second or third class novelist, in order to be successful, had to exhibit excellence in at least one quality of his work, whether in the complexity and lucidity of his plots, or in the variety and freshness of his incidents, or in his command of humor or pathos, or in his power of clothing with interest and charm some previously unknown side of life—colonial, foreign, seafaring, or other. While the fine expression of any one of these qualities would gain a reputation for an author, a fairly good plot to give his story form was quite as necessary a requirement as if it were one of Shakespeare's plays. Hence George Meredith, who wrote his best-known works within our selected period, failed to command any considerable circle of readers, though the brilliancy of his dialogue and the exquisite humor of his high comedy were elusively felt by the general mass of those who dipped into his serial stories. The British Philistine, however, kept his best intellect for money making, and could find no valid reason why he should use up his business or professional energy in solving Mr. Meredith's problems, so that this great writer, if not great novelist, was kept over to become the victim of a cult in succeeding generations, thus sharing the fate of Browning and Wagner, his august and equally unsolvable contemporaries.

Many good novelists were first introduced to the public during this period through the medium of the monthly magazines, and in accordance with the universal law of specialization, which accompanies growth and development, each of these magazines gradually gathered around it a set of writers who conformed to its prevailing tone and style, and a set of readers who were willing to take on trust the editor's implied recommendation of a new author. The acceptance of the editor's dictum that a new novel would be found worth reading involved not a little faith on the part of the magazine subscribers in some instances. Thus to take a specific example from an earlier period, nothing but the high reputation of Blackwood's Magazine could have induced its readers to wade through the mixed dulness and drivel of the opening chapters of Samuel Warren's "Ten Thousand a Year" when it was first published as a serial between the years 1839 and 1841; yet this novel proved ultimately to be one of the most brilliant successes of the middle half of the century. It is also true that the long descriptive beginnings which occur in most of Scott's novels have deterred great numbers of timid persons from attempting to cross such uninviting-looking thresholds, even though assured of the glorious hospitality to be found inside. In the fifties and sixties, this absence of salient interest was not only occasionally attached to opening chapters but sometimes to entire novels, and we owe a debt of gratitude to the magazine editors of those days—perhaps greater than we are now able accurately to estimate—for their perseverance and moral courage in insisting that such authors as Meredith and Anthony Trollope were worth encouraging in spite of temporary adverse popular verdicts.

The taste for Anthony Trollope—like that for caviar, or our own Fenimore Cooper—had first to be cultivated before it was enjoyed, but then the reward was ample. Nowhere else, in fiction or otherwise, does there exist such a complete set of photographs of typical British men and women of all kinds as in the pages of Trollope's novels. His duties as a post-office inspector led him through every part of the United Kingdom, where he mixed continually with commercial travellers, listened to the complaints against the post-office service of large manufacturers and small shopkeepers, dined and slept at great and small country houses, struck up acquaintance with local attorneys and doctors, and was visited on errands of mercy by Protestant rectors and by Roman Catholic parish priests. As a Civil Servant, high in the confidence of the post-office department, he was brought into contact with the heads and scions of the great Whig and Tory families, with statesmen and eminent lawyers, with members of Parliament and kings of industry. Trollope's unfailing eye, unerring ear and retentive memory, joined with imagination enough to fuse individuals into types without producing the blurred effect of a composite photograph, make his pages the truest index extant for future historians of the condition, aspirations and limitations of the British middle and upper classes during the thirty-five years' reign of the "ten-pounders" which covered the period between the Reform Acts of 1832 and 1867. Half a century hence the only way to appreciate Matthew Arnold's diatribes against the British Philistine and Barbarian will be to take alternate doses of the apostle of sweetness and light, and of Anthony Trollope.

Charles Reade, through his vivacity and healthy sensationalism, still retains a considerable, though gradually decreasing, number of readers. Owing to his somewhat mechanical method of digging his plots and incidents out of the columns of the London Times, the characters in his stories, being swayed by immutable facts, are apt to leave on the mind of the reader the impression that they are marionettes, though curiously enough this is more true of his men than of his women. Indeed, so far as character portrayal is concerned, Reade, though a confirmed bachelor, was at his best when describing the love palpitations of his heroines, while his secondary heroines, by their fidelity and greatness of mind, more than once engage the reader's affection. Had it not been for Reade's strong dramatic instinct, cultivated as it was by writing successful stage plays, his novels would have sunk beneath the mass of facts which he poured into them, and, as it was, several of them were saved from quick oblivion only by the brisk action which a sensational plot requires. In strength, vitality, and literary workmanship, "The Cloister and the Hearth" is by far the best novel which Reade ever wrote. As the time was fixed in the early days of the Reformation, and the scene was laid chiefly in Germany, the author for once had to abandon his book of newspaper clippings, and the result is so surprisingly good as to make us wish he had never seen a newspaper and had devoted himself to writing historical novels. Perhaps, after this one attempt, he considered the task too difficult, because he put meat enough into "The Cloister and the Hearth" to make half a dozen of the novels quite recently issued which deal with the same period.

Charles Kingsley, who wrote several good historical novels, must be passed over briefly as introducing his brother Henry—a much abler novelist, though not nearly so well known. If Charles Kingsley had not been a clergyman, he might have ranked high as a writer of fiction; if he could have been sure of his facts, he might have developed into a brilliant historian; if he had had an independent income, he might have been a fine naturalist or stood high up in the ranks of Victorian poets. As it was, his chosen avocation and his divine gifts were always falling foul of each other. "Westward Ho!" and "Hereward, the last of the English," are both such fine epic subjects and are so well handled by Kingsley, though obviously lamed by the constraint of the author being in Holy orders, that we sigh for the ponderous blows which Kingsley's titanic inspirer, Carlyle, would have put into them had he been minded to write books of this kind.

Regrets, though vain, may still be exasperating as they always are to any one who dwells upon the gulf which separates Henry Kingsley's early promise in fiction from his actual performance. Throughout all his novels, down to the very last, his genius as a writer of fiction comes bubbling at intervals to the surface. He seems to have had every gratification proper to a great novelist except the power of sustained effort. Witty dialogue—a vain gift among English authors—flowed easily from his pen; upon occasions he had humor or pathos alike at his command; in lucidity in descriptive writing he proved himself to be a worthy predecessor of at least two more modern writers of fiction who are held to excel in that art. He seems as much at home in the slums of London as he is in its drawing-rooms; in the barrack-yard as at the officers' mess-table; in the country house as in the stable; in the realms of statesmanship as in high finance; in the convict settlement as in the colonial government house. He has left us scenes of childhood worthy of Lewis Carroll, and of him only. Greatest and rarest feat of all, he has created living gentlemen who are neither eccentric, nor specially brave, not specially clever, nor specially good, who move without effort upon his stage; and he has matched them with gentlewomen, especially old maids, who are in every way worthy of their homage. "Geoffry Hamlyn," Henry Kingsley's first novel, still remains the best and most entertaining picture of life in the early Australian colonies that we have; "Ravenshoe," a more powerful novel, full of well-drawn characters, just missed greatness by a hair's-breadth. Those who know the history and biographies of English public life between 1840 and 1870, and who are not afraid of lunatics at large, will find the remaining works of Henry Kingsley usually amusing and often more instructive than appears on the surface.

Three novelists of country-house life—Major Whyte Melville, Sheridan Le Fanu, and Capt. Hawley Smart—may be conveniently grouped together, since they each have the same starting-point, though each takes his own path. Major Whyte Melville is pre-eminently the novelist of hunting in the shires—he met his death by a fall in the hunting-field—but is also strong in everything that pertains to horses, dogs, gypsies, and the routine business of a country gentleman. In "Uncle John," one of his best stories, he exhibits considerable power over pathos, and has successfully drawn the portrait of a noble and lovable country gentleman. Sheridan Le Fanu, a great-grandson of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, is a much more versatile writer than Whyte Melville. He deals with matrimonial intrigue with some of his ancestor's facility; he uses credible secret passages as part of his stage-setting; he is not above a murder now and then; he has an odd affection for, and apparent belief in, ghosts; and he has a good ear for dialect of all kinds when he chooses to employ it. "Uncle Silas" is his best story, and his "Checkmate" has enough fascinating repulsiveness in it to be called morbid, even in these days. Hawley Smart displays great familiarity with the race-track and its more or less "shady" surroundings; and he depicts the lives of army officers, both on active service and at home, with great minuteness of detail. His heroines, often the sport of an adverse fate, are usually self-reliant without ceasing to be lovable, and it is to his credit that a profound knowledge of race-track villany has not impaired the general healthfulness of his tone. "Breezie Langton," one of his earliest and one of his best novels, exemplifies all these phases of his work.

For pure fun and frolic, overlapping but not concealing a much deeper note, Frank E. Smedley deserves to be remembered. Though through bodily infirmity he was never able to sit on a horse's back, he is fully the equal of Whyte Melville in his hunting scenes, while his enjoyment in all those manly exercises which were beyond his reach is so thorough and is so vividly described that the reader's mind sympathetically follows the author's. In his "Frank Fairlegh" is to be found the best account in fiction of the harmless amusements of Cambridge undergraduates as they existed thirty or forty years ago, and the whole novel has not a dull page in it. "Lewis Arundel" is a more serious story, but still an eminently healthy and readable one. From the glimpses of Smedley which Edmund Yates gives in his "Autobiography," his must have been a noble character, cheerful and free from cynicism under great provocation to be otherwise.

Edmund Yates's own novels were very popular in their day, and, on the whole, deservedly so, because they appealed to popular taste as it then was. His heroes appealed to the common sense of a practical generation, since they rose but little above the average man of the world, and were by no means flawless. His villains, on the other hand, of whom he had a large and varied collection, had always some generous human traits about them which claimed the reader's sympathy. The scenes of his stories oscillated between country houses and London life in many of its different aspects. In the portrayal of blacklegs who had fallen from the estate of gentlemen, Yates had no superior in his time except Thackeray, as a perusal of his "Black Sheep" will easily show.

Of the frankly self-confessed followers of Dickens, none achieved so much prosperity as Wilkie Collins. His plots were marvels of complexity, thoroughly and lucidly worked out, and it was his practice to submit them to eminent legal or medical authorities for revision if they involved legal or medical questions. His sense of the ridiculous and of the grotesquely humorous was keen, like that of his great prototype, and will always appeal to those who are in sympathy with this species of humor. He had immense power, when at his best, in leading up to the culmination of tragic scenes, as in "No Name" where Magdalen counts the ships which slowly pass her window in order to decide by the chance of odd or even in a given time whether she shall commit suicide or not. His best single character is Count Fosco in the "Woman in White," a fat continental conspirator with an utter disregard for human life and a boundless affection for canaries; but by far his best novel is "The Moonstone," which is one of the best detective stories and contains the best-kept secret in all English fiction.

No review, no matter how perfunctory, of the English writers of fiction in the third quarter of the present century, can afford to omit the names of at least some of the prominent women novelists, other than George Eliot. Taine, an impartial judge and severe critic of English fiction, in his "Notes on England," has praised highly Mrs. Craik's "John Halifax, Gentleman," and pronounced its principal character to be a perfect conception of the ideal English gentleman, though to our mind he is too much of a prig. More true to nature, if not so highly keyed, is Mrs. Bank's "Manchester Man"—a charming story, too little known, of an upright English merchant of the last century.

People are apt hastily to pass over Mrs. Henry Wood and Miss M. E. Braddon because they have been prolific in their output of novels; they should rather be praised, because both of them were always able to serve up fresh and interesting stories out of material in which there was undoubtedly a good deal of sameness. "East Lynne," the novel which brought fame to Mrs. Wood, was published in 1861, and was then thought to be a very wicked book, though it seems innocent enough now, in all conscience, when contrasted with some recent performances by women writers which are freely read, in our more advanced age, by girls not out of their teens. Moreover, if "the verdict of foreign contemporaries be equivalent to the judgment of our own posterity," as some one asserts, then "East Lynne" is entitled to a high place in English fiction, because it has been translated into more European and Asiatic languages, and has had a larger cosmopolitan circulation than any novel written by a living British or American author. Leaving aside "East Lynne," Mrs. Wood, in "The Channings" and its sequel, "Roland Yorke," has written the two next best school stories to "Tom Brown at Rugby." All these efforts, however, sink into insignificance when compared with Mrs. Wood's first essay in fiction under her own name. This was a temperance tale, written for a prize of $500, offered by the Scottish Temperance League, which it gained, and afterward had a wide circulation.

Miss Braddon's usual stock in trade up to 1875, beyond which we do not follow her, was either a mysterious murder or a hidden family skeleton. One or other of these appeared in the first few chapters, and the tracing of the murderer or the disclosure of the family skeleton occupied the rest of the book. Handled with Miss Braddon's splendid technical skill, each story developed an absorbing amount of interest for the average reader, and on this account her novels for many years after the publication of "Lady Audley's Secret" were in greater demand at the circulating libraries than those of any author. Few persons ever went to sleep over one of Miss Braddon's books, and thousands sat up all night to finish one. Her continuous gain in force and technique, for at least her first twenty novels, is sufficiently rare among writers of fiction, especially women, to be worthy of mention.

Paris editors have a curious theory, namely, that every writer of fiction has in him the power of producing one good novel, which is assumed to be a subjective reproduction of the crisis in his own drama of life. As nearly all the English writers whom we have been considering wrote objectively and shrank from mental autobiography with the reserve natural to their race, this theory will not fit in their case. The personality of these writers is as completely hidden from view in their novels as if it had never existed, and if in such rare cases as that of Dickens in "David Copperfield," and of Thackeray in "Pendennis," we catch at times a hint of their own earlier days, a comparison of the facts as stated in the novel with the actual biography shows that they have been so changed that we can only surmise which are "human documents" and which are not.

Realists, in either of the modern restricted meanings of the term, these novelists were not; but in a much wider sense most of them were true novelists, because they described objective life as they had seen it year after year. Who can venture to impugn the accuracy of Whyte Melville's account of hunting in the shires, or Hawley Smart's account of mess-room talk, or Henry Kingsley's account of Australian life in the bushrangers' days, or Trollope's account of any section of English society? If the literary canons of their day kept them from soiling their pages with filth, and their own common sense told them that nine-tenths of the actual conversation between men and women appears stupid and irrelevant in cold type, can we place ourselves on pedestals and declare that because we have used our modern cameras to photograph the hidden places, or have had conversations reproduced from photograph cylinders, that our account is truer to life than theirs? By exact analogy, the Swiss glass case with its miniature reproduction of chalets, windmills, waterfalls and mountains, is more true to nature than an oil painting by a great artist of the same scene; in both cases there is distortion in reproduction, but in the glass case that which is little and inconsequential is kept, while in the painting that which is vital and relevant is retained.

The novelists of the third quarter of the century wrote stories which they thought would amuse and interest their readers. They claimed no mission; they pretended to no authority; they left mental analysis to the psychologists. If any of their stories turned out to be a religious tract, or a book of political economy, or a furniture catalogue, the British Philistine promptly stopped buying the author's works until he came to his right mind. What a change a single generation has seen in this respect!

"BATH" ON NOTE PAPER.

In the issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for April 8 we attempted to explain the meaning of the word "Bath" on note paper made on the Continent fifty or sixty years ago. We made the statement, among others, that "singularly, this stamp occurred on French and German papers only, and was never found on paper of English make," etc. Our compositor made the sentence read: "this stamp occurred on French and English papers only, and was never found on paper of English make." Unfortunately the error was not discovered in reading proof. An exchange, apparently interested in the information contained in our note, but puzzled at the contradiction referred to, "lifted" the item without acknowledging its source, and printed it with the following variation: "singularly, this stamp occurred on French and English papers only, and was never found on paper of any other make." We have noticed this latter version in three exchanges, two of them English. For the sake of truth in history we call the attention of our contemporaries to this correction.

COMMUNICATIONS.

THE KIPLING-PUTNAM COMPLICATION—AN EXPLANATION.

NEW YORK, May 9, 1899.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: In your article of May 6, I think in one or two points you have not been quite just to us. May I, therefore, ask you to insert this letter, in which I have attempted to make clear some of the matters connected with the Kipling suit?

As a preface, let me say that while we were served with the summons in this suit on the 24th of April, and while we were obliged to listen to testimony before Commissioner Shields three days later, we have not yet been served with the "complaint" in the action, and we know nothing definite except that we are sued "for infringement of copyright, trade-mark, and unfair competition in business."

From the 28th of March, when we received a lawyer's brief letter demanding that we at once stop selling the entire set of books, we have been trying in every possible way to find out the nature of the alleged grievance, with the avowed purpose of doing everything in our power to meet even the wishes of Mr. Kipling, to say nothing of his alleged rights. Literally, all the response we have had has been a lawyer's second letter stating that his client was "indignant at our appropriation of his property," and that we must at once stop selling these books and pay him substantial damages. When we answered this letter, regretting that Mr. Kipling would not let us know what was troubling him, and suggesting that the matter be left to friendly arbitration, our letter was left unanswered, and three weeks later we received a summons in a suit.

Now, with your permission, I should like to state, as briefly as I can, all the facts connected with the set we are selling.

In connection with our neighbors, Dutton, we bought from Mr. Kipling's several publishers a number of copies in sheets of the authorized editions of his books, 13 titles in all, with the avowed purpose of binding them into a uniform collected set. We received the entire approval and co-operation of these publishers in this matter, which was, in fact, a repetition of a previous smaller transaction of some months back. Of the "Departmental Ditties," the 14th volume of the set, there has never been any copyright edition; had there been, we should have used it. The edition selected was one of several that have been freely sold in every bookshop in the country for a number of years. As far as I know, there has never been any objection to its sale expressed by the author. There was, therefore, no reason why we should not buy and sell copies of it as we had been in the habit of doing, the material being regarded by the public as among the most important of Mr. Kipling's writings.

The "Vampire" and "Recessional" Mr. Kipling deliberately allowed to be printed without copyrighting them. We have the best authority for stating that he was entirely aware and expressed no disapproval of their publication as "Critic Leaflets." These Leaflets have their own full title-page stating they are published by the Critic Company, and being bound in at the back of the volume "Seven Seas" show exactly what they are, namely, leaflets too small to be bound by themselves, and included for convenience in the larger volume. They are not "folioed" with the "Seven Seas" nor quoted in its contents.

I see that it is also stated that one of the things to which Mr. Kipling objects is the "Ken of Kipling." This is a little volume that pretends to be neither more nor less than what it is—a sketch of the author, with some newspaper anecdotes. It does not profess to be in any way authorized by Mr. Kipling. It is written by a reputable man, Mr. Clemens, and published by a responsible house, and has been freely sold in every bookstore that keeps miscellaneous stock. We have the best authority for stating that, up to the present time, no protest or objection to this volume has been made either to the author or to the publishers, the New Amsterdam Book Co. If Mr. Kipling had real ground for grievance against this book, would not the ordinary and natural protest be addressed to the author, or to the publishers, who sell it in quantities, and not to one of the booksellers who are handling a few score of copies? If a bookseller is liable to be held responsible for lack of accuracy of statement in any one of the many thousand volumes that go in and out of his shop, there would have to be a decided change in bookselling methods.

Each of these 15 volumes bears the title-page of its publisher, and on 13 of these volumes Mr. Kipling receives compensation from the several publishers. On the 14th volume he receives no compensation, because it is not subject to copyright, and on the 15th volume he receives no compensation, as it is neither written by him nor controlled by him. Neither vols. 14 or 15 enters into competition with any other publication in which he is interested.

The fact of our putting covers on the authorized editions of Mr. Kipling's books and selling them at a decided advance on their original price can hardly have been the cause of "starting up a crop of incomplete editions." For years there have been unauthorized editions of many of the stories, and new issues by different houses are, in the ordinary course, appearing from time to time. It will, however, be very difficult, we think, to show even remotely that our little enterprise had been the cause of any such issues.

Yours very truly,
IRVING PUTNAM.

REORGANIZATION OF A. C. McCLURG & CO.

CHICAGO, May 4, 1899.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: We notice in your issue of April 29, on page 705, an item concerning ourselves, and as it contains one or two errors which originated with an ignorant or careless reporter connected with one of the Chicago papers, we think you may be glad to have the matter corrected.

To begin with, we are now fully incorporated under the title of A. C. McClurg & Co., which, you will notice, is precisely the same title under which we have done business for so long. There is no deficiency in the subscriptions to the capital stock; on the contrary, the stock was fully $100,000 over-subscribed, and every dollar of it has been taken within our own concern. The capital stock amounts to $600,000, of which General A. C. McClurg holds over $200,000, and F. B. Smith over $100,000, the two former partners therefore owning a majority of stock and controlling the corporation. The officers of the company are as follows: President, General McClurg; Vice-president, F. B. Smith; Treasurer, Richard Fairclough; Secretary, John A. Ryerson. The largest stockholders, in addition to the officers, are John B. Fay, William F. Zimmerman, Herman A. Kasten (these three gentlemen, with the officers, constituting the Board of Directors,) George M. Millard, and P. J. McFadden. There are more than seventy-five other stockholders, holding from one to eighty shares of stock apiece.

Early in June we expect to move into our fine new building, 215–221 inclusive, Wabash Avenue, only two blocks south of our former location. The building is nine stories and basement in height, eighty feet front by one hundred and sixty feet, constructed of white enamel, steel, and brick, and of absolutely the most modern and complete fire-proof construction. We shall use the entire building for our own business except the top floor and possibly part of the eighth, which are subdivided and rented for offices.

The management, control, and policy of the new corporation will be practically identical with those of the old firm. All the heads of departments remain the same, and the principal result of the fire of February 12 has been to make the business, if possible, stronger and larger and more enduring than ever before.

All statements regarding any deficiency in subscriptions to our capital stock are entirely erroneous, as is also the notion that any of our stock is held by outsiders. We have had, and continue to have almost daily, numerous applications from customers, friends, and even strangers, who desire to purchase our stock; but, as above stated, every dollar's worth of stock is held by members of the old concern, and most of them would be glad to get more stock if there were any still undisposed of.

Truly yours, A. C. McCLURG & Co.
JOHN A. RYERSON, Sec'y.

AUGUST BRENTANO.

AUGUST BRENTANO, senior member of the firm of Brentano's, died at Flushing, L. I., on the 10th inst., of a nervous trouble of long standing. He was a man of restless activity, and his unceasing devotion to the details of business undoubtedly undermined his health. Mr. Brentano was born at Evansville, Ind., August 1, 1853. He was graduated from the Evansville High School, and in 1873 came to New York to enter the book business of his uncle, who had founded the house of Brentano's in 1856 in the Revere House, at the corner of Broadway and Houston Street. At the time his nephew joined him the more important part of the Brentano business was the news department. A hard and tireless worker himself, the elder Brentano did not spare his assistants—least of all his own kin. And so, from the very start August was obliged to work from sunrise until long after sunset, a habit from which he could not free himself even long after the necessity for it had ceased. In 1877, August, with his brothers Simon and Arthur, purchased the interests of their uncle, who wished to retire. Under the new management, branches were established in Washington, Chicago, and Paris. In 1887 the brothers formed a corporation with a capital of $300,000, which was afterward increased to $600,000. The business was carried on as a corporation until 1894, when it was again made a partnership. Although August Brentano had been incapacitated for active work for more than a year, it was not until six or seven months ago that his condition became serious, and he was obliged to retire for treatment. His retirement followed serious business troubles of his firm, which reached a climax in August last. Mr. Brentano had an intuitive, almost an instinctive, knowlege of what were likely to be successful books in almost all the miscellaneous branches that are represented in modern bookselling. All his energies were devoted to maintaining a high and intelligent standard of bookselling and trade enterprise with the strictest regard for the wants of his customers. These traits also distinguished the founder of the house, and were thoroughly inculcated by him in his training of his successors. No one in present-day retail bookselling has worked more faithfully and earnestly than August Brentano in giving assiduous attention to every detail of proper service to customers. He was also conscientious in the training of his apprentices and assistants to the end that they might attain that proficiency in their profession which he deemed necessary for all who sell books. We believe that his memory will long be cherished by all who knew him as one of the most forceful, aggressive, earnest, and able of our contemporary booksellers.

RICHARD J. LEGGAT.

RICHARD J. LEGGAT, of the firm of Leggat Brothers, familiarly known as "Dick Leggat," died at his home, 1700 Broadway, New York, on the 6th inst. Mr. Leggat was born in New York City, 1832. His father was a member of the firm of Scott & Leggat, leading dealers in dry goods, on Hudson Street, seventy years ago. Richard Leggat was educated in the public school and "finished" at the Mechanics'

Institute. When about eighteen years of age he entered the employ of Gowans, the dealer in second-hand books, with whom he remained until 1855, when, with his brother Andrew, under the firm-name of Leggat Brothers, he began business as dealer in second-hand books at 88 Nassau Street. It may be mentioned here that his fellow-clerk at Gowans's, Edward A. Nash, has been for months confined with illness at his home and is not expected to recover. On the first day when the new firm entered upon its career the stock in trade amounted to about two hundred books. Now it would be difficult to say how many thousands of volumes and pamphlets are stuffed into their immense store and basement. Of all their contemporaries and neighbors of early days we believe only a few are in business, or even alive. Among these we recall Talbot Watts, who combined the sale of second-hand books and a nerve tonic; George P. Philes, Thos. H. Morell, W. E. Hilton, M. Doolady, John Bradburn, Tunnison & Reeves, the predecessors of Alex. Denham, William Gowans, A. L. Luyster, John Pyne, and Joseph Sabin. When the war broke out Leggat went out with the Seventy-first militia regiment as a three-months' man, and was present at the first battle at Bull Run. From 88 Nassau Street Leggat Brothers removed to Fulton Street, on the north side, near Broadway, where the rear of their store adjoined Barnum's Museum. When the museum was destroyed by fire the Leggat store also suffered so much that its proprietors were obliged to remove what was left of the stock to 113 Nassau Street. In the early seventies they removed to 3 Beekman Street, where they occupied the building vacated by the National Park Bank. In 1881 they removed to their present quarters at 81 Chambers Street. The senior member of the firm was a well-known figure at the trade and book auction sales, buying under the name of "Horne." He was at times a bold, but always a shrewd buyer, being guided by an unerring instinct of the value of what he was buying rather than by a positive knowledge of books. He was one of the founders of the Old Guard, and a member of the New York Historical Society. He leaves a widow.

EDWARD RICHMOND PELTON.

A WELL-KNOWN figure in the book world of New York was removed by the death of Edward Richmond Pelton, which occurred suddenly Tuesday, May 2, at Lakewood, N. J. His whole business life was spent in the publishing and bookselling interests of this city, and the loss of his hearty and genial presence will be felt by a large circle of business friends and acquaintances. Mr. Pelton was born in Boston, January 25, 1840. His father, Oliver Pelton, was the engraver whose steel plate work was long familiar to the art public. At fifteen years of age he entered the publishing house of Harper Brothers, where he remained until 1858. He then entered the office of W. H. Bidwell, founder and publisher of the Eclectic Magazine. In 1868 he was associated with Mr. Bidwell as partner, and the following year his name appeared on the magazine as publisher. From that time he continued to be the publisher and proprietor of the magazine until January 1, 1899, when the Eclectic was consolidated with Littell's Living Age. For a period of over forty years he was connected with the Eclectic, which before the days of the popular illustrated monthlies was one of the most influential and widely circulated magazines in the country. For about twenty-five years Mr. Pelton was the New York agent of the firm of J. B. Lippincott & Co., and only closed his relations with that house in April, 1898. In recent years his business included a large trade in medical books. He was himself the publisher of Moore's "Orange Culture," Leonard's "Handbook of Wrestling," Lancaster's "Family Medical Guide," Stern's "Urinalysis," and other professional medical works. In 1861 he went to the front with the three-months' men, holding the commission of captain. In 1869 he married the eldest daughter of ex-Governor Benjamin F. Flanders, of Louisiana. His wife and two children survive him—a daughter, Katharine, who is pursuing a musical career abroad, and a son, Frank, a graduate of Princeton University, who is now studying electrical engineering. He was a member of the Aldine Club, and of Lafayette Post of the Grand Army of the Republic in Brooklyn. Mr. Pelton was not old in years or in spirits; indeed, seldom does one preserve, so fully as he, through the wearing turmoil of a business career, the cheer and buoyancy of youth. Yet he had achieved in good measure that which should accompany age, "honors, love, and troops of friends." His large-hearted and fine-souled personality made him universally popular. To every one he was kind, courteous and generous, and to his friends always loyal and true. No one ever appealed to him in an emergency without receiving a prompt and sympathetic response.

OBITUARY NOTES.

WALTER H. THOMPSON, the head of the publishing firm of W. H. Thompson & Co., Philadelphia, died at his home in Moorestown, Pa., April 28, after an illness of about two weeks.

MRS. EMMA MARSHALL, the novelist, died at Bristol, Eng., on the 4th inst. She was the youngest daughter of Simon Martin, a banker of Norwich. Her literary gift appears to have been inherited from her mother. She was married in 1854 to Hugh Graham Marshall. The early years of her married life were spent at Wells, Exeter, and Gloucester, the cathedrals and historical associations of which places had an influence upon her that appears in her writings. Mrs. Marshall wrote a long series of historical novels, the central figures in which were such men as Sir Thomas Browne, George Herbert, and Sir Philip Sidney. The more popular of her works were "Under Salisbury's Spire," "Penhurst Castle," "Winchester Meads," "In the Choir of Westminster Abbey," "Under the Dome of St. Paul's," and "Better Late Than Never."

WILLIAM LAWRENCE, ex-Controller of the Treasury of the United States, and author of a number of law-books, etc., died at Bellefontaine, Ohio, on the 8th inst. He was born at Mount Pleasant, Jefferson Co., Ohio, June 26, 1819. In 1856 he was elected Judge of Common Pleas. He served during the war as Colonel of the Eighty-fourth Ohio Regiment.

In 1878 he was appointed first Controller of the United States Treasury, which office he resigned in 1885. Since then he was engaged in the wool business. Judge Lawrence published the following works: "Reports of the Decisions of the Supreme Court of Ohio," Columbus, 1852; "The Treaty Questions," Washington, 1871; "The Law of Religious Societies and Church Corporations," Philadelphia, 1873; "The Law of Claims against the Government," Washington, 1875; "The Organization of the Treasury Department of the United States," Washington, 1880; and "Decisions of the First Controller in the Department of the Treasury of the United States," 1881–1885.

GEORGE R. HALM, a well-known decorative artist and designer of book-covers, died in New York City on the 3d inst. He was born at Ogdensburg, N. Y., September 1, 1850. He learned wood-engraving in Boston, where he remained until 1873, when he came to New York to join Frank Leslie's staff of special artists. He subsequently had charge of the art department of the Orange Judd Company. Of late years he made a specialty of decorative work, allegorical illustration and cover designing, notably for Charles Scribner's Sons, Harper & Brothers, George Routledge & Sons, the Century Company, and for the programs and menus of the leading theatres and clubs. He founded Art and Decoration, a high-class artistic publication. He also originated a peculiar style of letter which, as the "Halm Type," was adopted by Theodore L. De Vinne, who had fonts cast for it from designs by Halm. Mr. Halm was a member of the Boston Art Club, and was on the Committee of Fine Arts selected by the club for the Vienna Exposition of 1878.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

FRANK NORRIS, author of "McTeague," is now working on a new novel to be entitled "The Octopus"—the slang name in California for the Southern Pacific Railroad.

CLEMENT K. SHORTER, who recently resigned the editorship of The Illustrated London News and The Sketch, has arranged to publish, probably January 1, 1900, a new threepenny weekly illustrated. The capital has been found chiefly by Eyre & Spottiswoode.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

A FEATURE of the May number of the Nineteenth Century of special interest to the trade is an article by Joseph Shaylor on "Booksellers and Bookselling" in England.

The Printer and Bookmaker, formerly published by Howard Lockwood & Co., is now edited and published by J. Clyde Oswald, 150 Nassau Street. The Printer and Bookmaker has always been a high-class publication, ably edited, and printed with discriminating taste.

THE first number of the Star of Hope, a biweekly paper published by the convicts of Sing Sing [N. Y.] prison, appeared on April 29. The paper is edited and printed under the warden's supervision. Assisting the warden, and acting as editor, is No. 1500, who is said to be the only newspaper man serving a sentence in Sing Sing.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"BEN HUR" has been translated into Danish and will shortly be published in that language.

RAND, MCNALLY & CO. will publish at once a new novel by Stanley Waterloo, entitled "The Launching of a Man."

A. E. TURNER will hereafter represent De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., and Cassell & Co., Limited. He will start on his Western trip next week.

THOMAS B. MOSHER, Portland, Me., has just issued seventeen designs by William Blake to Thornton's Virgil, reproduced from the original woodcuts of 1822.

E. P. DUTTON & CO. announce a new and cheaper edition of "The Foundations of the Creed," by Harvey Goodwin, D.D., Lord Bishop of Carlisle.

A. P. GARDINER, 550 Pearl Street, New York, author of "A Drummer's Parlor Stories," etc., will publish early in June another of his books entitled "Vacation Incidents." The volume will be illustrated.

D. C. HEATH & CO. have in preparation a work entitled "Organic Education," by Miss Harriet M. Scott, Principal of the Normal Training School of Detroit, Mich., which will appeal specially to teachers in primary and grammar grades.

HARDY, PRATT & CO., Boston, have now ready the "Memoirs of the Duc de Saint-Simon of the Times of Louis XIV. and the Regency," translated and abridged by Katherine Prescott Wormeley. The work is sold by subscription only.

THE BUSINESS PUBLISHING COMPANY, New York, has issued three pamphlets, parts of their Pigeon Hole Series, the titles of which are "Successful Methods in Business," "Bookkeeping Frauds and Methods of Detection," and "Partnership."

THE PENN PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, have purchased from the Doubleday & McClure Co. the plates and stock of Edward S. Ellis's story for young people, entitled "Klondike Nuggets." The story is being revised and expanded, and new illustrations are to be added.

F. M. BUCKLES & CO. will publish, in a series to be entitled Kipling Masterpieces, the following: "The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvany," "The Man Who Would be King," "Without Benefit of Clergy," "The Courting of Dinah Shadd," and "The Strange Ride of Morrowbie Jukes."

THE STUYVESANT PUBLISHING CO., 253 Broadway, New York, has just published a novel entitled "The Blind Goddess, a tale of To-day, showing Some Undercurrents of a Big City," by Randall Irving Tyler, author of "Four Months After Date," with illustrations by Kauffman.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY will publish shortly "Outsiders," by Robert W. Chambers, dealing with the Bohemian and artistic life of New York; "The Strong Arm," by Robert Barr; and "Letitia Berkeley, A.M.," by Josephine B. Stephens, telling the life of a young medical student in Paris.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish shortly a translation of Camille Bellaigue's "Musical Studies." Among the subjects treated of are "Music from a Sociological Point of View," "Realism and Idealism in Music," "Italian Music and the Last Two Operas of Verdi," and "Three Symbolistic Operas."

The Bookman says of "Young Mistley," by Henry Seaton Merriman: "It is one of three early, immature stories which were published many years ago in London by the Messrs. Bentley, which Mr. Merriman subsequently endeavored, unsuccessfully, to have withdrawn from the market. After the transference of the Bentley business to the Macmillan house, Mr. A. P. Watt, acting in Mr. Merriman's behalf, succeeded in purchasing the copyrights of these books and had them suppressed in England."

JOHN MURRAY, London, announces the long-expected memoirs of Henry Hart Milman, D.D., the celebrated Dean of St. Paul's and author of "History of the Jews," "History of Christianity," etc. The memoir is by his son, Arthur Milman, and will contain selections from his correspondence, together with a portrait. Another important announcement made by Mr. Murray is the forthcoming publication of a sumptuous volume entitled "A Glimpse at Guatemala, and some Notes on the Ancient Monuments of Central America." The authors are Anne Carey Maudslay and Alfred Percival Maudslay. There will be maps and plans, seventy-four photogravures, two chromolithographs, four lithographs, and other illustrations.

SMALL, MAYNARD & Co. have acquired from Copeland & Day the right to publish Arthur Stanwood Piers' forthcoming novel, "The Pedagogues," which will deal with the unfamiliar aspects of Harvard life as presented in the "summer school." They have also in preparation Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Stetson's short story, "The Yellow Wall Paper," which may be familiar to readers of the New England Magazine, where the story first made its appearance; also a "New England Primer," edited by Lindsay Swift, of the Boston Public Library, which, however, is not a reprint of the old "New England Primer," but is merely such another compilation of new and old epigrams as a contemporary editor might be expected to make. They will publish in the fall a work on "The Future of the American Negro," by Booker T. Washington. Mr. Washington is the second negro who within a few years has achieved a reputation as a writer—the other being Paul Laurence Dunbar.

WILLIAM ABBATT, who has removed from Nassau Street to 281 Fourth Avenue, New York, will publish early in July an important historical work of which he is the author, entitled "The Crisis of the Revolution, being the story of Arnold and André, now for the first time collected from all sources, and illustrated with views of all places identified with it." The extent of detail in this book may be estimated from the single fact that 103 persons are named in the course of the story. No other account of this event gives the names of over 35. Of a number of the personages mentioned—André, Arnold, Joshua Hett Smith, Lieut.-Colonel Jameson, Captain Ebenezer Foote, Dr. Isaac Bronson, Colonel Joseph Cilly, Lieutenant Solomon Allen, to mention but a few, new portraits are given, while others, of whom no portraits exist, are represented by biographic notices and facsimile autographs. An important and hitherto unknown fact of two of the André captors—Van Wart and Williams—gleaned from the testimony of an eye-witness, will be printed, as will also the music of two of the dirges played while André was taken to execution. One of these has been hitherto unknown, and neither has yet been mentioned in history.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

The Holy Bible

POLYCHROME EDITION

A NEW ENGLISH TRANSLATION OF THE BIBLE.

PRINTED IN COLORS exhibiting the Composite Structure of the Books, with Explanatory Notes and Pictorial Illustrations. Prepared by Eminent Biblical Scholars of Europe and America, and Edited by*

PAUL HAUPT,

Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

Long years of preparation, and collaboration upon a vast scale, have been devoted to this work, which is perhaps the greatest yet attempted in the field of Biblical scholarship. The present rendering of the Old Testament is not a revision of the Authorized Version, but a new translation from the Hebrew in modern English. The aim has been to render the sense of the original as faithfully as possible. This new translation appeals to all interested in the Bible; the notes are also free from technical details.

Two New Volumes Have Just Been Published:

1. THE BOOK OF EZEKIEL.

Translated by The Rev. C. H. Toy, D.D., LL.D., Professor of Hebrew in Harvard University. 216 pages. With nine full page illustrations (including a Map), and 102 illustrations in the Notes. Cloth, $2.50 net.

2. THE BOOK OF JOSHUA.

Translated by The Rev. W. H. Bennett, M.A., Professor of Old Testament Languages at New College, London. 102 pages, printed in nine colors. Eleven full-page and 25 cut illustrations. Cloth, $1.25 net.

PREVIOUSLY ISSUED (all in cloth binding and sold net):*

Judges, $1.25; Isaiah, $2.50; Psalms, $2.50; Leviticus, $1.25. Each in substantial cloth binding in uniform style (size 10½ x 7½ in.).

Other parts to follow at regular intervals. The Old Testament will be completed in 20 parts. The New Testament will THEN be begun.

The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.:

"By all odds the greatest achievement yet attempted in Biblical scholarship. . . . For its understanding no glossaries nor commentaries are needed, making it pre-eminently the Bible of the unlettered as well as the Bible of the learned."

Christian Outlook, Buffalo:

"A marvel of scholarly work and good printing. One of the greatest works in the field of Biblical scholarship. . . . The most ambitious and able attempt that has ever been made in the field of religious research."

THE POLYCHROME BIBLE IS SOLD TO THE TRADE.

Fiction and Poetry. Just Ready:

The Jamesons. (8th Thousand.) By Mary E. Wilkins.

A NEW book by Miss Wilkins is always an event of importance to thousands of readers, but in this latest story she has had a real inspiration and has made the most of it.

"The Jamesons" tells the experiences of a New Woman among the old-fashioned people of a New England country town—whom Miss Wilkins alone is adequate to depict in fiction. The results of Mrs. H. Boardman Jameson's attempts to "widen the spheres" of the inhabitants of Linnville by introducing them to Aesthetics, Rational Attire, Browning, Ibsen, Maeterlinck and the like, form an inimitable narrative—as can well be imagined by any one who knows the author's work.

The book has been an immediate success, the advance orders having exhausted the first edition, and is now in its eighth thousand.

Size, 5 x 7½; Type, 10 point; Pages, 177; Binding, smooth cloth, decorated, gilt top; Illustrations, 3, reproduced in color, by Alice Barber Stephens; Price, $1.00.

The Eye of a God. By W. A. Fraser.

MR. FRASER (author of "The Eye of a God, and Other Tales of East and West") is a new writer, whose long residence and many adventures in India, Burmah and the East, as well as in Canada and in our own Far West, give his stories a notable breadth and swing. Strange and stirring as are these tales—of kingly rubies, of stolen diamonds, of pearl-fishing, of the life of the Red Indians, etc.—they bear on their face the stamp of reality.

Within the Hedge. By Martha Gilbert Dickinson.

THIS is a truly remarkable "first book" of poems by Miss Martha Gilbert Dickinson, whose magazine contributions have already received much attention from the critics. Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman has selected six or seven of these for his "American Anthology," writing the author that although this work is intended to cover only the well-known writers, he felt constrained to make an exception in her case.

PUBLISHED THIS WEEK:

A History of Bohemian Literature.

By FRANCIS, Count LÜTZOW. A new volume in the Literatures of the World Series. Edited by Edmund Gosse. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The author's ample knowledge is applied in a most interesting and instructive fashion to a subject which for most readers is practically unexplored. Beginning with the "Question of the Manuscripts," the author takes up the hymns, dating probably from the tenth century, which are the earliest uncontested writings. In developing the theme of early Bohemian poetry several valuable translations are furnished as illustrations. A discussion of the early prose writers precedes an important portion of the book which treats of the epoch that witnessed the serious attempts to revive the vernacular in place of Latin, and to institute linguistic as well as religious reforms, an epoch ending with the burning of John Hus and religious persecutions. Another large phase of the subject, the development of Bohemian prose in the sixteenth century, is fully treated, together with the various new impulses of the last hundred years. The author has developed a comparatively unknown field with tact and scholarly discrimination, and his treatment of the subject is happily re-enforced by translations of characteristic examples of Bohemian literature.

Idylls of the Sea.

By FRANK T. BULLEN, author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot." Uniform edition. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The success which Mr. Bullen has won by the force and vividness of "The Cruise of the Cachalot" imparts a special interest to the announcement of his forthcoming book, "Idylls of the Sea." This book sketches varied phases of the life and experiences of those who go down to the sea in ships. It is not confined to the whaler's exploits, but includes the things which are seen and the adventures which are undergone by all manner of men upon the sea. The keen observation and dramatic quality of the author's first book are vividly illustrated in this fascinating volume.

"Books like this are rare. The 'Idylls' gives us a new sensation, fresh, delightful, stimulating. It is salt with the sea winds and glowing with the colors of the sea."—London Literary World.

The Taming of the Jungle

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.00

"Dr. Doyle has succeeded in making his sketches vivid as well as picturesque, and he seems to have seen deep into the 'motif' of the half civilized life about him. . . Books of this character add immeasurably to our knowledge of Indian life; indeed they give it a clearer interpretation than can be gathered from the narratives of travellers. 'The Taming of the Jungle' is a charming book both as a story and as a picture of human conditions."—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

"In all Kipling's marvellous Indian tales, informed as they are by true genius, there is nothing superior to this series of episodes. Dr. Doyle has 'arrived' and Kipling has a worthy rival on his own ground. . . The little volume is not an echo of Kipling in any way, but an original interpretation of the primitive people of the Terai, the great jungle that skirts the foothills of the Himalayas in the province of Kumaon."—The Press.

"The Most Notable New Book of the Hour."—Philadelphia Record

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

"Not in many a long day has there appeared such a refreshingly original and strikingly meritorious work of fiction. Dr. Doyle must be hailed as a new star on the horizon. . . 'The Taming of the Jungle' is unique, masterly, delightful. The spirit of the Jungle Mother hovers over its pages; we have glimpses of the morning beauty and moonlight romance and terror of the Terai—the great tract of jungle that skirts the foothills of the Himalayas, in the province of Kumaon. With the realism of highest art, inspired by an intimacy of a dozen years, Dr. Doyle depicts these simple, primitive jungle-folk, their child-like affection for their natural paradise, their rather 'low-caste' Hindoo superstitions, their peculiar manners, vendettas, Padbani, love bargains, love idyls and love tragedies."—The Record, Philadelphia.

"The Most Notable New Book of the Hour."—Philadelphia Record

By DR. C. W. DOYLE

"'The Taming of the Jungle,' by Dr. C. W. Doyle is less a story than a series of sketches dealing with India and Indian life; they are written with vigor; the characters are firmly drawn and the local color admirably preserved. The subject matter naturally recalls Mr. Kipling, but Dr. Doyle is no imitator, he records at first hand and with a full knowledge of his subject; he draws a character or a situation in a few bold strokes, and like the great master he has the happy art of selection and condensation; and some of his most effective scenes are reached through hints rather than by elaborate description. The book is admirable both in style and matter, and everywhere reveals the taste and imagination of the true literary artist."—Saturday Evening Gazette, Boston.

NOTES IN SEASON.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready Lord Charles Beresford's book, "The Break-Up of China." A fitting introduction to this work may be found in an article by Lord Charles, which appears in the current number of The North American Review.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY call special attention to Dr. C. W. Doyle's "Taming of the Jungle," which is among the most notable new books of the hour. Dr. Doyle is a physician of Southern California who was born under the shadow of the Himalayas, and must not be confounded with his distinguished professional brother, the author of "Sherlock Holmes." "The Taming of the Jungle" is an original work of fiction which has been highly praised by very competent critics.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have ready to-day Theodore Roosevelt's long-expected description of the work of "The Rough Riders," with many excellent illustrations from photographs. They have also just ready "A History of the Jewish People," by Charles Foster Kent, covering the Babylonian, Persian, and Greek periods; the second volume in the Coleridge-Brothers' edition of Byron's Works, containing "Childe Harold;" and "The Cable Story Book," selections for school reading, edited by Mary E. Burt and Lucy L. Cable, which is added to Scribner's Series of School Reading.

DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE COMPANY will publish early in June new editions from new plates of those volumes by Kipling, the rights of which they recently purchased from The Macmillan Company. The author has revised thoroughly at least two of the volumes—"Plain Tales from the Hills" and "The Light that Failed." Many pages of the latter, it is said, have been entirely rewritten. They will publish at the same time Kipling's latest volume, "From Sea to Sea," which will include some hitherto unpublished matter, the first accurate text of the "American Notes," "The Smith Administration," "Letters of Marque," and "The City of Dreadful Night."

D. APPLETON & CO. will publish shortly "A History of the American Nation," by Professor A. C. McLaughlin (the first volume of the new Twentieth Century Series,) the purpose of which is to trace the main outlines of national development and to show how the American people came to be what they are; "A History of Bohemian Literature," by Count Lützow, a new volume of the Literatures of the World Series; Cy Warman's new novel, "Snow on the Headlight," in which the author deals with a great railroad strike, and throws light on certain characteristic situations that are usually unknown; also, "Idylls of the Sea," by F. T. Bullen, author of "The Cruise of the Cachalot," in which the author will sketch varied phases of the life and experiences of "those who go down to the sea in ships."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have just ready "Richard Carvel," by Winston Churchill, a novel of far wider scope and more serious import than his delightful "The Celebrity," which is illustrated by Malcolm Fraser; "The Trail of the Goldseeker," by Hamlin Garland, sketches in prose and verse, the gatherings from the author's recent tramp overland to the gold-fields; a new book by the author of "Elizabeth and Her German Garden," bearing the title "A Solitary Summer;" also "From Comte to Benjamin Kidd—the appeal to biology or evolution for human guidance," by Professor Robert Macintosh, of Lancashire Independent College. They will publish next week the sermon preached at the ordination of the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs by the Rev. Dr. George William Douglas, at the Pro-Cathedral, New York, on the 14th inst. Two new biographies are also added to the long Macmillan list of this class: "The Life of Henry A. Wise," by his grandson, who gives a fine picture of the famous war governor of Virginia in the John Brown crisis; and "The Life of the Rev. R. H. Quick," edited by F. Storr, editor of the Journal of Education, a biography full of information for all interested in educational matters.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Tells again the story of the Boston tea-party. Intended to be accurate in its representation of historic characters and events; to give a true picture of life and thought in Boston before the Revolution, and to bring to the front the young people of the time, together with their interesting seniors. Among the latter it introduces John Crane, Paul Revere, Governor Hutchinson, the Quaker owner of the tea-ships, Francis Rotch, and others. It endeavors, also, to do justice to the Royalists.

Charles, Jos. F. The Duke of Linden: a romance. N. Y., J: Lane, 1899. 12+295 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1601

A story of Germany, beginning in the first half of the present century. The Lichtens and the Storckens, two great German families, had been enemies as far back as the ninth century. The curse of an ancestress of the Storckens, that "both Lichten and Storcken be blotted out together when love unites the two," is fulfilled in the nineteenth century in a dramatic and touching manner.

The hero is a very clever inventor and skilful worker in metals. His father is found murdered under circumstances which throw suspicions on his mother. He accuses himself of the crime, is tried by a coroner's jury, and then escapes on his way to prison to await final trial. The story tells his adventures while pursued by detectives with theories, tramps wishing reward money, etc. The chief interest centres in a man posing as philanthropist and socialist, whose real occupation comes as a surprise to the reader.

Gives a vivid picture of Santiago and Southern Cuba while the war was in progress, and tells the thrilling story of a young cadet of the St. Louis, who was detailed for perilous work on shore. Young Standish is a typical American boy of the right sort, doing his duty always, whether as a boarding-house keeper among the Catskills, as a cadet engineer on the St. Louis, diving for cables in Guantanamo Bay, or struggling with an infuriated mob on the mole in Santiago. Admiral Sampson and Captain Goodrich and General Wood are numbered among the cadet's friends when the war draws towards its close.

Fairbairn, H: A., M.D. The college warden. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1899. c. 6+154 p. por. il. D. cl., $1. [1613

Robert Brinckerhoff Fairbairn, warden of St. Stephens College, Annandale, N. Y., was born in New York City, May, 1818. Annandale is one of the preparatory colleges for Protestant Episcopal clergymen. He attained this office in 1863, and remained until his death in Annandale, having retired from active work only a short time before his death in January, 1899. This biography is by his son.

Fletcher, J. S. The paths of the prudent: a comedy; il. by J. W. Kennedy. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1899. 6+309 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1614

Dorinthia Evadne Clementine Annwell, the beautiful heroine, had received her training in the "Home for the Upbringing of Prudent Maidens," a charity established by a rich and eccentric lady with the object of making girls self-reliant and watchful of their own interests. The lessons here learned Dorinthia puts in practice in a public house in Yorkshire, England, where she occupies the position of barmaid. While her course is quite selfish and heartless, it is not without its amusing side. She plays with several men who fall in love with her, prudently carrying her schemes for her own benefit to a successful conclusion, irrespective of sentiment.

Fowler, Ellen Thorneycroft. A double thread. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 5+418 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1615

To test the affection of a favored suitor the heroine, who is both rich and beautiful, resorts to an ingenious deception, which it would spoil the story to betray. The scenes take place in London and in an English country-home. The characters are all sharply drawn, and the dialogue throughout is embued with the same wit and humor so notable in "Concerning Isabel Carnaby."

Frederic, Harold. The market-place; il. by Harrison Fisher. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1899.] c. '98, '99. 3+401 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1616

In the person of Stormont Thorpe are illustrated the modern methods of speculation. He makes a fortune out of a rubber company which has no existence except on paper. After years of manipulating these mythical shares he withdraws his gains from the scene of his labors in comparatively unknown lands, settles down, marries, and devotes himself to philanthropy. His schemes for the benefit of his relations lead to many misunderstandings with his sister, who is a well-drawn character

Griel, Katherine A. Glimpses of nature for little folks. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1899. c. 4+103 p. il. D. bds., 30 c. [1617

Nature studies intended for supplementary reading in the second half of the first year and the first half of the second year. The matter contained is based, for the most part, on a year's work in a first grade. The ideas were suggested by pupils from specimens brought into the class-room. Many of the sentences are in pupils' own language.

Griffiths, Arthur. A girl of grit: a story of the intelligence department. N. Y., R. F. Fenno & Co., 1899. c. 2-302 p. D. cl., 75 c. [1618

The story of a young Englishman who inherits about fifteen millions from a distant relative in America. He at once becomes the subject of a conspiracy to wrest from him his newly gotten fortune. He is constantly shadowed by a detective for protection, and is helped in his worst strait by the girl he loves. The narrative simply consists of the hero's adventures in escaping his enemies.

Guthrie, T: Anstey, ["F. Anstey," pseud.] Love among the lions: a matrimonial experience. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. 5+116 p. D. cl., $1. [1619

A bachelor of twenty-eight, who had made a reputation as a tea-taster for a large London firm, fell in love with the daughter of a teacher of elocution connected with circuses and stage affairs. This young woman insists that the young man shall marry her inside the cage "among the lions." The plot is ingenious, and the author of "Vice versa" and "The tinted Venus" seems to have struck his old tone, pure fun and good spirits.

Jackson, F: G. A thousand days in the Arctic; with preface by Sir F. Leopold McClintock; il. from photographs by the author, and drawings by R. W. Macbeth, A.R.A., Clifford Carleton, Harry C. Edwards, and F. W. Frohawk, from data furnished by the author. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 23+940 p. pors. maps, O. cl., $6. [1629

The narrative of the Jackson-Harmsworth expedition which was sent out in 1894 by Mr. Alfred Harmsworth to ascertain the importance of Franz-Joseph Land as a way to the Pole. This land, thought to be the southern projection of a great Arctic continent, is shown by Mr. Jackson to be a group of small islands, and of practically no value as a way to the Pole. He devoted himself entirely to exploring these islands, ascertaining their geographical limits and making a scientific examination of their fauna and flora. The present work is a popular one, recording many interesting and exciting adventures and experiences, scientific matters being left for fuller treatment in a subsequent volume.

James, H: The awkward age: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 3+457 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1630

A dramatic satire of English social life of to-day. Mr. James has taken a young girl who, as is the English custom, has been religiously excluded from her mother's drawing-room until the time comes for her to "sit downstairs"—that is, when her mother decides that it is time for her to marry. The mother is young, pretty, and ambitious, and the conditions of her drawing-room change with Nanda's advent. For the protection of Nanda's innocence everything is expurgated, filtered, generally moderated, and sifted and sorted. The development of Nanda's character under these conditions is portrayed with that wealth of observation and keen insight that Mr. James can bring to bear on such a subject.

Johnson, Jesse. Testimony of the sonnets as to the authorship of the Shakespearean plays and poems. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 6+100 p. D. cl., $1. [1631

After a careful study of the "Shakespearean sonnets," the author's deductions are that the "sonnets were not written by Shakespeare, but it is very probable that he was the friend or patron around whom their poetry moves and to whom most of them are addressed." While insisting that the sonnets reveal another poet whose identity is unknown, he says that they also reveal "that those great dramas, or at least that those portions of them which are in the same class or grade of poetry as the sonnets, were the work of that great unknown."

Kipling, Rudyard. Ten gems from Kipling. N. Y., F. M. Buckles & Co., [1899.] 69+4 blank p. por. 1 il. D. bds., 75 c. [1636

Contents: Recessional; The vampire; "Tommy"; "Fuzzy wuzzy"; Belts; Danny Deever; The betrothed; Mandalay; Gunga Din; The undertaker's horse.

Koren, J: Economic aspects of the liquor problem: an investigation made for The Committee of Fifty under the direction of H: W. Farnam. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 10+327 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1637

The investigation covers (1) Poverty and liquor; (2)

Pauperism and liquor; (3) Destitution of children and liquor; (4) Crime and liquor; (5) The negroes and the liquor problem; (6) The Indians and the liquor problem; (7) Social aspects of the saloon in Great Britain. The results of this investigation as here recorded by Mr. Koren are startling in their revelation of the enormous waste and loss entailed by the "drink habit." Many tables of statistics in an appendix summarize results of various investigations. There is a bibliography (10 p.).

Lang, Andrew. Myth, ritual, and religion. [New rev. ed.] N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 2 v., 39+339; 6+380 p. D. cl., $2.50. [1638

The original edition of "Myth, ritual, and religion," published in 1887, has long been out of print. In revising the book Mr. Lang has brought it into line with the ideas expressed in the second part of his "Making of religion" (1898), and has excised certain passages which, as the book first appeared, were inconsistent with its main thesis. In some cases the original passages are retained in notes, to show the nature of the development of the author's opinions. A fragment or two of controversy has been deleted, and chapters 11 and 12, on the religion of the lowest races, have been entirely rewritten on the strength of more recent or earlier information lately acquired.

Although the story opens in London, most of the scenes are in Australia, the "martyrs of empire" being the pioneer settlers of that country. A young and pretty English girl, who consents to visit relatives with a distinctive purpose in view, meets when she reaches her uncle's cattle station a former playmate; following this incident is an eventful love-story and a series of misfortunes, then comes the unexpected ending of a novel dealing with life in the bush.

McIntosh, Burr W: The little I saw of Cuba; il. by the author. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, 1899. c. 4+173 p. il. O. cl., $2. [1641

Burr McIntosh represented Leslie's Weekly in Cuba. He gives a graphic account of all he saw in his capacity of war correspondent of the Santiago campaign, from the embarkation of troops at Tampa, illustrating his narrative with numerous reproductions of photographs of prominent men and interesting views and historic events taken by himself on the spot.

Ward, Mrs. Wilfrid. One poor scruple: a seven weeks' story. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 8+384 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1665

A study in two generations of Riverdales, an ancient Catholic family living upon historical estates in an old-fashioned quiet way distasteful to the heroine who has married the scapegrace son of the family. Left a widow she is hampered in her plans of second marriage by the Catholicism of the Riverdales, she herself being rather lax in many things. Race and tradition and their moulding effects on character are drawn with skill.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

MAY 20, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE PARIS EXPOSITION EXHIBIT.

WE regret to note that there is a complication regarding the book trade exhibit at the Paris Exposition, which, however, should be easily removed. M. Terquem, who came first to America in 1876 as the representative of the French book trade for their collective exhibit at Philadelphia, and who had become an international expert, as it were, in book trade exhibits—having arranged for both the American exhibits at Paris in 1878 and 1889, and for the French exhibit at Chicago in 1893—had courteously proposed to make similar arrangements on behalf of the American book trade at Paris in 1900. There seems to have been some misunderstanding of M. Terquem's plan at the office of the United States Commission at Chicago, the headquarters of Mr. A. S. Capehart, Director of Liberal Arts and Chemical Industries, under the first of which divisions the book exhibit is included. Space can be allotted, of course, only on direct application of exhibitors, and this was a part of M. Terquem's plan—the collective exhibit being based upon such individual applications. There was unfortunately some impression that M. Terquem was proposing a general exhibit in his own name, instead of acting as the installing and managing representative of the exhibitors. To require separate exhibits on the part of each publisher would be to make impossible an adequate representation; we are glad, therefore, to be able to state that the Commission authorities are prepared to facilitate a collective exhibit based on the individual applications for space, making possible an American book trade collective exhibit worthy of the cordial relations between France and this country. M. Terquem is entitled to credit and praise for his work hitherto and in this instance, and the trade will be pleased to know that the general plan hitherto successful for such exhibits will be followed in this case.

A PRETENDED FORERUNNER OF THE FUST-SCHOEFFER PSALTER OF 1457.

THE newly-found edition of the "Missale Speciale" has already been the source of considerable controversy on the Continent. Its pedigree goes back about fifteen years, during most of which time it rested in the collection of a private library of Germany. Its owner had procured it from an antiquarian dealer, and Ludwig Rosenthal, bookseller of Munich, secured it from the former by way of an exchange. Less than three years ago it was unheard of by bibliographers. Dr. F. Falk wrote briefly of it in a supplement to Germania, November 5, 1896, and attributed the book to the press of Fust and Schoeffer. The most labored article concerning it was written by Otto Hupp in 1898, and is entitled "Ein Missale Speciale Vorläufer des Psalteriums von 1457."* It is a small folio monograph of thirty pages, illustrated with several facsimiles. Hupp not only claims that this Missale was a forerunner of the Fust-Schoeffer Psalter of 1457, the first printed book with a date, but by a subtle process of argument concludes, and would have us believe, that the volume has good claims to be the oldest known book printed with movable types. Hupp's treatise has considerable value in demonstrating the critical methods for determining incunabula. He makes out his case, however, on circumstantial evidence. Indeed, at times, even that fails him. Dr. W. A. Copinger, the noted English bibliographer, borrowed the book from Rosenthal, and described it in his "Supplement to Hain's Repertorium Bibliographicum," vol. 1., part 2, (London, 1898.) He dates it, without query, in brackets thus: "[Mogunt., Schoeffer, 1470]." In Catalogue 100, Ludwig Rosenthal offers it for sale; but no price is stated. This catalogue was issued at the close of 1898 (our copy reached us in New York on January 3 of this year.)

Rosenthal gives an extensive account of the Missal, in German, French, and English. In his German note he asserts rather positively that it is a production of Gutenberg's press, prior to his connection with Fust; but in his French and English notes he shows less certainty, and hedges under the word "probably." Henri Stein, of Paris, wrote an article for Le Bibliographe moderne, entitled "Une

*Ein Missale Speciale | Vorläufer des Psalteriums | von 1457 | Beitrag zur Geschichte der Ältesten Druckwerke | von | Otto Hupp | 1898 | Druck und Verlag: | Nationale Verlagsanstalt, Buch und Kunstdruckerei, act.-ges., München-Regensburg. [Ludwig Rosenthal, 16 Hildegardstr., Munich.] 30 p. sm. Fol.

Production Inconnue de L'atélier de Gutenberg;" which we have read only in a German translation, printed in the Börsenblatt, for January 19, 1899. Stein says he examined the volume with great care and consideration, and is convinced that it is an early product of Gutenberg's press. So far as we are aware, these gentlemen are the only ones who have written a de visu opinion of the book—and they do not furnish us with a unanimous verdict.

On the other hand we have the contributions of two competent critics who, although they have not had the book itself in hand, have, nevertheless, examined the pretensions of Hupp and others—claimants for an extraordinarily early date. G. Hölscher contributed two articles to the Allgemeine Buchhändlerzeitung, for January 26 and February 2; and an earlier one to the Börsenblatt, for January 2, 1899. His argument, summarized, is that the date of the Missal has not as yet been determined. Adolf Schmidt, of Darmstadt, in Centralblatt für Bibliothekswesen, claims that the book was printed by an inexperienced workman, probably one of Schoeffer's, and suggests as a counter argument to Hupp, that this workman may have purloined enough type to print the volume surreptitiously. Schmidt, too, would place the date of printing in the sixties. The British and Colonial Printer and Stationer, for February 23, 1899, has a short article, a mere summary without any critical acumen, entitled: "The Latest Gutenberg (?) Find." The controversy is by no means ended. Indeed, it is to be questioned whether it will ever find a settlement. Bias and view-point are not likely to be curbed in such discussions.

To return to the Missal itself, we find that it is imperfect, lacking, among others, the very important final leaves. This is an unfortunate imperfection, since one cannot divine what a colophon, if it had one, would discover. The full page measures 306 by 218 millimetres; the printed page 212 by 132 mm. It is printed in red and black, with the so-called small missal-type of the Mentz Psalter of 1457. There are 18 lines to a page; and the initial letters, from one to four lines in depth, were put in by hand by a rubricator. The volume contains about 20 varying quires. Originally, it is presumed, there were 192 leaves; but now only 176 leaves remain, and one of these is blank. Hupp estimated that this complete "Missale Speciale" contained about 207,000 letters, while the 42 and 36 line Bibles each contain over 3,000,000 letters. The volume has neither printed pagination, catchwords, or signatures; and a given manuscript paging is unreliable. The paper is good and strong, and its watermarks are bulls' heads and three hills crowned with a three-leaf clover—such as one finds abundantly during the fifteenth century. The ink is in some places a deep black, but in others has a brown-like color. Almost throughout the book the letters have been retraced by hand, to cover defectiveness of printing. The text is all in the same type, even the Canon—which is contrary to general usage. The binding, now loosened from the book, is embossed hogskin, and bears a contemporary semblance.

It may be added that the earliest hitherto known printed edition of the "Missale Speciale," without date, has been assigned to circa 1492; while the earliest dated edition was printed in 1493.

In conclusion let us say, it is a delicate undertaking to credit Gutenberg, by hypothetical evidence, with the production of this "Missale Speciale." It is a fact, indeed, that not a single work exists in which his name appears as the printer. After examining several of the facsimiles, and weighing the arguments pro and con, we have to conclude that the Gutenberg claim has not been established; and our own inclination is for a date posterior to the Mentz Psalter of 1457.

Of the Lenox Library Building, New York.

JEWISH BOOKS AT THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The American Hebrew, for March 31, contains an interesting account, by P. Wiernik, of "Jewish Literature at the New York Public Library." It is only about a year and a half ago since the Astor Library began to pay especial attention to Jewish literature, and now it contains more than 4000 volumes and pamphlets. The Jewish Department contains all the books in the library written in Hebrew and in the Judæo-German dialect as well as works in modern languages about the Jews, their history, religion, and literature. The collection includes complete sets of many periodicals, such as the Monatsschrift für die Geschichte und Wissenschaft des Judenthums, Steinschneider's Hebräische Bibliographie, Geiger's Jüdische Zeitschrift, and others equally important. The collection of the publications of learned societies is also remarkably complete and valuable. History and biography are well represented, forming especially a good working library of Jewish history, which may soon be further enriched by having added to it the collection of the American Jewish Historical Society, as was intimated in a recent address by Dr. Cyrus Adler, President of the Society. There are also a great many books that are of special interest to bibliographers, owing to the fact that they were issued at the end of the last and the beginning of the present century, from presses in Russia and Poland little known and no longer in existence. The collection is under the able administration of A. S. Freidus, a specialist in Jewish bibliography well known to Hebrew scholars in this country.

It may be interesting to note in this connection that several attempts have at different times been made by the Maskilim [self-taught Hebrew scholars] of New York to have a Jewish library of their own. In 1881 the society Shochere Sefath Eber reported in its "Ha-Meassef ba-Arez ha-Chadashah" that it succeeded in getting together 442 Jewish books as a nucleus for a future library. But both the society and the library now belong to a forgotten past. The now extinct Chebrah Shas started a library in the later eighties, of which no trace is now left. The Russian-American Hebrew Association, organized in 1891, also at one time planned the founding of a Jewish library, but the plan was never carried out. The Society for the Advancement of Hebrew Literature in the first number of its organ Nur ha-Maarabi, issued in January, 1895, stated that one of its chief objects is the establishment of a great Jewish library, but hardly any one is now able to tell what became of the society, its organ or its plans. Some time afterwards the Ohole Shem Association, organized on a similar plan, issued an appeal for the same purpose, with no better results. The Mefize Sifrath Zion, a younger literary society, has also been known to cherish the project of starting a Jewish library on the lower East Side. The only society which has so far succeeded in accomplishing something practical in this regard is the Bene Zion Society, which, owing to the reawakening of the Zionistic movement, is able to keep up a small reading-room at 201 Henry Street.

BIBLIOPHILANDERING.

"'NEVER allow your husbands to go in for bibliophilandering,' said the wife of a confirmed bibliophile to a group of sympathetic women who were having tea with her. 'If a man drinks or gambles you may be able to reform him, but you can't do anything with a bibliomaniac, and a collection of rare books can make more trouble in a family than half a dozen children.' She was joking, and everybody laughed, but she was also telling the truth," says the New York Sun. "The wives of bibliomaniacs haven't received half the consideration and sympathy they deserve. The wife of an artist has some compensations. She has a rival in art, but her husband does try to sell his precious pictures and she shares profits. The wife of a bibliomaniac has no such consolation. Her husband never sells. He only buys; and if she economizes in clothes and opera tickets she only makes it possible for her husband to come home some evening hugging a long-coveted volume and looking sheepish but triumphant. The apologetic manner of the man who comes home at four in the morning, after a night at the club, isn't a circumstance to the cringing guilt of the bibliomaniac who faces his wife with a consciousness that in his overcoat pocket is a copy of Keats which was a bargain, but which makes impossible that sable collar she has been talking about."

ROLLED CATALOGUES.

"THERE is one item connected with the mailing of booklets and catalogues," says a writer in Advertising Experience, "that is probably more generally slighted than any other, and that is the wrapper. It is a blunder to roll a catalogue. Advertisers seem to forget entirely the fact that their book must reach the hands of the prospective customer in such shape as not to have lost one iota of its attractiveness. They, in spite of knowing from experience that rolled catalogues almost invariably are a disagreeable nuisance, even though they arrive intact and are not torn in opening, will persist in sending out their own books rolled. They will spend thousands in the preparation of an expensive book, and then, to save a few dollars, they will mail their book protected in the poorest possible way."

COPYRIGHTED BOOKS PRINTED FROM AMERICAN PLATES MAY BE IMPORTED.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY SPAULDING has decided that copyrighted books printed in Europe from plates made from type set in the United States are not subject to the prohibition of importation in Section 3 of the Copyright act of March 3, 1891.

OBITUARY NOTES.

HENRI BECQUE, the French dramatist, author of "L'Enfant Prodigue," that very clever pantomime, etc., died in Paris on the 12th inst., aged sixty-two.

REV. DR. EDWARD A. TERRY, priest of St. Anne's parish, Albany, died on the 14th inst., aged fifty-seven. When the late Harold Frederic was struggling along in Utica, more than a quarter of a century ago, a strong attachment was begun between him and Dr. Terry, and when Frederic started writing novels he pictured his friend in the priest in his story, "The Damnation of Theron Ware."

HEINRICH KIEPERT, the celebrated geographer and professor at the Berlin University, died at Berlin April 21. He was born at Berlin July 31, 1818. He published a map of Asia Minor, a "Hand-atlas," an "Atlas Antiquus," with "yearly supplements," a map of the Asiatic provinces of the Ottoman empire and one of the Ottoman empire, a large atlas of the ancient world, entitled "Formae orbis antiqui," and a number of other geographical works.

E. S. PURCELL, author of the "Life of Cardinal Manning," whose death was announced by cable a fortnight ago, passed away in his seventy-sixth year. The announcement of the fact of his advanced age will be a surprise to many persons who recall the spirit, vigor, and strength with which he responded to the attacks made upon his work. It may also be brought to mind that the discussion aroused by the book greatly interested the late Mr. Gladstone, who was freely mentioned in it. According to Sir Wemyss Reid, the deceased statesman made it his chief topic of conversation for weeks, and no public event sufficed to drive it from his mind.

ALEXANDER PAXTON GOULD, stationer and publisher of law blanks, died at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 17th inst. Mr. Gould was born in New York City in 1850, and at the age of sixteen he entered the employ of the dry goods commission house of Dunham, Buckley & Co. When his brother, W. Reid Gould, died, he took charge of the latter's law blank business. This house was established in 1802 and for a long time was conducted under the name of Gould, Banks & Gould. The firm was dissolved on the death of Mr. Gould's father, when Mr. Banks became a publisher of law books and W. Reid Gould continued the law blank department of the business.

FRANCISQUE SARCEY, the well-known French dramatic critic of the Temps, died in Paris on the 15th inst. He was born at Dourdan, October 8, 1828, and educated at the Normal School. He followed the profession of schoolmaster for some time, but then turned to literature in Paris, first writing for the Figaro and then for the Revue Européenne. In 1859 he became dramatic critic of the newly founded Opinion Nationale, and in 1867 accepted a similar post on the Temps. In that capacity he wielded to the end a very wide influence over the French theatres and the theatre-going public of France. He wrote several books, among them "History of the Siege of Paris," a lively and graphic account written from a personal diary; "Le Nouveau Seigneur du Village," "Le Mot et la Chose," "Le Piano de Jeanne," "Comediens et Comediennes," and "Souvenirs du Jeunet."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

SARAH GRAND's new story is entitled "Petticoats," and forms one of the series of studies of women which began with "Ideala."

THE unsigned article on "Lawlessness in the Church," in the April Fortnightly Review, was written by E. H. Cooper, author of "Mr. Blake of Newmarket," etc.

J. M. BARRIE's sequel to "Sentimental Tommy" will be entitled "Tommy and Grizel." It is said to exhibit an artistic temperament under the influence of the passion of love.

FRANK R. STOCKTON, who for nearly twenty-five years has made Madison, N. J., his home, will remove on June 1 to the old colonial mansion, Claybourne, W. Va., which he has recently bought.

ANY one possessing a volume of poems published in 1886, entitled "Dulcie Cor," by Ford Berêton, may be interested, says the London Academy, to know that Ford Berêton and S. R. Crockett are one and the same.

THE REV. DR. EDWARD EVERETT HALE has resigned the pastorate of the South Congregational (Unitarian) Church after a service of forty-three years. It is likely that the church will offer to secure an assistant for Dr. Hale if he will withdraw his resignation.

ROBERT W. CHAMBERS's new novel, "Ashes of Empire," is not permitted to circulate in Germany, either in the original or in translation. Mr. Chambers always writes his manuscripts in pencil, very carefully. Every word is as distinct and plain as print, every punctuation mark perfect, every page spotless, neat, carefully numbered and corrected with an eraser. He never sits down to resume writing without first going over all that part of the story already written and polishing and refining it. Mr. Chambers cuts his work without mercy, frequently reducing a novel from 80,000 to 60,000 words after it has been finished and revised many times. His mania for cutting out whole pages is a joke with his friends, who assert that, unless forcibly deprived of a novel by his publishers, he would in time leave nothing of the manuscript except the title. It is said that his latest book, "Outsiders," soon to be published by Frederick A. Stokes Co., was cut from 100,000 to 60,000 words, and that only the firmness of his publishers saved the book from total extinction.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—P. K. Foley and A. J. Ochs (doing business, recently, as P. K. Foley & Co.,) have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. P. K. Foley having purchased entire interest in the business will settle all accounts payable and receivable.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Puritan Publishing Company, dealers in subscription books, has made an assignment. It was incorporated in 1893 with a capital stock of $100,000.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—A. S. Law has opened a bookstore here.

FORT WORTH, TEX.—J. S. Scheuber, bookseller, is selling out.

FREMONT, NEB.—C. B. Nicodemus, bookseller, has been succeeded by W. H. Fowler.

LEBANON, PA.—D. P. Witmeyer, who has conducted the well-known bookstore on South Eighth Street for the past thirty years, has disposed of the stand to Wesley H. Bowman, formerly principal of the Wilmington (Del.) schools. The reason given for the sale is on account of Mr. Witmeyer's failing health.

LYNCHBURG, VA.—James A. Wilkins, bookseller, has moved into larger quarters at 1024 Main Street, and has changed his firm-name to J. A. Wilkins Company.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—H. O. Washburne has bought an interest in the Dartmouth College Bookstore, which will hereafter be carried on under the name of Hatch & Washburne.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Mendel & Freedman have established a book department in connection with their big store.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Judge Company, of New York, has been incorporated with a capital of $800,000 divided into $126,000 preferred and $674,000 common stock. The directors are Charles T. Barney, A. B. Fletcher, Valentine P. Snyder, A. G. Payne, Richard Delafield, Chas. Wilhelms, David H. Bates, W. C. Clark, Louis P. Bach, and Turner A. Beall, of New York City; John M. Bailey and John A. Sleicher, of Albany, and William J. Arkell, of Canajoharie.

NEW YORK CITY.—E. L. Kellogg & Co. have been incorporated to carry on a printing business. The capital is $125,000, and the directors are Amos M., Edward L., William F., and Herbert S. Kellogg, New York; Elmer C. Sherman, South Orange, N. J.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Lockwood Trade Journal Company, of which George W. Jones is the treasurer and general manager, has succeeded to the Howard Lockwood Publishing Co. The new company will continue to publish The American Stationer, Paper Trade Journal, and "Lockwood's Directory of the Paper and Stationery Trades." Mr. Jones was for some time manager of two of the largest Western newspapers—the St. Louis Republic and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The other directors of the company are Charles H. Jones, the president; L. Alers-Hankey, the vice-president; and L. E. Jones. Col. Charles H. Jones is well known as a writer and orator. He has done considerable literary work for the Appletons, Harpers, and other publishing houses, and edited the New York World for 1893–94, and also the St. Louis Republic and St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The new company did not purchase the printing business of the old Lockwood Company. It will shortly remove its offices to the paper-trade district.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The Kohler Publishing Co. has removed from 134 North Tenth Street to 1024 Arch Street. This concern succeeded the firm of Ig. Kohler & Sons, who were for years located at 911 Arch Street. The aged founder of the house is living in retirement, unfortunately now entirely blind.

RICHMOND, VA.—The Bell Book and Stationery Co. have removed to the four-story building, No. 914 E. Main Street, recently purchased by them.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

PER LAMM, (Librairie Nilsson,) 338 Rue Saint Honoré, Paris, has just issued the "Catalogue Annuel de la Librairie Française," for 1898, edited by D. Jordell. The catalogue is divided into three alphabets, giving clue to the work by author, by title, and by subject. (300 p. 8°, pap.)

G. CIVELLI, Via Faenza 91, Florence, Italy, has just published the first number of the Bullettino di Bibliografia Giuridica Italiano Contemporanea, compiled on the decimal system by Saladino Saladini-Pilastri, who works in co-operation with the International Bibliographic Institute at Brussels. The Bullettino will include every current legal work published in Italy.

THE BOSTON BOOK COMPANY, 15½ Beacon Street, Boston, has just published as Bulletin of Bibliography Pamphlets, No. 6, a "Children's Reading List on Animals," consisting of descriptions, stories, poems, and verses relating to the chief mammals of the world. This is the reference list, now enlarged and revised, compiled by the Pratt Institute Library of Brooklyn, N. Y., for use with the large collection of pictures of animals made last winter for exhibition in the children's room. (24 p. 16°, pap., 10 c.)

"A CATALOGUE OF AUTHORS WHOSE BOOKS ARE PUBLISHED BY HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO." is a worthy specimen of the fine bookmaking of the Riverside Press. The arrangement of the main body is by authors, their works being given in chronological order. There is also an exhaustive index by titles, together with lists of the several libraries, series, and periodicals issued by the firm, and some account of the origin and character of these literary enterprises. The biographical sketches accompanying the names of the authors in this catalogue aim to supply that condensed information which a justifiable curiosity as to their personality demands. There are no portraits in this catalogue, with the exception of a frontispiece group presenting pictures of the six great figures in American literature, whose works the house publishes—Emerson, Longfellow, Whittier, Hawthorne, Lowell, and Holmes. To this list of stars of the first magnitude should be added Cooper; while to come down to more recent times, Bret Harte, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, and Edmund Clarence Stedman should be mentioned. A short history of the firm, from the foundation of the printing-office of Bolles & Houghton in 1849 to the present day, prefaces the catalogue. (205 p. 8°, bds., 25 cents.)

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.—The Burnham Antique Bookstore, cor. Milk and Washington Sts., Boston, Miscellaneous. (No. 5, 1423 titles.)—Burrows Brothers Co., Cleveland, O., Choice and rare imported books. (No. 15, 954–1432 titles.)—Francis Edwards, 83 High St., Marylebone, London, Old gardening books, old cookery books, and recipes. (No. 238, 845 titles.)—Otto Harrassowitz, 14 Queerstr., Leipzig, Skandinavische, niederländische u. englische Linguistik u. Literatur. (No. 243, 2516 titles.)—U. P. James, 127 W. 7th St., Cincinnati, O., Miscellaneous. (No. 2, 858 titles.)—M. Spirgatis, 23 Marienstr., Leipzig, Hebraica und Judaica—Aramäisch, Phönizisch. (No. 68, 1196 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE SMITH-SHAW CO., of "The Literary Shop," 143 East Fourth Street, Cincinnati, O., have in press a volume of poetry by Charles W. Tackenberg.

H. TAYLOR ROGERS, Asheville, N. C., has just ready a new issue of "Rogers's Asheville," a collection of views of Asheville and its surroundings.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY will publish in their People's Library, about June 20, "The Manxman," by Hall Caine. The American News Company has secured the entire edition of this novel in paper covers.

LEE & SHEPARD announce for the early fall "For Love's Sweet Sake: Selected Poems of Love in All Moods," edited by G. Hembert Westley; and "Camping on the St. Lawrence, or, On the Trail of the Early Discoverers," a boy's book, by Everett T. Tomlinson.

IN our notice of Richard J. Leggat we spoke of his buying at the trade sales under the name of "Horne." That was an error, as Mr. Leggat's nom de guerre was "Brag." "Horne," we believe, was the name under which Tibbals bought at the trade sales.

MRS. EMMA MARSHALL, whose death is noted elsewhere in this issue, had just completed two new stories—"A Daughter of the People" and "The Parson's Daughter and How Mr. Romney Painted Her," both of which will be published in the autumn by E. P. Dutton & Co.

E. P. DUTTON & CO. will publish next week "The House of Strange Secrets," a detective story, by A. Eric Bayly, an Englishman who has already achieved a reputation in London; also, "The Cruise of the Ocean Wave," an interesting story of a sea voyage, by W. N. Oscar.

STREET & SMITH have just published five handbooks on timely topics by A. D. Hall, entitled "Cuba: its past, present, and future," "Puerto Rico," "Hawaii," "A Life of the Pope," and "The Philippines." The material collected is said to have been written, compiled, and translated from the best sources of information.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS COMPANY, 52 Broadway, New York, have published an interesting chart of the world, showing the lines travelled by ships employed in the world's commerce. The chart was prepared by the Hydrographic Office of the U. S. Navy, and may be had mounted for 50 cents and unmounted for 25 cents.

IT is an open secret, we believe, that an authorized cheap edition of Kipling's collected works will shortly be placed on the market. The collection will include all the writings that Kipling wishes to see in print, including the "Departmental Ditties," which have recently been revised by the author. The selling agents will be the H. B. Claflin Co.

JOHN LANE has just ready a volume of highly emotional poems by Edmond Holmes, entitled "The Silence of Love," which has the ring of true poetry; and "The Duke of Linden," a novel by J. F. Charles, of which the scene is the Rhineland in the first half of the century, and of which the characters have an ancestry dating back to the eleventh century.

CHARLES ORR, (Case Library,) Cleveland, Ohio, has just issued a small volume entitled "One Hundred Mushroom Receipts," by Kate Sargeant. Owing to the present popular interest in the subject of mushrooms, and as there is no cook-book devoted exclusively to them, the present volume therefore fills a decided want and will no doubt meet with favor.

THE drawings and plates made for "Mr. Isolate of Lonelyville," by C. C. Converse, one of the books R. H. Russell expected to issue this summer, were recently destroyed by fire at a Boston electrotypers. The drawings are being remade, however, and further than a short delay in the manufacture, which will necessitate postponing its publication until fall, no harm has been done.

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY have just issued a second volume of Dr. Dennis's "Christian Missions and Social Progress." The original plan of completing this work in two volumes, made before the magnitude of the undertaking was fully realized, has now been changed, and it will appear in three volumes of corresponding size. The second volume contains more illustrations than the first. They have also just published a new volume by Dr. H. Clay Trumbull, the well-known editor of the Sunday-School Times, on the subject of questionable amusements, entitled "Border Lines in the Field of Doubtful Practices."

DAVID MCKAY, Philadelphia, has made arrangements with the American Academy of Political and Social Science, by which he will have the sale of "The Foreign Policy of the United States—Political and Commercial," containing the addresses and discussions at the annual meeting of the society, April 7–8, 1899, by professors from the leading universities, His Excellency Wu Ting-Fang, Carl Schurz, and others; also, a translation from the German by Prof. F. W. Moore of "The Outlines of Sociology," by Prof. Ludwig Gumplowicz, of Graz, Austria, a book which has received considerable attention from scholars in Europe and America.

THE GLEASON PUBLISHING COMPANY, of Fremont, Ohio, has published a book entitled "It Was Marlowe, a story of three centuries," by Wilbur Gleason Zeigler, who gives point to his theme in the following lines in his book: "On the night of the murder in the old Deptford tavern, the man who was to profit most from the false shadows thrown by the crime and its concealment was at the Boar's Head Tavern in London. This man was William Shakespeare." Although clearly a romance, Dr. William J. Rolfe, the well-known Skakespearean scholar, says of the book, "The Baconian heretics might be forgiven if they had put their mad hypothesis in the same readable form."

LITTLE, BROWN & CO. have just published a handy book on astronomy, entitled "Stars and Telescopes," by David P. Todd, professor of astronomy and director of the Observatory at Amherst College. The author's aim has been to give full and accurate information on all important phenomena of the heavens, and to include an account of all the latest discoveries. Some of the chapters treat of "The Calendar," "The Astronomical Relations of Light," and "Solar Physics," and there is one of special importance on "The Cosmogony," giving a careful exposition of Professor See's new theory of cosmic evolution. The volume contains upward of two hundred illustrations, maps, etc.

D. APPLETON & CO. have received the following letter from the sister of the late Edward Noyes Westcott, author of "David Harum," which should set at rest the various speculative opinions which have been scattered abroad concerning the supposed originals of the characters contained in Mr. Westcott's novel. Mrs. Margaret Westcott Muzzey writes: "Having frequently been asked from whom the various characters in 'David Harum' were drawn, and noticing that several people in different parts of the country assert themselves to be the originals of the hero (John Lenox) or heroine (Mary Blake,) it seems worth while to state, for the benefit of those whom it may interest, that to my certain knowledge no character in my brother's book was drawn from life. 'David Harum' may be called a composite photograph. All the other people in the book are entirely creatures of Mr. Westcott's fancy and imagination."

SMALL, MAYNARD & COMPANY have in press "The Dreyfus Story," a short book about the Dreyfus case, by Richard W. Hale, a Boston lawyer. The books now available on the subject are the work of avowed partisans of Dreyfus, and are longer than most persons, perhaps, care to read through. Mr. Hale has tried to put in handy compass enough of the broad, general facts to make a complete and easily read story of the case. He has tried to answer concisely the question, "What is it all about?" He has also given, without technical language, a little explanation of the French law bearing on the case, something which has not before been done for the general reader, but which will do more than anything else to explain the complications—the trials, retrials, and debates—of the last two years. They will publish next September F. P. Dunne's new book, "Mr. Dooley in the Hearts of His Countrymen." "Mr. Dooley in Peace and in War" is now in its 50th thousand. The 60th thousand is in preparation.

DREXEL BIDDLE, Philadelphia, expects to publish early next month "Ouida's" new volume of short stories, entitled "La Strega." He has in preparation an excellent translation of Maupassant's "Strong as Death," by Teofilo E. Comba, member of the Anglo-American firm of Truslove, Hanson & Comba; a volume of short stories, entitled "In the Bivouac of Life," by Miss Sarah P. Brooks, author of "In Divers Paths," etc.; and "Madam Paradox," a novel, by Mrs. Ormerod, author of "My Intimate Enemy." Of W. Clark Russell's novel, "An Atlantic Tragedy," 1100 copies were sold in advance of publication. In the early fall a volume of "Arctic Romances," by Albert White Vorse, will be published. Mr. Vorse was a member of Lieutenant Peary's expedition of '92, which reached about the same latitude as that attained by the second Grinnell expedition under Elisha Kent Kane in '53–'55. Mr. Vorse, also, assisted Professor Heilprin in making the changes now found on the latest maps of Greenland.

CHARLES B. HALL, New York City, has compiled, illustrated, and published in exceedingly handsome form a work entitled "Military Records of General Officers of the Confederate States," which presents 108 portraits of Confederate State Generals and Major-Generals, engraved or etched on steel or copper. The rank of each officer in the Civil War is given and his place in the United State service before the strife. All the ante-bellum records, military or civil, are set forth in strictest accordance with facts. For twenty years Mr. Hall has worked to obtain the portraits, often finding a specially desired one in a most unlikely place. Conspicuous are the portraits of Robert E. Lee, Samuel Cooper, Albert Sidney Johnston, G. T. Beauregard, and John B. Hood. Mr. Hall has prepared a monumental work which should find its place in every library that wishes to have its history of the Civil War complete. Now that the sons of the Southern heroes of the Civil War have fought shoulder to shoulder again for the United States, it is fitting that such a record of their fathers' deeds should be among the historical documents of the United States.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish immediately a volume entitled "Vassar Studies," by Julia A. Schwartz, A.M. ('96.) Miss Schwartz's collection of studies has been planned to offer, by means of emphasizing in each paper a characteristic element or quality of student life, a faithful impression of the spirit and the personality of modern Vassar. The author states her aim thus: "To embody in literary form for the alumnæ memories and impressions of their college days, and to present before the public a truthful picture of the life in such a community." She has treated of character rather than incident; yet her stories are not lacking in action nor in the picturesque background of college pastime as well as that of college work. The work will contain a dozen illustrations. They will also issue at once "Miss Cayley's Adventures," by Grant Allen, author of "Flowers and Their Pedigrees," etc. This is the obverse of the old story of the youth who starts forth with a sound heart and tuppence in his pocket to win his fortune. Mr. Allen's youth is a girl, a graduate of Girton, who is left penniless, and who is compelled to make her own way in life. Her varied experiences are told in Mr. Allen's old-time graceful manner, which won for him an international reputation. The book will contain 80 illustrations by Gordon Browne.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY have in preparation a volume entitled "Our Conquests in the Pacific," by Oscar King Davis, the correspondent of the New York Sun, whose account of the capture of Guam by our naval forces is considered to be one of the best things of the kind written during the Spanish-American war; "Active Service," by Stephen Crane, who uses as a background for his story the Greco-Turkish war; a "Nonsense Almanack," and "A Lively City o' Ligg," by Gelett Burgess; "Pabo, the Priest," a historical novel by Rev. S. Baring-Gould, which has to do with the invasion of Wales by the Norman rulers of England; "What Women Can Earn," a suggestive volume for American women and girls who are looking about them for some means of earning a livelihood, to which Miss Grace H. Dodge, Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, Thomas Hunter, and others have contributed; "Letitia Berkeley, A. M.," a novel by Josephine Bontecou Steffens, who has spent some years in the study of philosophy and medicine in Germany and France and whose experiences there have been drawn upon to some extent in the construction of her story; and a story for young people, entitled "Loyal Hearts and True," by Mrs. Charles W. Ide, whose work in this field, written under the pseudonym of Ruth Ogden, is known to thousands of American boys and girls.

FOREIGN NOTES.

MACMILLAN & CO., London, will publish in the fall an édition de luxe of Canon Ainger's edition of Charles Lamb's works, with important new letters.

HODDER & STOUGHTON, London, will publish shortly "Iona March," by S. R. Crockett, which was published serially under the title of "A Woman of Fortune."

HUTCHINSON & CO., London, will issue soon Joseph Hatton's new work, an Anglo-Spanish romance, including for the first time a love-story of Sir Walter Raleigh.

J. M. DENT & CO. have begun the issue of the Hadden Hall Library, a new series, the first volume of which is "Fly Fishing," by Sir Edward Grey. The next two volumes will be Dean Hole's "Our Gardens" and Dewar's "Wild Life and Sport in Hampshire."

THE Trustees of the British Museum, assisted by the principal librarian and director, Sir Edward Maunde Thompson, are issuing, under the supervision of Geo. F. Warner, "Facsimiles of Illuminated Manuscripts in the British Museum," consisting of miniatures, their borders and initials, reproduced in gold and colors by William Griggs, with descriptive text by George F. Warner, M.A., assistant keeper of manuscripts. The first series—fifteen plates—has just been published, and is already out of print. How many series of this undertaking will be published will depend, firstly, on the public patronage, and, secondly, upon the health and strength of Mr. Griggs. Each series is sold separately.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN STEVENS, who has been conducting a library, literary, and general book agency business in London for the last thirty-five years under the firm-name of B. F. Stevens, has taken H. J. Brown into partnership, and will hereafter do business as B. F. Stevens & Brown. Benjamin Franklin Stevens, of Vermont, went to London with Dr. Cogswell, of the Astor Library, in July, 1860, and was with his brother, Henry Stevens, as clerk until he began business on his own account in August, 1864. Henry John Brown has been with Mr. Stevens twenty-seven years as clerk, confidential clerk, and managing clerk, and since his forty-third birthday at Easter, 1899, has been co-partner with Mr. Stevens.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

COPIES ONLY remain of

"The American Catalogue,"

and, as per previous notice, the price is now raised to $25.00 in half morocco binding. The type is distributed, and no more can be printed. Any library, bookseller, or collector who has not a copy should order before it is too late.

☞ A few copies still remain of the Subject Volume of the American Catalogue for 1876, which we will supply for $12.50 in paper and $15 in half morocco. This is of especial value in libraries and bookstores which cannot now buy the Author Volume, as, except novels, juveniles, etc., it gives the same books, rearranged by subjects. The price on this work will be raised shortly.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

HAVE READY TO-DAY:

The Rough Riders.

By GOV. THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

Colonel 1st Volunteer Cavalry, U. S. A.

With 40 full-page illustrations and 2 portraits of Governor Roosevelt, and with an Appendix. Octavo, 298 pp., $2.00.

Governor Roosevelt's book has already claimed everybody's attention as in all respects a national event. It has the distinction of being an authoritative narrative, personal and intensely vivid, of a unique fighting corps. The illustrations, from photographs by experts, are especially noteworthy.

A History of the Jewish People

During the Babylonian, Persian, and Greek Periods. By CHARLES FOSTER KENT, Ph.D., of Brown University. Vol. III. of the HISTORICAL SERIES FOR BIBLE STUDENTS. Maps. 12mo, $1.25 net.

The little understood epochs treated in this volume are in many respects the most important of Biblical history, for they not only witnessed the birth and development of Judaism, but are now also regarded as the background of the majority of the Old Testament books.

The Messages of the Earlier Prophets.

Vol. I. in THE MESSAGES OF THE BIBLE. Edited by Prof. F. K. SANDERS, of Yale, and Prof. C. F. KENT, of Brown University. Square 16mo, $1.25 net.

The first volume in a new series in which emphasis is placed upon the concise, forcible, and realistic interpretation of the Bible. The books of the Bible are grouped according to a natural classification, their contents arranged in the order of appearance, and a scholarly yet popular paraphrase of their distinctive thought given in plain and expressive English.

Windy Creek.

By HELEN STUART THOMPSON. 12mo, $1.25.

A series of sketches which tell, in a straightforward and quite unconventional way, the story of a community of Colorado settlers who are new in literature. These people are characterized by Miss Thompson with an unfailing instinct for what is most poignant and humorous in them.

The Cable Story Book.

Selections for School Reading. Edited by MARY E. BURT and LUCY L. CABLE. (The Scribner Series of School Reading.) Illustrated. 12mo, 60 cents net.

This book has been prepared in response to an urgent demand from various sources for a volume of selections from Mr. Cable's most popular books for school readers.

The Poetical and Prose Works of Lord Byron.

Edited, from a new text with many unpublished additions, by ERNEST HARTLEY COLERIDGE and R. E. PROTHERO. Illustrated. To be in 12 vols. Each, crown 8vo, $2.00.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:
With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00; per 1000, $40.00.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 50 cents per copy in leatherette.

HINDS & NOBLE, Publishers, New York City

School Books of All Publishers at One Store

"Summer Reading."

To Retail Dealers:

THE SUMMER CATALOGUE, issued for twenty-one years, has been found so useful and profitable by enterprising dealers in working up business during the slow summer season, that it has become a regular feature of the trade. The twenty-second issue, with an attractive cover, in a special pamphlet adapted for imprint circulation all through the summer, will be published in connection with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY about the first of June.

The imprint editions will contain, in addition to a catalogue of guide-books and light literature for summer reading, an entirely new selection of reading-matter both of a practical and entertaining character, chiefly intended for the use and amusement of tourists, pleasure-seekers, and visitors of summer resorts.

Booksellers should remember that, while summer is usually a dull time, the sales of light literature, etc., can be pushed to make a successful business even in this season. The classes who travel are of course those who have money to spend, even in dull times, and the summer is the time when very many bookbuyers do the greater part of their reading. Booksellers at or near summer resorts should especially avail themselves of this publication, while city dealers should remember that it will also be useful to tempt stay-at-homes to make investments, or to follow up customers otherwise out of reach.

☞ Orders for imprint editions at subscription rates should be sent in at once, as the quantity is limited.

Terms for Editions with Imprint:

100 copies,	$3 50
500 "	15 00

Directions for shipping should be given with the order. If sent by mail, postage will be charged extra.

R R R

By GOV. THEODORE ROOSEVELT

COLONEL 1st VOLUNTEER CAVALRY, U.S.A.

With 40 full-page illustrations from photographs by Dwight L. Elmendorf and others, and with two portraits (one in photogravure), of Gov. Roosevelt.

Octavo, $2.00.

CONTENTS.—I. Raising the Regiment—II. To Cuba—III. General Young's Fight at Las Guasimas—IV. The Cavalry at Santiago—V. In the Trenches—VI. The Return Home—Appendices.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT'S account of the ROUGH RIDERS is naturally awaited with intense eagerness from one end of the country to the other. His book has already claimed everybody's attention as in all respects a national event. The distinguished author was, with General Wood, the organizer and commander of the Rough Riders, and he tells in his book the picturesque story from the inception of the original idea to the mustering out of the justly famous regiment. His book has the distinction of being an authoritative narrative, personal and intensely vivid, of a unique fighting corps. The illustrations, from photographs by experts, are especially noteworthy.

Price 75 cents each.

THE DREYFUS CASE.

By RICHARD W. HALE.

A brief and interesting statement of the Dreyfus case, containing what will be new to most readers, a simple explanation of those features of the French law under which the various trials and appeals have been held. Paper boards, 50 cents.

ON THE BIRDS' HIGHWAY.

By REGINALD HEBER HOWE, Jr.

One of the most beautiful of recent "Bird Books." It contains over sixty illustrations from photographs by the author and a remarkable frontispiece in colors reproduced from a painting by Louis Agassiz Fuertes. Cloth, decorative, $2.00.

THE PEDAGOGUES.

By ARTHUR STANWOOD PIER.

One of the cleverest of all the novels which have treated of the various phases of Harvard life—and unique in that it has to do with the contrasts and humors of that little-known department of the University, the Harvard Summer School.

Cloth, decorative, $1.25.

PLAIN TALK IN PSALM AND PARABLE.

By ERNEST HOWARD CROSBY.

A volume of serious and forcible verse, appealing at once to the lover of poetry and to the advocate of "a better order." Cloth, $1.50.

SEA DRIFT.

By GRACE ELLERY CHANNING.

A book of poems which ranges attractively from Italy to Southern California. Its lyric quality is notably fine and spontaneous. Cloth, decorative, $1.50.

VAGARIES.

By FLORENCE BROOKS EMERSON.

A little volume of prose fancies, appealing with curious insistence to the lover of what is rare and delicate in literature. Cloth, decorative, $1.00.

THE YELLOW WALL PAPER.

By CHARLOTTE PERKINS STETSON.

A story which has already taken rank (in the opinion of the comparatively few to whom it is familiar) in the same class as the tales of Edgar Allan Poe. Paper boards, 50 cents.

"From the first page to the last the atmosphere is that of pure romance, in which every touch is convincing. The historical personages, while sketched in firmly, receive their just values. The main characters are treated with a breadth that recalls Dumas and equals the very best of Stanley Weyman. All live, unaffectedly human. Perhaps the most successful is the Irish Viscount Barrymore, who, with his knavery, loyalty, and breezy fatuity, is a creation. The narrative grips all the way through. Mingled with stirring adventure gallantly told are scenes of quiet humor and charm. In fact, nothing but unstinted praise can be given to this singularly delightful romance."

JUST PUBLISHED:

THE LAUNCHING OF A MAN.

By STANLEY WATERLOO,

Author of "Story of Ab," "A Man and a Woman," etc.

This is one of the few late novels whose pages make good the title of the book. The author has constructed his great story on the understanding that before a man is "launched" he has some further graduating to do after receiving his sheepskin from the university. He takes his hero, duly laureated, out into the exacting world of American business life, where he fully develops his manhood.

IN THE CORN-FIELD STUBBLE.

Novels That Are Being Talked About.

NOVELS that are generally talked about may not always be of the highest literary merit, yet they must have some special quality, intellectual or otherwise, to pique curiosity and arouse interest. Not to have read them places us in the position of not knowing the latest news. Our intention is to give some account of the more recent works of fiction that have met with wide discussion and have sold largely, so that summer tourists or migrators to summer homes may have a slight guide in chosing books to carry away with them. Novels, good, bad and indifferent, are the chief literary fruits of the present season. They are being turned out by the presses in overwhelming numbers. We shall make no attempt to be critical, nor shall we name the novels in the order of their merit. Our readers may rely upon it, however, that all that we do name will be found extremely readable. Whether in all cases the reader will be made "better" by the reading we cannot insure. That he will be made "happier" is almost a certainty—for, whatever his choice may be, he is sure to be entertained.

On the top wave of popularity just at present is "David Harum," by Edward Noyes Westcott, written out of the author's own experience as a country banker for at least fifty years in Central New York. The book appeals more strongly to the masculine intellect, which has found it a rich mine of humor. Mr. Westcott, sad to record, did not live to know of the success of his one novel.

Another author who has captured the public with a first book is Charles Major, who wrote under the pen-name of Edwin Caskoden. His work, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," is a romantic story of the reign of Henry the Eighth, rich in historical details and one of the prettiest love tales of the Middle Ages yet written. The selfishness of the rich and the hopelessness of the very poor find picturesque treatment in "No. 5 John St.," by Richard Whiteing. The address stands for a lodging-house in the slums of London, in which a wealthy young baronet sometimes sought a home in pursuit of his socialistic studies. The story particularly lends itself to discussion.

Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler's first novel, "Concerning Isabel Carnaby," quickly won its way with readers of fiction. Though not without faults, its freshness and originality outweigh defects. The wit of its dialogue and its pleasant humor make it delightful reading. A second novel by Miss Fowler, called "A Double Thread," has recently been issued. Here again we are met with the extreme modernity of thoughts that so charms in "Isabel Carnaby," and also with an embarrassment of riches almost in epigrammatic sayings and repartee. Both novels are strong in character delineations taken from English middle-class life and fashionable life. The first book presents a very pleasant and apparently true picture of a Noncomformist family. Beatrice Harraden has just finished "The Fowler," upon which she has worked for a number of years. It is more elaborate than "Ships That Pass in the Night," but possesses like that novel a morbid strain. Its scene is laid in England, and it is largely a character study of a most disagreeable young man, whose mesmeric or hypnotic power is used unscrupulously. Miss Harraden recalls an American writer, Miss Ellen Glasgow, a Southern girl, whose knowledge of the seamy side of life is as marvellous as her own. Miss Glasgow's reputation was made but a short time ago with "The Descendent." Her recent novel is called "Phases of an Inferior Planet," a fourth or fifth rate Bohemia in New York City being the "inferior planet." Poor authors, struggling artists, impecunious journalists, and starving scientists are the characters. An intense love-story told with painful truthfulness has its rise and fall in this environment. The Ibsen influence is even more strongly marked in "The Open Question" than in either of the former novels. C. E. Raimond, the name that appears on the title-page, is the pseudonym of Elizabeth Robins, an American woman living in England, who has personated on the stage several of the characters of Ibsen's dramas. Her book deals with heredity, and is a special plea against the marriage of near relations and persons suffering from incurable disease. The argument is cleverly and strongly presented, but the question remains an open question at the end. Sad as is the subject, and hopelessly as it is treated, the book nevertheless abounds in most enjoyable reading-matter, and is a notably intellectual effort. The character drawing is incisive and picturesque, while the wit and wisdom in which the conversations are so rich make the rereading of many of the pages an unalloyed pleasure.

Mrs. Gertrude Atherton's "A Daughter of the Vine" is another "heredity" story, with a background of California life in the forties. "The Californians," a more cheerful story from her clever pen, deals altogether with the love affairs and social triumphs of two pretty girls. Frank Norris became known to novel-readers within the year by his "Moran of the Lady Letty." His latest and much talked about story is "McTeague." Sordid life in San Francisco, with characters taken from the lowest stratum of society, whose ignorance and vulgarity are emphasized by their love of money and pursuit of it, are what he there writes about. Mr. Frank Norris belongs to the realistic school, his Zola-like touches leaving nothing unknown of the repulsiveness of his subject. As an antidote to these pessimistic estimates of life we offer Maurice Hewlett's charming story of "The Forest Lovers," as innocent and delightful as a fairy tale, and Miss Mary Johnston's "Prisoners of Hope," both marked successes of the year, the latter being a fresh and vigorous story of Virginia in 1663, when Sir William Berkeley was Governor. "Poor Human Nature," by E. Godfrey, apparently a great lover of Wagner's music, is a most interesting story of a German tenor and prima donna before the footlights and in private life. Music lovers have a treat before them in reading the book. Mrs. Barr's "I, Thou, and the Other One" is a love-tale of the closing days of the reign of George IV. and of the beginning of the reign of William IV. "The Dull Miss Archinard," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, and "The Confounding of Camelia," by the same author, are charming stories of English home life. Mrs. Burton Harrison's "Good Americans" and "A Triple Entanglement" have been widely read; they show intimate knowledge of the ways of good society in two continents. Lily Dougall's "The Mormon Prophets" weaves a romantic narrative around Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, aiming seemingly to place both the prophet and his religion in a better light. The motive of "A Tent of Grace," by Adelina C. Lust, is the deep gulf of racial distinction that existed between the Christian and the Jew in Germany about the middle of the century. "A Duet," by Conan Doyle, is quite a departure from his usual style, being a simple domestic story charmingly told of the first year in a young couple's married life. Howells's "Ragged Lady" goes back to his early hunting ground, New England, and to his favorite New England girl. Selma Lagerlöf, a Swedish writer, has only recently had her works translated into English. Her acquaintance may be made through two remarkable novels—"Story of Gösta Berling" and "The Miracles of Antichrist," which are full of a loving kindness to all humanity. "Red Rock," by Thomas Nelson Page, is a romance of Virginia in the days of reconstruction directly after the Civil War. Picturesque romances of pure adventure are included in Munro's "John Splendid," S. R. Crockett's "The Black Douglas," Weyman's "The Castle Inn," Rider Haggard's "Swallow," Gras's "The Terror," Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau," and Richard Harding Davis's "The King's Jackal."

Among volumes of short stories that have attracted special attention, Kipling's "The Day's Work" may be first mentioned. Others in this line containing entertaining reading-matter are Long's fascinating tales of Japanese life under the title of "Madame Butterfly," Miss Brown's "Tiverton Tales," Mrs. Burnham's "A West Point Wooing," Yeats' "Heart of Denise," Wildman's "Tales of the Malayan Coast," and Williams' "The Stolen Story."

The prices of all these novels quoted may be found further on under lists of "Books for Summer Travellers," with a special heading—"The New Novels." Attention is also called to lists in this department giving new works on nature, books of travel and adventure, outdoor sports and exercises, etc. Readers should also carefully consult the advertising pages.

The Beginnings of Our Navy.

From Churchill's "Richard Carvel." (Macmillan.)

"I AM now on my way to Philadelphia to obtain a commission in the navy soon to be born."

Mr. Chase smiled. John Paul little suspected that he was a member of the Congress.

"This is news indeed, Mr. Jones," he said. "I have yet to hear of the birth of this infant navy, for which we have not yet begun to make swaddling clothes."

"We are not yet an infant state, sir," Mr. Carroll put in, with a shade of rebuke. For Maryland was well content with the government she had enjoyed, and her best patriots long after shunned the length of secession. "I believe and pray that the king will come to his senses. And as for the navy, it is folly. How can we hope to compete with England on the sea?"

"All great things must have a beginning, sir," replied John Paul, launching forth at once, nothing daunted by such cold conservatism. "What Israelite brickmaker of Pharaoh's dreamed of Solomon's temple? Nay, Moses himself had no conception of it. And God will send us our pillars of cloud and of fire. No fight ever was won by man or nation content with half a victory. We have forests to build an hundred armadas, and I will command a fleet and it is given me."

"I' faith, I believe you, sir," cried Captain Daniel, with admiration.

"What plan would you pursue, sir?" asked Mr. Chase.

"What plan, sir!" said Captain John Paul, those wonderful eyes of his alight. "In the first place, we Americans build the fastest ships in the world—yours of the Chesapeake are as fleet as any. Here, if I am not mistaken, one hundred and eighty two were built in the year '71. They are idle now. To them I would issue letters of marque, to harry England's trade. From Carolina to Maine we have the wood and iron to build cruisers, in harbors that may not easily be got at. And skilled masters and seamen to elude the enemy."

"But a navy must be organized, sir. It must be an unit," objected Mr. Carroll. "And you would not for many years have force enough, or discipline enough, to meet England's navy."

"I would never meet it, sir," he replied instantly. "That would be the height of folly. I would divide our forces into small, swift-sailing squadrons of sufficient strength to repel his cruisers. And I would carry the war straight into his unprotected ports of trade. I can name a score of such defenceless places, and I know every shoal of their harbors. For example, Whitehaven might be entered. That is a town of fifty thousand inhabitants. The fleet of merchantmen might with the greatest ease be destroyed, a contribution levied, and Ireland's coal cut off for a winter. The whole of the shipping might be swept out of the Clyde. Newcastle is another likely place, and in almost any of the Irish ports valuable vessels may be found. The Baltic and West Indian fleets are to be intercepted. I have reflected upon these matters for years, gentlemen. And I'll warrant you cannot conceive the havoc and consternation their fulfilment would spread in England."

From "Richard Carvel." Copyright, 1899, by The Macmillan Co.

A PICNIC ON THE WATER.

If the divine power of genius ever made itself felt, 'twas on that May evening, in the Annapolis Coffee House. I myself witnessed two able and cautious statesmen of a cautious province thrilled to the pitch of enthusiasm by this strange young man of eight and twenty.

BLUE SKY AND BLUER SEA.

From Bates's "Under the Beech-tree." (Houghton, Mifflin.)

BLUE sky and bluer sea,
And harebell at my feet;
Blue yet more utterly,
Why is your hue so sweet?

What fibre of my soul
Thrills at your loveliness?
Why should a tint control
My heart like a caress?

Blue sky and bluer sea,
And harebell at my feet;
How can mere color be Beyond all telling sweet?

A Negative and a Positive Ritualist.

From Mason's "A Wind Flower." (American Baptist Pub. Soc.)

EUNICE was reading aloud to her father with all gravity, but with languid interest, certain passages from "Barclay's Apology." Lifting her eyes, she saw Father Norman approaching. She had not spoken with him since Sunday.

He addressed Moses Herendean in kindly greeting, and the old man held his hand a moment in his cold, delicate fingers, looking up with kindly, musing scrutiny.

"Let me see," he said, "thy name is ——?"

"Francis Norman," was the quick response, and Eunice noted the bright, unconstrained smile which lighted up the clergyman's face. "I am almost a neighbor of yours, Mr. Herendean; that is, I am from Coalport, and I have known of your family for years."

"Not Mr. Herendean, if thee pleases," said the old man gently; "simply Moses Herendean is what I wished to be called."

"Pardon me, I should have remembered," replied the other.

"Eunice has been telling me something of thee, Francis Norman," continued the Friend, bowing a quiet acknowledgment. "I understand that thee preaches in the stone meeting-house on Minster Street; was thy father Edward Norman, the lawyer?"

It was to be noticed that while his daughters used the "plain language" only in their own family, Moses Herendean used it to all alike.

After a reply in the affirmative, Francis Norman proposed that they should take a short walk together and discuss the points of family history which were of common interest. Moses Herendean rose with a word of apology for his halting gait, evidently gratified with the attentive courtesy of his new acquaintance.

Eunice, with a long breath of relief, dropped the dull, black-bound book, and watched the two as they moved slowly across the lawn.

A singular resemblance between them, real or fanciful, struck her eye, and brought a slight smile to her lips. Both were tall, slenderly built men of a certain elegance and grace of mold; both wore a noticeable garb, the coat of peculiar cut, the broad brimmed hat, and the faces bore a subtle likeness in the peculiar stamp which a life of contemplation and self-denial never fails to give; in both men alike was the quality of distinction, that of the outer man and that of the inner spirit.

Eunice was not the only one to observe this resemblance.

"What a sight!" exclaimed Miss Arnold. "The conjunction of an orthodox Friend and a High Church priest! And the intensely funny thing about it is that, in spite of the difference of age and all, they are so much alike! Don't you see, Mrs. Mather?"

"Perhaps so," replied that lady, reluctantly, "although the resemblance seems to me entirely superficial."

"I am not sure but the two views require the same habit of mind. Those who leave Friends almost always run straight to ritualism. Both are ritualists, when you come to think of it," proceeded Miss Arnold, nothing daunted by Mrs. Mather's slightly defensive air, "only with one it is a negative, with the other a positive formalism."

"I suppose you would naturally prefer the negative variety," remarked Mrs. Mather, dryly.

"Yes, of the two," was the frank response. "Still, it is always the positive side which prevails in the world."

A Nineteenth Century Jonah.

From Bullen's "Idylls of the Sea." (Appleton.)

"ALTHOUGH counted a good swimmer even among such amphibia as our crew, I lay there supine, stretched at length upon the sea—a still, white figure grasping numbly at the fragment of bottom-board. Suddenly I became aware of a whirling in the water again, but I was in a sort of stupor of the physical faculties, though mentally alert enough.

"Then up reared above my head an object I recognized with a long wail of terror; the tremendous lower jaw of the sperm whale, bristling with its double row of gleaming teeth. Before I could gasp a prayer, or even think what was happening, I was gliding down the vast gray cavern of his throat, with but one thought left —'the descent into Hell is easy.' Down, down I went into utter darkness, among a squirming, fetid heap of snaky coils, that enveloped me, and seemed to gnaw and tear at my shuddering body, as if devouring me at second hand. Then came an explosion—a dull, rending report—that sent an earthquake shock through me and my unutterable surroundings. Immediately following this there was a convulsive upheaval, in which all the contents of that awful place took a rising motion growing faster and faster, until, with a roaring rush, came the dear daylight again.

"What ensued then for some time I do not know. A sensation of heavenly peace and calm possessed me, when, as if released from some unimaginable nightmare, I found myself floating placidly as a Medusa upon a calm sea. There I felt content to lie, without effort, conscious only of life—life so sweet that I wondered dreamily whether I was still in the body, or had passed into that blissful state imagined by speculative psychologists as awaiting man after death. Gradually my mind became clearer, my limbs felt willing to obey the impulse of my brain. I began to swim, feebly at first, almost automatically, but with increasing vigor as the significance of my position became clearer to me.

"I had swum but a short distance when the blessed sound of my shipmates' voices greeted my ears, but from my lowly position I was unable to see them, until one of them gripped me by the arms, dragging me into the boat among them.

"Then I learned without surprise that I was the only survivor of my boat's crew. Every one of my fellows had disappeared before the horror-stricken gaze of the men in the other boats, who, being but a short distance astern of us, had witnessed the whole tragedy. It appeared that we had attacked a cachalot in the act of devouring one of the gigantic cuttle-fish, or 'squid,' upon which these cetaceans feed, and of which it is most probable no mortal eye has yet beheld a full-sized specimen. For they inhabit the middle depths of oceans, never coming to the surface voluntarily."

Lowell's Summers at Whitby.

From Hale's "James Russell Lowell and His Friends." (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

For his summer holiday, however, Lowell could run across the ocean and visit his English friends in the country, or go back to his pleasant Whitby surroundings. Whitby had for him a peculiar charm, and one really wishes that he had been in the mood at some time to make a monograph on Whitby, so interesting are some of the references which he makes to it in his letters:

"I am really at Whitby, whither I have been every summer but 1885 for the last six years. This will tell you how much I like it. A very primitive place it is, and the manners and ways of its people much like those of New England. The people with whom I lodge, but for accent, might be of Ashfield. It is a wonderfully picturesque place, with the bleaching bones of its Abbey standing aloof on the bluff and dominating the county for leagues. Once, they say, the monks were lords as far as they could see. The skeleton of the Abbey still lords it over the landscape, which was certainly one of the richest possessions they had, for there never was finer. Sea and moor, hill and dale; sea dotted with purple sails and white (fancy mixes a little in the purple, perhaps;) moors flushed with heather in blossom, and fields yellow with corn, and the dark heaps of trees in every valley blabbing the secret of the stream that fain would hide to escape being the drudge of man."

We shall find this "hiding of the stream" again. "I know not why wind has replaced water for grinding; and the huge water-wheels green with moss and motionless give one a sense of repose after toil that to a lazy man like me is full of comfort." "I wish you could see the 'yards,' steep flights of stone steps hurrying down from the west cliff and the east, between which the river, whose name I can never remember, crawls into the sea." The river appears to have been the Esk River, which Lochinvar swam where there was no ford.

A year afterward Lowell writes from Whitby: "I am rather lame to-day, because I walked too much and over very rough paths yesterday. But how could I help it? For I will not give in to old age. The clouds were hanging ominously in the northwest, and soon it began to rain in a haphazard kind of way, as a musician who lodges over one lets his fingers idle among the keys before he settles down to the serious business of torture. So it went on drowsily, but with telling effects of damp, till we reached the Falling Foss, which we saw as a sketch in water colors, and which was very pretty.

"Thunderstorms loitered about over the valley like 'Arries on a Bank Holiday, at a loss what to do with their leisure, but ducking us now and then by way of showing their good humor. However, there were parentheses of sunshine, and on the whole it was very beautiful."

'Tilda in the Art Galleries.

From Whiteing's "No. 5 John Street." (Century Co.)

WE have visited the National Gallery—for the first time in 'Tilda's life. She proposed that we should take nuts with us, but I discouraged it; though I afterward caught her nibbling crumbs of cake from her pocket, as though to fill a void of interest in the school of Urbino. She was greatly impressed by the beauty of the staircase, and by the decoration of the rooms, and her first explanation was: "Oh, mother! don't the paint make you feel good!" I took this to be her untutored tribute to the way in which the rich glowing colors, in their entirety, were harmonized by the suffusion of soft light from the roof. Nor was she insensible to the beauties of the collection in detail. Her test in art of all kinds, I find, is literal truth—verisimilitude of imitation. She lingered long before a fruit-and-flower piece, and observed with satisfaction that there were no grapes of that quality in the street shade, and that to get them you must go to the West End shops. She judged the most spiritual compositions from this point of view, and by the simple rule of fixing her attention on the one accessory she did understand, and asking herself, or me, if it looked like nature. Where the picture failed in this, martyrs aspired to heaven and angels sang them into glory in vain. For this reason she was about to reject the entire school of Florence as unworthy of attention until she caught sight of a shepherd, in Botticelli's "Nativity," whose nose is twisted on one side in the ardor of an angel's congratulatory embrace. "It's the gristly part as gives," she remarked, simply; "I've seen 'em go jest like that." She praised this part of the composition, but she objected to the parting of the ass's mane as "too O. K. for a moke." Having caught this critical chill, I am afraid she missed the effect of the rapture of joy which pervades the entire work. The school of Venice was scarcely more fortunate in her esteem, owing to an oversight of the painter of the "Family of Darius," which led her to condemn one of his accessory figures as "not much of a monkey." In contemplating the artless simplicity of pose, or the oddity of costume in some of the earlier works, she with difficulty resisted a temptation to open mockery. She pronounced the "Ulysses" of Pinturicchio a "cure;" and at sight of the "Jan Arnolfini" and his lady, she frankly gave way, taunted the male figure on the shape of his hat, and indulged in a fit of laughter which drew upon us a severe glance of the attendant. A neighboring "Venus and Adonis" seemed to excite her indignation, and she turned from it muttering that the painter "ought to have had a month." My look of disappointment seemed to strike her with remorse for a certain want of gratitude on her part. She sought to right herself, therefore, by remarks of an appreciative nature, by which I was infinitely touched. If they were not very much to the purpose, they were certainly well meant. Thus, in Bellini's "St. Jerome in His Study," she commended the extremely lifelike drawing of the shoes; and her entirely favorable verdict on the immortal "Virgin and Child" of the Florentine master was: "He do seem to enjoy hisself, the kid!"—in unmistakable reference to the energy of the infant in the act of nutrition.

But she atoned for all these mistakes by her behavior before the great "Pieta" of Francia. She paid an unforced tribute of awe to its majesty of sorrow by standing perfectly still before it for five minutes, without either eating a sweetmeat or speaking a word.

Oxford in the Middle of the Sixties.

From "Sights and Scenes in Oxford City and University." (Cassell & Co., Limited.)

THE Goths were at the gates, and the colleges generally had already begun hospitably to build lodgings for their entertainment. I fear Merton set the example (at least after a considerable interval previously) of these erections. Christ Church built its huge and, in comparison with Merton, not hideous front towards the river exactly during the years of my time; Balliol, I think, followed next; and then they all went helter-skelter, till it seems the once trim front lawn of Trinity is shut out from the eyes of men, and half the high westward of St. Mary's has been transformed by an irruption of Brasenose. To remember the Angel is now almost as rare as to be on the side of the angels; and something like five undergraduate generations have passed since they widened Magdalen Bridge to give a tramway room. Few who see the present ruin of the Broad Walk can imagine what it was, not three decades ago, though, of course, it was nothing like perfect even then, and in one of the plates that follow I observe tumblers on the table of a hall apparently prepared for dinner! Is it possible that the undergraduates of the present day drink out of tumblers instead of from the college plate? Did the last Commission make them sell it? Have they presented it to the town in that fever of fraternization which, I understand, was the greatest glory of Mr. T. H. Green to have brought about? I cannot answer these questions; but I can quite understand why no "Anatomy of Melancholy" has proceeded from Oxford of late years: if undergraduates have to drink out of tumblers instead of silver, or even (if agricultural depression and the multiplication of men require it) authentic pewter itself.

Let it not, however, be supposed that there is a tone of depression other than agricultural about these remarks. I confess that I am not sorry that I was at Oxford in May, 1865, instead of May, 1895. 1295 (for 1265 would have been too early by a few years) might have suited me better still. But still I am disposed to think that there is nobody at the present day more to be envied than an Oxford undergraduate of twenty in such a month of May as we have partly had. The observation has, I think, been made more than once before that though it would be the height of bad taste in an Athenian (the term is not merely Dryden's, it is as old as Lyly) to extol his mother University at the expense of others, it is legitimate to call attention to this fact, that those others very rarely seem to excite in their own nurslings the peculiarly fanatical affection which "Athens" does in all the best of hers. There may be other towns, university or cathedral, which possess individual set pieces of greater landscape beauty—this position if not affirmed need not be denied. But where, from Exeter to Durham, and from Canterbury to Carlisle, from the towers that look down on Severn to those that border on Cam and Ouse, will you find anything like the variety of the charms of Oxford to the eye.

Doing It For the Baby.

From "The Greater Inclination." (Scribner.)

SHE was very pretty when I first knew her, with the sweet straight nose and short upper lip of the cameo-brooch divinity, humanized by a dimple that flowered in her cheek whenever anything was said possessing the outward attributes of humor without its intrinsic quality. For the dear lady was providentially deficient in humor: the least hint of the real thing clouded her lovely eye like the hovering shadow of an algebraic problem.

I don't think nature had meant her to be "intellectual;" but what can a poor thing do whose husband has died of drink when her baby is hardly six months old, and who finds her coral necklace and her grandfather's edition of the British Dramatists inadequate to the demands of the creditors?

Her mother the celebrated Irene Astarte Pratt had written a poem in blank verse on "The Fall of Man;" one of her aunts was dean of a girls' college; another had translated Euripides—with such a family, the poor child's fate was sealed in advance. The only way of paying her husband's debts and keeping the baby clothed was to be intellectual; and, after some hesitation as to the form her mental activity was to take, it was unanimously decided that she was to give lectures.

They began by being drawing-room lectures. The first time I saw her she was standing by the piano, against a flippant background of Dresden china and photographs, telling a roomful of women preoccupied with their spring bonnets all she thought she knew about Greek art. The ladies assembled to hear her had given me to understand that she was "doing it for the baby," and this fact, together with the shortness of her upper lip and the bewildering cooperation of her dimple, disposed me to listen leniently to her dissertation. Happily, at that time Greek art was still, if I may use the phrase, easily handled: it was as simple as walking down a museum gallery lined with pleasant familiar Venuses and Apollos. All the later complications—the archaic and archaistic conundrums; the influences of Assyria and Asia Minor; the conflicting attributions and the wrangles of the erudite—still slumbered in the bosom of the future "scientific critic." Greek art in those days began with Phidias and ended with the Apollo Belvedere; and a child could travel from one to the other without danger of losing his way.

THE CHEERFUL COMMUNITY OF THE POLYPODY.

Mrs. Amyot had two fatal gifts: a capacious but inaccurate memory, and an extraordinary fluency of speech. There was nothing she did not remember—wrongly; but her halting facts were swathed in so many layers of rhetoric that their infirmities were imperceptible to her friendly critics. Besides, she had been taught Greek by the aunt who had translated Euripides; and the mere sound of the αἰς and οἰς that she now and then not unskilfully let slip (correcting herself, of course, with a start, and indulgently mistranslating the phrase,) struck admiring awe to the hearts of ladies whose only "accomplishment" was French—if you didn't speak too quickly.

A SKI PARTY IN SUMMER.

How We Kept the Queen's Jubilee.

From Jackson's "A Thousand Days in the Arctic." (Harper & Brothers.)

May 24, 1897, Monday.—We arrived back at the hut at 12.30 A. M., having done ninety-two miles in three marches. It was snowing heavily, with thick mist, as we ascended the east glacier from Gunter Bay. We had some food directly we got back, as we felt simply ravenous after our scanty feeding and long marches, and then turned in and slept the clock round like rocks. We never enjoyed sleep more! Armitage and I got our gear, which was soaked with salt water, into the hut, and hung it up to dry. I then set to work to develop negatives taken on our journey to Cape Cecil Harmsworth, which I am agreeably surprised to find undamaged, although all the unused plates and films are spoiled.

As we were on the point of having dinner about 9 P. M. a bear appeared at the flag-staff, no doubt attracted by the waving jack hoisted in honor of the Queen's birthday and the sixtieth year of her reign. We had spent nearly three years up here, only once having had communication with the outer world in all that time, and were not very certain of the dates. Still, we did know it was about sixty years since she ascended the throne. The dogs, however, scared the bear before we got a shot, and although I followed him as far as the big berg to the southwest, he soon increased his distance from me and took to the open water.

We had a bottle of the little that remained of the few bottles of champagne sent us last year for dinner, and rum and milk afterwards followed to drink the Queen's health. Her birth day no doubt has been kept by us farther north than anywhere else in the world.

We feel especially loyal to-day, and we are all gratified that we have been able to give her name—Queen Victoria Sea—to the frozen ocean to the north of these islands.

I proposed the toast, "The Queen, God bless her," which we drank with enthusiasm.

The climate is very Arctic here, but no warmer or more loyal hearts can be found than amid the snows and ice of this silent, frozen land of the north. May her flag extend from pole to pole!

Commerce and the Muse.

From Norris's "Giles Ingilby." (Drexel Biddle.)

ARTHUR REYNELL was not, in truth, a very happy man, although he passed for being one of those to whom Fortune has shown herself exceptionally kind. He was known to have inherited a considerable fortune, he enjoyed a great literary reputation, his acquaintance included all the most distinguished personages of the day, and if he was without domestic joys, the inference was that he preferred to be without them, since he could unquestionably have married well, had he been so minded. He had (when he liked) a singularly pleasant and winning manner; but it was also within his capacity to be so chillingly polite that his popularity was not quite universal. However, there was nothing chilling about his reception of young Ingilby.

"I am very glad you were able to come," he said simply; "it is so much more easy to make oneself understood by word of mouth than by letter."

"Your letter was delightfully, gloriously explicit," Giles declared, laughing.

"Well, you gathered from it, I suppose, that I am anxious to secure you as a regular contributor; but I want to say rather more than that. Can you discuss matters of importance while you are eating?"

"Of course," answered Giles.

"Ah! at your age, no doubt, and with your physique—— As for me, I am ancient and dyspeptic; but the fact is that I have an engagement at ten o'clock, so I must break through rules for once."

His rules apparently did not include doing justice to an admirably served little dinner, which he scarcely touched. He talked the whole time, and was so helpful, as well as complimentary, in what he said that his guest was fairly entranced.

"You should try your hand at prose, though," he concluded. "In some respects it is more difficult than poetry; but then it is also a good deal more lucrative, which is a point that most writers have to take into account. Have you attempted anything in that way?"

Giles shook his head. "I don't know whether I could," he answered. "What sort of prose do you mean?"

"Oh, it doesn't really matter much. Fiction, essays, short descriptive articles—fiction, of course, for choice. With your imagination and your knack of hitting upon the right words to use, you ought to take to story-telling as a duck takes to water. And the thing pays, you see: there is a living to be made out of it."

"Do you really think, then," asked the young man breathlessly, "that it would be possible for me to adopt literature as a profession?"

Mr. Reynell laughed. "Now I am in a hole," he remarked; "now I am upon the brink of offering what may prove disastrous advice to a fellow-creature who has done me no injury—bien s'en faut! Nevertheless, since I invited you here with the deliberate intention of doing that very thing, I won't equivocate. Yes; I do think so. Naturally, I can't speak with absolute assurance as yet; but I should very much like you to try. Is there time for trying when the day's grind in the city is over?"

"Oh, heaps of time!"

"Why not try, then? Ultimately you might relinquish that city grind, which you need not tell me is abhorrent to you. I am a prejudiced counsellor; for, personally, I find the whole pleasure of my life in literary art, and nothing else seems to me to be worth while. In reality, many other things may be better worth while—the acquisition of a big income amongst them. All depends upon the point of view of the individual concerned."

Giles neither aspired to a big income nor had the remotest prospect of ever earning one out of tea. He hastened to make this announcement, and followed it up by a rapid, but exhaustive sketch of his hitherto uneventful life. "You see," he observed in conclusion, "that twenty songs or sonnets in the course of the year would bring me in two or three times as much as I am likely to get from my uncle for making a hash of his correspondence. And then if I could make a little by prose-writing, into the bargain!"——

Reynell nodded. "But, for heaven's sake, don't throw the tea overboard until we can see our way!"

Things Are Not What They Seem.

From "The Real Lady Hilda." (Buckles.)

"I MUST say, Gwen," said my stepmother, "that you are a girl that it is a pleasure to dress; you have quite a grand air, such a remarkable carriage."

"Carriage!" I repeated, with a laugh of scorn. "I wish I had a carriage—yes, and a pair—so that I need not intrude upon the Miss Bennys; three in a fly are too many."

"Oh, and do take care of your gown, darling, lift it up well, and hold the train in your lap. This is only a dress rehearsal for Christmas Day, and I should be so vexed if you got your frock tumbled or soiled."

I promised in the most solemn manner to take the greatest care of my toilet, and refused for the tenth time the eagerly pressed loan of her diamond brooch, "just to give the lace a finish."

"My dear Emma, I am going to this party to please you; I am wearing lace and satin fit for a duchess to please you; but I really must decline the diamonds. As it is, people will be quite sufficiently tickled, when they compare my position and surroundings; they will say all sorts of nasty things."

"They will say you are a princess in disguise!"

"Pooh! they will say I am a pauper who has been swindling some London dressmaker! I shall make myself small, and sit in a corner, and try and escape notice," and I sailed into the sitting-room.

Here I found an immediate opportunity of testing the effect of my transformation. Mrs. Gabb, who (as an excuse to obtain a private view) was making up the fire, dropped the poker with a frightful clang, as she ejaculated:

"Good laws—laws me! Well—I never!" which I accepted as a very handsome tribute to my splendid appearance. In another five minutes the glories of my costume were concealed beneath a long fur-trimmed evening cloak (yet another relic of Emma's wealthy days,) and I found myself shut into a fly, with my back to the horse, and driving away with the two Miss Bennys and Mrs. Montmorency Green, their cousin. I ventured to thank them, rather timidly.

"It is so very kind of you to take me," I murmured; "and I am quite ashamed of crushing you like this."

"Well, you must only make yourself as small as you can," said the elder, with asperity.

"We would do anything to oblige dear Mrs. Cholmondeley; and she made quite a point of our taking you with us."

"I suppose it will not be a large party?" I hazarded, still more timidly.

"Not a large party! We shall have half the country; every one will be there. The Moate is such a dear old place—splendid pictures, grand reception-rooms—and the Cholmondeleys do everything so well; they gave three weeks' invitation, so it's sure to be extra smart!"

Three weeks' invitation, and I had been asked at the eleventh hour! I now shrank into my corner of the fly and relapsed into silence, feeling as small as Miss Benny could possibly desire.

He Only Laughed.

From Risley's "Men's Tragedies." (Macmillan Co.)

AFTER admiring the view from the top of the hill, we all sat down among the boulders and had lunch. The serving-men spread tablecloths on the flat rocks and balanced dishes in the crannies. We made a delightful cold lunch. But I thought that I caught a glimpse once of Sigurd holding Evangeline's hand under a napkin. That was her name, Evangeline; but everybody called her "Vangy."

We straggled back to the castle in couples. Sigurd and Vangy went side by side. He carried her alpenstock over his shoulder, and there was a gayer, more boyish ring in his laugh than I had ever heard before.

When we arrived at the castle, I went up to his room with him and seriously remonstrated. He laughed! He laughed at me, at whom he had never laughed before!

"My dear young friend," I said, seating myself in front of the fire, "now kindly listen while I give you a little most excellent advice."

He leaned against the mantelpiece, with his hands in his pockets, and I joined my finger tips over my white vest, and began.

"Women," I commenced, "are like sauces; they should only be partaken of in conjunction with a heavier substance. A sauce without the meat would be an abomination! So, when a man allows a slip of a girl to hold his whole heart and attention, it is an unnatural and ridiculous exaggeration! There should be ambition, self-respect, patriotism, learning, anything you will, as the principal course. Woman is an entrée; or, to use another simile, woman bears the same relation to man that the mantel ornaments bear to the clock. The man makes the hours important. The woman waits to be admired. The greatest folly of the ages is the exaggerated view of the importance of woman! Oh, yes, they are delightful creatures—no man could possibly be more chivalrous toward them than I am! But to sacrifice one's whole career to them! Bah! To live for them! Bah! To die for them even! Bah! Bah! Bah!"

"But," remonstrated Sigurd, "I am not wasting my career, and I am not sacrificing my life, and I am not expecting to die!"

"Oh, my dear friend," I responded, "only too well I see what you are going to do! You are going to make love to her! If you would have the sense to assure her before you begin, that there is nothing in it, that she is not to think that anything will come of it! But no! You will do it seriously! That is the trouble! A woman is worth making a comedy of, sometimes; but a tragedy, never!"

It was no use. He only laughed. I got up and went into my room mournfully.

The Twins Decide It.

From Mrs. Burton Harrison's "A Triple Entanglement." (J. B. Lippincott Co.)

STUART'S decision, announced to his mother during a visit to New York, caused Mrs. Wallis's imagination to inflame with a simultaneous desire for foreign parts. It was so long since they had been abroad, she had so much enjoyed her last trip with him, she could take Bessie and the children and stop "anywhere" while Stuart followed his own devices; they would shut up Hillhurst, their large, comfortable country house on the Hudson, and indulge themselves in a summer change of scene. To this suggestion "Bessie," the widowed Mrs. Staines, proving highly acquiescent, the plan was quickly matured. They secured deck staterooms for the whole party on one of the favorite ocean liners; trunks covered with old curling labels were brought down from the storeroom, and Stuart was in the act of cabling to engage some good quarters he knew of for their stop in London, when his mother, looking much worsted from conflict, came into the library, where he sat at his father's desk.

"My darling boy, we shall have to give it up."

"Give what up, mother?" asked Stuart, filling in his cable blank leisurely.

"Going to London—the journey—the whole thing. For the last hour Bessie Staines and I have been discussing it with the twins. Tom says he won't leave his pony, and Toto declares she will never be happy away from her dogs and Hillhurst. They have so much sensibility, those two, I am afraid we can't induce them to change their minds. After all, Hillhurst has everything to entertain them, and they keep so well there, and in such splendid spirits, and lead such fine outdoor lives, I hardly wonder at their feeling as they do."

"How old are the twins, mother?" inquired Stuart, mildly.

"Eight in June, the 21st, and larger than most children of their age," answered the lady, promptly. "You know poor Bessie spent that summer after her husband died in lodgings in England; and the little creatures remember just enough of what a contrast it was to Hillhurst and their free life in a big country place. Bessie is doing her best to persuade them to go, but I don't know. They are so very resolute. And whatever Tom says, Toto backs up, and sticks to it through thick and thin. It is really Tom's pony that is our difficulty; we might get over Toto's dogs."

"Perhaps we could prevail upon the captain of the Campania to set aside a cabin for Tom's pony. But it looks to me as if you would have to leave your rebellious angels at home with Bessie, and let them keep the house and servants going at Hillhurst till your return."

"I might do that," replied Mrs. Wallis, in a lukewarm tone.

"And you and I will try to revive some of the days of our journey three years ago."

"Yes, dear, that was a very happy time for me. All went so well, and we had such capital weather on the whole. I have known summers abroad when tourists had their umbrellas up six days out of seven. Fancy lodgings, or a hotel, with Tom and Toto during a week of rain! When I think of such a chance, I almost believe the darlings know better than we what they ought to do."

"HENCEFORWARD SHE WOULD LIVE FOR OTHERS."

Fashionable Solution of Social Problems.

From Merriman's "Prisoners and Captives." (Fenno.)

"I have never," Easton said, as he seated himself, "been at an entertainment of this description before. I am only a beginner. In our country we manage things differently; and I cannot yet understand how so much talking and so little action can benefit any cause."

"But," said Miss Winter "you are not new to England. There is nothing about you to lead one to that conclusion."

"Thank you," he replied, gravely. "My clawhammer coat was made in Piccadilly, so I suppose it is all right."

He looked down at the garment in question, and dusted the sleeve lightly with a perfectly gloved hand.

"Do you like it?" he inquired, simply.

Miss Winter was becoming interested. She therefore quelled a sudden desire to laugh, and answered—

"Yes; it is a a very nice coat."

"I am not," he said, after a pause, "new to England, but I have not moved—I think you call it—much in London society. I suppose the men do all the moving in your society?—they seem to. The women sit mostly still and wait till the men come to them. With us it is different."

"The women," replied this womanly lady, "are beginning to move with us, and, from what I have seen of the result, I rather incline towards the old policy of sitting still."

He turned and looked at her with a little nod. There was in his queer, restless eyes a distinct glance of approval.

"Yes," he said, "yes. So I should surmise. Our ladies are very fascinating, and very clever, and all that, but—but the young men do not seem to make such a pretty show of loving them as we read of in olden times. At all events they do not continue to show them that regard which, I remember, my father showed towards my mother."

"I myself am a humble admirer of the womanly school."

"And I," added Easton. "Now," he continued, after a pause, "do tell me. What do all these good people think they are doing here to-night?"

"They think, firstly," replied Miss Winter, "that they are getting their names into the fashionable society papers. Secondly, that their natural or artificial adornment is creating a distinct impression. Thirdly, and lastly, that they are assisting in some definite way towards the solution of a problem of which the rudiments are entirely unknown."

"Then in England, as well as in my own country, charity is a recognized plaything of society," suggested Easton.

"Yes. We take it up in late autumn and winter, when there are no races, nor regattas, nor lawn-tennis parties."

"Ah, then," said the American, "society is very much the same here as elsewhere."

WITH HESITATION THE OFFICER RAISED THE BRIM OF THE LARGE HAT.

A Morning's Work.

From Frederic's "The Market Place." (Stokes.)

THORPE remained on his feet, looking down at the pair with satisfied cheerfulness. He took a slip of paper from his pocket, to support a statement he was making.

"I'm forever telling you what a strain the City is on a man in my position," he said—"and to-day I had the curiosity to keep an account of what happened. Here it is. I had thirty callers. Of those, how many do you suppose came to see me on my own business? Just eight. That is to say, their errands were about investments of mine, but most of them managed to get in some word about axes of their own to grind. All the rest made no pretence at all of thinking about anybody but themselves. I've classified them, one by one, here.

"First, there were six men who wanted me to take shares of one sort or another, and I had to more or less listen to what they tried to make out their companies were like. They were none of them any good. Eight different fellows came to me with schemes that haven't reached the company stage. One had a scheme for getting possession of a nigger republic in the West Indies by raising a loan, and then repudiating all the previous loans. Another wanted me to buy a paper for him, in which he was to support all my enterprises. Another wanted to start a bank—I apparently to find the money, and he the brains. One chap wanted me to finance a theatrical syndicate—he had a bag full of photographs of an actress all eyes and teeth and hair —and another chap had a scheme all worked out for getting a concession from Spain for one of the Caroline Islands, and putting up a factory there for making porpoise-hide leather.

"Then there were three inventors—let's see, here they are—one with a coiled wire spring for scissors inside a pocket-knife, and one with a bottle, the whole top of which unscrews instead of having a cork or stopper, and one with an electrical fish-line, a fine wire inside the silk, you know, which connects with some battery when a fish bites, and rings a bell, and throws out hooks in various directions, and does all sorts of things.

"Well, then there was a man who wanted me to take the chairmanship of a company, and one wanted me to guarantee an overdraft at his bank, and two who wanted to borrow money on stock, and one parson-fellow who tried to stick me for a subscription to some home or other he said he had for children in the country. He was the worst bounder of the lot.

"Well, there's twenty-seven people—and twenty of them strangers to me, and not worth a penny to me, and all trying to get money out of me. Isn't that a dog's life for one?"

From "The Market Place." Copyright, 1899, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

"SURELY YOU MUST HAVE SAID EVERYTHING NOW THAT YOU WISHED TO SAY."

"I don't know," said Miss Madden, contemplatively. "A lady may have twice that number of callers in an afternoon—quite as great strangers to all intents and purposes—and not even have the satisfaction of discovering that they had any object whatever in calling. At least your people had some motive: the grey matter in their brain working. And besides, one of them might have had something to say which you would value. I don't think that ever happens among a lady's callers; does it, Edith?"

Edith smiled, pleasantly and yet a little wistfully, but said nothing.

"At any rate," Thorpe went on, with a kind of purpose gathering in his eyes, "none of those fellows cost me anything, except in time. But then I had three callers, almost in a bunch, and one of them took out of me thirty thousand pounds, and another fifteen thousand pounds, and the third—an utter stranger he was—he got an absolute gratuity of ten thousand pounds, besides my consent to a sale which, if I had refused it, would have stood me in perhaps forty or fifty thousand pounds more. You ladies may thank your stars you don't have that kind of callers!"

The sound of these figures brought a constrained look to the faces of the women. Seemingly the subject was not to their liking.

Katydids.

From Badenoch's "True Tales of the Insects. (Dutton.)

AMID the teeming exuberant insect orchestra of the American fields in autumn may be heard the notes of the Katydids, the most notorious of the singing Locustids—essentially American. There are several species of them—they belong, indeed, to several genera—but the song of all is supposed to suggest, more or less, the words of their popular name. Katy-did, katy-did, or, with variations, "O-she-did, katy-did-she-did," vociferates the garrulous "testy little dogmatist." Green leapers from leaf to leaf and from branch to branch, they might far more appropriately be called tree-vaulters than grasshoppers. Riley thus describes the music of the angular-winged Katydid, Microcentrum retinerve, the commonest species in the Western and Southern States: "The first notes from this katydid are heard about the middle of July, and the species is in full song by the first of August. The wing-covers are partially opened by a sudden jerk, and the notes produced by the gradual closing of the same. The song consists of a series of from twenty-five to thirty raspings, as of a stiff quill drawn across a coarse file. There are about five of these raspings or trills per second, all alike, and with equal intervals, except the last two or three, which, with the closing of the wing-covers, run into each other. The whole strongly recalls the slow turning of a child's wooden rattle, ending by a sudden jerk of the same."

From the setting of the sun till he begins to shed his rays in the east, these noisy choristers, during their most active period, will have it, with never an hour's remission, that "Katydid"—the species being so numerous that the sound as it comes from the woods is one prolonged rattling. Scudder states that these katydids sing by day and night, but their day song differs from that of the night. "On a summer's day it is curious to observe these little creatures suddenly changing from the day to the night song at the mere passing of a cloud, and returning to the old note when the sky is clear. By imitating the two songs in the daytime, the grasshoppers can be made to respond to either at will; at night they have but one note."

Malayan Sports.

From "Tales of the Malayan Coast. (Lothrop Pub. Co.)

THE first of the sports was a series of foot-races between Malay and Kling boys, almost invariably won by the Malays, who are the North American Indians of Malaysia—the old-time kings of the soil. They are never, like the Chinese, mere beasts of burden, or great merchants, nor do they descend to petty trade, like the Indians or Bengalese. If they must work they become horsemen.

Next came a jockey race, in which a dozen long-limbed Malays took each a five-year-old child astride his shoulders, and raced for seventy-five yards. There were sack-races and greased-pole climbing and pig catching.

Now came a singular contest—an eating match. Two dozen little Malay, Kling, Tamil, and Chinese boys were seated at regular intervals about an open circle by one of the governor's aids. Not one could touch the others in any way. Each had a dry, hard ship-biscuit before him. A pistol shot and two dozen pairs of little brown fists went pit-a-pat on the two dozen hard biscuits, and in an instant the crackers were broken to powder.

Then commenced the difficult task of forcing the powdered pulp down the little throats. Both hands were called into full play during the operation, one for crowding in, the other for grinding the residue and patting the stomach and throat. Each little competitor would shyly rub into the warm earth, or hide in the folds of his many-colored sarong, as much as possible, or when a rival was looking the other way would snap a good-sized piece across to him.

The little brown fellow who won the fifty-cent piece by finishing his biscuit first simply put into his mouth a certain quantity of the crushed biscuit, and with little or no mastication pushed the whole mass down his throat by sheer force.

The minute the contest was decided, all the participants, and many other boys, rushed to a great tub of molasses to duck for half-dollars.

Successful or otherwise, after their powers were exhausted they would suddenly pull out their heads, reeking with the molasses, and make for the ocean, unmindful of the crowds of natives in holiday attire who blocked their way.

Then came a jinrikisha race, with Chinese coolies pulling Malay passengers around a half-mile course. Letting go the handles of their wagons as they crossed the line, the coolies threw their unfortunate passengers over backward.

Tugs of war, wrestling matches, and boxing bouts on the turf finished the land sports, and we all adjourned to the yachts to witness those of the sea.

Strasburg in the Franco-Prussian War.

From "The Garden of Swords." (Dodd, Mead & Co.)

"It is hard to be a woman when those in whom you trust have ceased to be men. At Wörth I believed that nothing in all the world could defeat the armies of France. I dare not tell you all I saw there. Strasburg cannot be like that. Nothing will ever be like that again."

"It will be as our destiny writes it, my child. And we must have faith, faith always. It is all a woman can offer—her whole heart and soul and sympathy for those who suffer that she may have a home. Let us give unstintingly while me may."

They went together to the windows of the house to watch the marching of a regiment, which went by with banners flying and drums rolling, and all the glorious panoply of war. It was a sunny Sabbath morning of August, and in all the steeples the bells were calling the citizens to Mass. When the troops had passed and the cheering for the "Mother of the City," whose white hairs the soldiers had seen at the window, had died away, Beatrix quitted the house and went alone toward the Minster; for thither the citizens now turned, and there the great service of the day was to be held. She had never seen so many people abroad in the streets of Strasburg before; nor did they wear the air of those who feared for themselves or their houses. Women anticipated coming victories in colors which would not mourn the past irrevocable. Men walked in groups and spoke of the brave General Uhrich. Bands played everywhere. The cafés were scenes of mirth and excitement. In the churches themselves priests spoke of a nation fighting God's battles, and moved their flocks to a frenzy of applause. Old soldiers told of Jena and of Italy. Little children carried long swords at their belts, and their watchward was "Aux armes."

By these she passed quickly, for the bells told her that the service was about to begin. In the cathedral square she found a great concourse of people moved by some savage impulse she could not at first understand. Ferocious cries were raised; she heard the smashing of glass in the doors of a café, and saw bludgeons and sticks raised threateningly above the heads of the people. A man at her side told her that they had caught a spy and were about to kill him. They had taken him in the Minster itself. He had run to the café for shelter, but they would settle his affair, and he would go back to Germany no more. Had it been possible, she would have drawn back from the crowd; but the human wave engulfed her and carried her forward, almost to the doors of the house. Half fainting in the press, unable to make her voice heard, she became unwillingly the spectator of that tragedy of the Sabbath. She saw the white-faced man in the porch of the house; she heard his frenzied appeals for mercy. Foamed dripped from his lips, his hair was dishevelled, his coat torn, his hands upraised to protect his face; but no one thought of pity or of justice. Men struck at him with their fists; a drunkard threw a glass at him and cut his forehead; the blows of canes fell upon his face as whips that strike a board; blood flowed from his nostrils. He fell fainting, and those about him beat out his brains as he lay senseless upon the floor.

The people swept by with clamorous shouts. The spy was dead. Strasburg had settled with him. For an instant, Beatrix reeled back against the window of the café. Everything in the cathedral square swam before her eyes. She thought that she would fall, but a strong arm was placed suddenly about her waist, and a voice that she knew whispered a word in her ear.

"Silence," was the word; "I have brought the news I promised you."

She looked up at the man's face and read it through his disguise. Brandon North himself was at her side.

A Host on His Own Preserve.

From Hamblen Sears' "Fur and Feather Tales." (Harper.)

It is probable that there is no greater test of the gentleman in a man than when he acts the host on his own preserve. Any one may be a gentleman when he is in a theatre fire or on a wreck at sea. He may even keep his instincts of chivalry in a football game; but when he can take a friend for a day's shooting over his own uplands and keep his anger, his sarcastic smiles, his involuntary criticism, and his gun from interfering until three o'clock in the afternoon, he has actually proved himself worthy to stand by the side of a Bayard or a Charlemagne.

My host did himself proud. He gave his guest the left side of the day so that he could swing easily as the quail jumped off to the left. The guest missed—Heaven knows how many times he missed that day—and George did not crack a smile. I fired at a bird that was half a mile away two or three times and spoiled his shot, and the dogs only received a reprimand. Finally I fired at a cock-pheasant and missed him because of the unforeseen interference of a large tree, and when he brought him down my host insisted that it was my shot which laid the bird low. Any other mortal, after such occurrences, would either have thrown down his gun and stamped upon it, or would have shot his guest; but George did neither. He only said that sometimes you could shoot and sometimes you could not, and that this was his bad day.

However, we started out a second time, and at perhaps fifty yards from the house, as we were in the act of breaking our guns to put in a couple of cartridges, one of us nearly stepped on something that moved, rose, fell, rose again higher, and then made a prodigious noise among the bushes. This particular person stood a moment in amazement as a huge creature rose and flew directly away from him. He did not even close his gun until the agonized cry of the host of "Shoot! shoot, man! Why don't you shoot?" came indistinctly to his ears. Then he closed his gun as the bird disappeared. The dogs stood stock-still and cocked one eye at him, and George put another cartridge into his gun, remarking in his placid tones that that was pretty sudden—so near the house, you know! It was a pheasant, a beautiful cock, and we watched him sail along in the sunflower-field over a hedge to the northwest, and then started for his second hiding-place.

Only a Philanthropist to Blame.

From Cy Warman's "Snow on the Headlight." (Appleton.)

One day a desolate looking striker was warming his feet in a cheap saloon when a well-dressed stranger came and sat near him and asked the cause of his melancholia. "I'm a striker," said the man; "and I have had no breakfast. More than that, my wife is hungry at home and she is sick, too. All day yesterday I begged for work, but there was nothing for me to do. To-day I have begged for money to buy medicine and food for her, but I have received nothing, and now my only hope is that she may be dead when I go home to-night, empty handed and hungry."

The stranger drew his chair yet nearer to that of the miserable man and asked in a low tone why he did not steal.

"I don't know how," said the striker, looking his questioner in the face. "I have never stolen anything and I should be caught at my first attempt. It'll be easier anyway after she's gone, and that won't be long; she don't want to live. I think she has almost ceased to care for me, for of course she blames me for going out with the strikers, but how's a man to know what to do?"

The switchman went over to the bar where a couple of non-union men were shaking dice for the drinks. He recognized one of them as the man who had taken his place in the yards, but he scarcely blamed him now. Perhaps the fellow had been hungry, and the striker knew too well what that meant. Presently, the switchman went back to the stove and began to button his thin coat up about his throat.

"I'm dead broke myself," said the well-dressed stranger, "but I'm going to help you if you'll let me."

As the striker stared at the stranger the man took off a sixty-dollar overcoat and hung it over the switchman's arm. "Take it," he said, "its bran new; I just got it from the tailor this morning. Go out and sell it and bring the money to me and I'll help you."

When the striker had been gone a quarter of an hour the well-dressed man strolled up to the bar and ordered a cocktail. Fifteen minutes later he took another drink and went out in front of the saloon. At the end of an hour he ordered another dose of nerve food and sat down to think. It began to dawn upon him that he had been "had," as the English say. He had been waiting nearly two hours when the switchman came in. "I had a hard time finding a purchaser," explained the striker, "and finally when I did sell it I could only get twelve dollars, and they made me give my name and tell how I came to have such a coat. I suppose they thought I had stolen it."

"And you told them that a gentleman had given the coat to you to sell because he was sorry for you?"

"Yas, I gave them a description of you and told them the place."

"That was right," said the gentleman, glancing toward the door. "Here are two dollars; come back here to-morrow and I'll have something more for you—good-by." And the philanthropist passed out by a side door which opened on an alley.

The striker gripped the two-dollar bill hard in his hand and started for the front door. All thought of hunger had left him now, and he was thinking only of his starving wife, and wondering what would be best for her to eat. Two or three men in citizens' dress, accompanied by a policeman, were coming in just as he was going out, but he was looking at the money and did not notice them. "There goes the thief," said one of the men, and an officer laid a heavy hand on the striker's shoulder.

"Did you sell an overcoat to this gentleman a little while ago?" asked the policeman.

"Yes," said the striker g'ancing down at the two dollars he still held in his hand.

"And yer sthold dot coats fun mine vindo," said a stout man, shoving his fist under the switchman's nose.

A SUMMER DAY ON THE SKAGUAY.

"A gentleman gave me the coat in this saloon," urged the striker. "Why, he was here a moment ago."

"Ah! dot's too tin," laughed the tailor; "tak' 'im avay, Meester Bleasman, tak' 'm avay," and the miserable man was hurried away to prison.

That night while the switchman sat in a dark cell his young wife lay dying of cold and hunger in a fireless room, and when an enterprising detective came to search the house for stolen goods on the following morning, he found her there stiff and cold.

Of course no one was to blame in particular, unless it was the well-dressed gentleman who had "helped" the striker, for no one, in particular, was responsible for the strike. It may have been the company and it may have been the brotherhood, or both, but you can't put a railroad company or a brotherhood in jail.

A Solemn Betrothal.

From "The Secret of Fougereuse." (Marlier, Callanan.)

WHILE Robert was speaking, Isabelle turned, little by little, towards him.

"My lord of Villepreux,' she said, as Robert knelt before her to hear her decision, "my lord of Villepreux, you and I have nothing to do with light and idle talk. My truthfulness shall be equal to yours. If you would owe your bride neither to some debt of thankfulness, nor to some assurance given in her name; if you wish to leave her to the free choice of her heart"——

There Isabelle's voice failed her. She stopped in despite of herself, and reddened, and breathed hard. Villepreux's forehead bent lower, like that of a man who resigns himself to the death-sentence.

"Well, my dear one," Guy prompted her, "what must become of Villepreux, if he would owe his bride to the free choice of her heart?"

The sister laid her little trembling hand in her brother's. "Then let him receive this hand from you, Guy! and tell him that I had vowed it should never be given to any other."

"Robert," Fougereuse continued solemnly, "here is my last legacy, my treasure. I pass it to him who is worthiest."

The young man pressed to his lips, again and again, the hand so sweetly accorded him. He could not answer.

"Come, my Father," Guy called to the hermit, "come and consecrate this betrothal by the preliminary rite of the Church. Isabelle must be able to say to the King: 'Sire, I am bound before God.'"

The aged monk came forward, and after a short, simple exordium, he questioned the lovers. The vows were pronounced, two rings were blessed and made to serve, and their lives were joined in a sacred link which no human power could break.

"Noël!" cried Loïc. "Honor to the affianced wife of the Lion! And may that fox of a Moulny die now of rage and spite!"

Fougereuse silenced the enfant terrible with a gesture. Then he embraced Isabelle, holding her long against his breast, and at last he placed his sister's hand again in that of his friend.

"Take her, Robert, my brother; she is yours. The feud between us is indeed destroyed. May the Lord God Himself be our bond of union, and cement forever the alliance between your line and ours! . . . Good-by, Isabelle. I confide you, without one fear, to your Lion-heart. Tell the King that my last thought"——

"Guy, why should you talk thus?" Villepreux remonstrated. "Have you sworn to act like a defenceless sheep, who runs to death? I shall not suffer it. My Thieves are mine yet, and I and they will attempt to save you, be it by attacking the royal troops, contending for your life with the very executioner, or snatching you alive from the burning stake!"

"Isabelle," said her brother, "rather shall you be my ambassadress, since the King appears to have preserved his good will towards you. Here is a ring which he gave me, in a moment of friendly confidence. He engaged never to refuse any request of mine, should this be presented to him in my name. I will intrust it to you. Bring it to His Majesty, and add only this: 'Sire, Fougereuse claims the performance of the royal promise: he demands to be heard before he is condemned.' Go: and God be with you. And you, Father, be pleased to return to the Right Reverend Abbott, and report to him what you have seen; for the hour to act is at hand."

Within a few moments, Robert, the lady Isabelle, and the hermit had quitted the prison. Hours later, Artauld entered.

The Record of the College Men.

From Roosevelt's "The Rough Riders." (Scribner.)

We drew recruits from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and many another college; from clubs like the Somerset, of Boston, and Knickerbocker, of New York; and from among the men who belonged neither to club nor to college, but in whose veins the blood stirred with the same impulse which once sent the Vikings over sea.

Harvard being my own college, I had such a swarm of applications from it that I could not take one in ten. What particularly pleased me, not only in the Harvard, but about Yale and Princeton men, and, indeed, in these recruits from the older states generally, was that they did not ask for commissions. With hardly an exception they entered upon their duties as troopers in the spirit which they held to the end, merely endeavoring to show that no work could be too hard, too disagreeable, or too dangerous for them to perform, and neither asking nor receiving any reward in the way of promotion or consideration.

Some of them made appeals to me which I could not possibly resist. Woodbury Kane had been a close friend of mine at Harvard. During the eighteen years that had passed since my graduation I had seen very little of him, though, being always interested in sport, I occasionally met him on the hunting field, had seen him on the deck of the Defender when she vanquished the Valkyrie, and knew the part he had played on the Navajoe, and, in her most important race, that otherwise unlucky yacht vanquished her opponent, the Prince of Wales's Britannia. When the war was on, Kane felt it his duty to fight for his country. He did not seek any position of distinction. All he desired was the chance to do whatever work he was put to do well, and to get to the front; and he enlisted as a trooper. When I went down to the camp at San Antonio he was on kitchen duty, and was cooking and washing dishes for one of the New Mexican troops; and he was doing it so well that I had no further doubt as to how he would get on.

My friend of many hunts and ranch partner, Robert Munro Ferguson, of Scotland, who had been on Lord Aberdeen's staff as a lieutenant but a year before, likewise could not keep out of the regiment. He, too, appealed to me in terms which I could not withstand, and came in like Kane to do his full duty as a trooper, and like Kane to win his commission by the way he thus did his duty.

I felt many qualms at first in allowing men of this stamp to come in, for I could not be certain that they had counted the cost, and was afraid they would find it very hard to serve—not for a few days, but for months—in the ranks, while I, their former intimate associate, was a field officer; but they insisted that they knew their minds, and the events showed that they did. We enlisted about fifty of them from Virginia, Maryland, and the Northeastern States at Washington. Before allowing them to be sworn in, I gathered them together and explained that if they went in they must be prepared not merely to fight, but to perform the weary, monotonous labor incident to the ordinary routine of a soldier's life; that they must be ready to face fever exactly as they were to face bullets: that they were to obey unquestioningly, and to do their duty as readily if called upon to garrison a fort as if sent to the front. I warned them that work that was merely irksome and disagreeable must be faced as readily as work that was dangerous, and that no complaint of any kind must be made; and I told them that they were entirely at liberty not to go, but after they had once signed there could then be no backing out.

Not a man of them backed out; not one of them failed to do his whole duty.

The "Yes" Flag.

From "Transatlantics." (Brentano's.)

THERE are various kinds of objectionable people in this world. Their sins range all the way from flattering to horse-stealing. But there is one vice which is more practically disagreeable than all the others put together. I refer to souvenir-collecting.

There is nothing sacred to collectors. They would chip pieces from the ghost in "Hamlet," could he be found, with the same composure with which they secrete their unsuspecting host's salt-spoons and sugar-tongs at a tea-party.

Girls develop this vice as well as men; perhaps more so. As long as they confine themselves to hitting off fragments from ancient tombstones while the guide is not looking, nobody cares. But the moment they encroach on the prosaic, living present, they come into conflict with a number of well-established customs.

The girl I am telling you of was witty, bright, and pretty, and she stole souvenirs. She had never been on an ocean steamer before, and therefore she had decided that she ought to have something to remember her first trip by. But everything was screwed or tied fast, except a few articles that would hardly add to the charm of a young girl's boudoir.

After the girl had unsuccessfully roamed about the ship for four days with the souvenir craze strong upon her, something happened: a wave dashed over the port bow of the ship. It wiped away everything in its path, and left remnants of one of the life-boats clinging to the davits.

Then it climbed into the box holding the signal-flags, and from this point took a hand in the destinies of the girl. In this way: It thoroughly water-logged the signal-flags, and necessitated their drying the next day.

The officer who had charge of this (I have forgotten whether his grade was one or two, but he was good to look upon, and also in love with the girl, having known her before he went to sea) ordered the flags to be strung along to dry on a rope stretched parallel with the deck, and about three feet above it.

In the code each consonant of the alphabet is represented by a flag. There is one which marks the letter "C," and also means "yes." The officer had shown this particular flag to the girl the day before, because it was the initial of her Christian name.

The morning when the flags were hung out to dry was chilly; but the girl, possessing a superabundant amount of vitality, came on deck and saw her chance. The wind must have frozen her intellect, for realizing that she was alone, she came to the conclusion that there were flags enough for the ship, plus one, and that that particular one had been placed there providentially for her to steal; only she did not call it by that ugly term.

The "yes" flag, which, as I said before, was also the initial of her name, was hanging there among the others, but she soon had it hidden under her ulster.

A few hours later a steamer passed and asked a question by flags, and there were replies by flags. Then the other steamer, not satisfied, drew up another color combination, and our captain politely prepared to do the same. The "yes" flag was to occupy a prominent position in this reply, but the "yes" flag could not be found, as it reposed at that moment in the girl's stateroom.

The captain said several miserable things about the officer, who, it seems, had these minor details of the ship's wardrobe in charge. He also expressed a desire that the officer might go to ——, but there is no reason for repeating, as the scene was painful enough at the time, and long remembered by those who had the misfortune to be in the neighborhood.

When the captain had made it clear to all about him that they were unfit for everything except eternal damnation, he double-reefed his temper and ordered up another flag combination, which did quite as well as the one he had first intended to fly. Then he took another look at the compass and forgot all about the incident.

Roger Williams in Unsheltered Exile.

From "Mistress Content Cradock." (A. S Barnes & Co.)

"Do you see yonder woods?" Archer asked, indicating a path towards the south.

"Yes."

"It was there that Roger Williams spent his first night of unsheltered exile."

"And you were with him?"

"Yes; but what was it to me—a lad used to court the elements for naught but pleasure? But to him—his heart bound to his people, his head weary with thought and struggle, his love hurt with wounds met in the house of his friends, his shoulders bowed beneath the burden of reproach!"—the young man's voice trembled, and he paused.

"Tell me further," said Content, gently.

"The heathen of the forest was kinder to him than were they in the bonds of Christian fellowship; for the non-believer made him welcome when those of his own household of faith sent him forth. It was cold—cold with the very coldness of death—and he might have warmed himself at many hearths had he but respected less the sanctity of his own conscience; he was hungry, and he might have been fed at many tables had he but admitted that some may give and others only take. He wandered, lost in the dreary sameness of untrodden forest, because he would not follow the leadership of blind guides!"

Archer had risen, and a stern indignation swept his words in a current so impetuous that Content was thrilled by his emotion; he was no longer the somewhat literal youth she had jested with. His eyes were sad with the same sadness that now and then looked forth from those of his leader and friend. Again she perceived that resemblance between them that was rather spiritual than physical.

"But how should they know?—they did not know—" she stammered. His eyes fell upon her with a certain scorn that seemed, for the moment, to be for her.

"They knew that winter is cold," he said, slowly; "that wild beasts are in the forest; that bread lies not in the path that a wanderer makes through the wilderness; that the endurance of a man unspared and ungrudged in the service of his God, cannot forever withstand cold, hunger and exhaustion. They knew these things, and they sent him forth. And the Lord led him to a pleasant place; but it was from out the shadow of a great weariness."

Content's eyes were full of tears; she shivered in the warm rays of the sun; looking at the patches of snow in the hollows, she felt their cruel, wet chill.

"I knew not," she half whispered; "it was a wrong. And you were with him," she said again; "and you saw him. And you have listened to my levity and my reproaches, and you rebuked me not—till now."

Archer's face softened. "And I rebuke thee not now," he said; "I do but tell thee. Yes, I was with him, and what think you? That he railed at the severity of those at whose hands he had received exile? Nay, Mistress Content, from the lips of yonder man who was driven forth a second time to find a home, there fell not a word of bitterness against those whose will it was. They were in his eyes men who stood ever before the Lord, though they saw not all things clearly, even in the light of His presence."

"Truly he is one among many," murmured Content.

JUNE.

From Whiting's "From Dreamland Sent." (Little, Brown & Co.)

SUMMERS may come, and summers may go,
But never another will be, I know,
So full of greenness and fragrance and bloom,
So laden with sunshine and rare perfume,
So full of its mystic, intangible lore;
Oh, there never was summer like this before!

The summers that wait in the coming years
May be full of sadness and full of tears;
The starry nights that are now so fair
May be darkened then by a weight of care,
And the sunshine and song, the greenness and glow,
May change to sorrow and trial, I know.

Ah, love! the summer a year ago
Was full of blossoming grace, I know;
The sunshine sifted through swaying trees,
The lilies beckoned the wandering breeze;
But a voice that is now my music, I know,
Had not called through the silences one year go.

So the summers may come, and the summers may ago;
Nothing can shadow this golden glow.
Never from out my life shall fade
This love that is perfect and undismayed;
For on through the years we together shall go,
Though there never come summer like this below

A Gruesome Inspiration.

From Stacpoole's "The Rapin." (Henry Holt & Co.)

"LIGHT a candle, Toto, whilst I build up the fire."

"There are no candles," said Toto, hunting about, match in hand.

"True—I forgot," cried the poet, running into the little bedroom adjoining, and returning with a night-light in a soap-dish; "I used them all to-day."

"Why, you don't burn candles in the daylight?"

"Indeed," said Gaillard, "I do. When I am working I always close the shutters and work by candlelight. My ideas are like moths; daylight dispels them, candlelight attracts them. They are like gray moths, the color of decay; could you look in when I am at work you would perhaps see them flitting about my head—revelling around their maker. Bon Dieu! this bellows is broken. Toto, hand me that bundle of wood. I have written by a night-light. 'Satanitie' was written by a night-light, finished in the first rays of the dawn; that book was written at a single sitting in one night of sheer madness."

"I know; you told me so the other day," replied Toto, whilst Gaillard, his hat still on his head, and his frock-coat hanging round him like a skirt, squatted on his hams before the fire, putting pieces of stick upon it with finger and thumb, whilst the flames leapt up and, assisting the feeble flame of the night light, illuminated the room.

The carpet was blue, the tablecloth red, the curtains maroon rep. Sundry German engravings adorned the walls. One represented an angel in a long chemise, saying, evidently, "Coosh!" to a lion in a den, whilst Daniel, with a head four sizes too large, stood by with an air of attention. Another, Tobias being haled along by an angry-looking seraph to the music of cherubs playing upon wooden harps and seated upon wooden clouds. Another, Ananias dying apparently of strychnine.

In a bookshelf close to the mantel stood a volume of Schopenhauer, Baudelaire's "Fleurs de Mal," and ten volumes by Gaillard—that is to say, two volumes of each of his works; twinlets delicately bound, some gray as grisettes, but "Satanitie," ash-colored, with a black devil dancing on its back.

"Why," said Toto, glancing at Daniel, "do you keep those odious prints in your room?"

"I don't keep them," said Gaillard, rising with a distracted air, and wiping his fingers on his coat. "My poverty keeps them; they are part of the furniture. Look at the carpet, look at the curtains—what a background! I am like a butterfly pinned to an outrageous tapestry, an indecent arras; they are my cross. I took them up with the rooms. Why do I remain in the rooms? They are haunted, Toto, by a man called Mirmillard. He was an opium-eater, and lived by writing for the Quartier Latin. You know the Quartier Latin? It is a farouche little journal of sixteen pages or so, and appears monthly—or is it quarterly? He blew his brains out just where you are sitting now; the hole was extant in the wall a month ago, but I had it stopped up with plaster. Have I seen his ghost? Many times; it is one of my inspirations, and that is why I endure those terrible curtains, that terrible carpet, and—ah, mon Dieu!—those terrible pictures. Toto, lend me your cigarette case; I will take three, and make you some coffee; I have all the implementa in this cupboard. Fanfoullard is not coming, it seems. No matter; I will seek him to-morrow myself. To-night, perhaps, if we are lucky, we may see Mirmillard. He appeared to me only three nights ago, and the gash in his throat gaped."

"I thought you said he blew his brains out?"

"He completed the work with a razor," said Gaillard, putting the little kettle on to boil. "But enough of Mirmillard. These cigarettes are very good. Let us talk of flowers."

Lawless Readings and Fortune Telling.

From "A Tent of Grace." (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.)

ALL day Saturday she could read. The contents of the Herr Pastor's bookshelves were at her disposal. There she rioted to her heart's content. Heaven only knows what that young brain absorbed and brooded over the rest of the week. Kant, Schlegel, Schiller, Heine, Goethe, Bulwer, all were mixed up in a heterogeneous jumble. If the Herr Pastor had known, his fine silky gray hair would have stood on end. He thought she confined herself to the light works of fiction which had been Fritz's own particular property when he was her age, the beautiful Rhine legends, works of chivalry, a careful selection of Sir Walter Scott, books of travel, German history, simple biographies of celebrated men and women. She saved up her kreutzers and commissioned Müller, the carrier, with many vows of secrecy, to buy her a pocket edition of Schiller's poems. She knew them by heart, but she went to bed and rose again with this precious little volume hidden in her breast. The same carrier brought a liberal supply of books and magazines once a fortnight to the Herr and Frau Pastorin from Cologne. That was always a feast day to Jette. Such books as were thought suitable for her, she was allowed to read. Secretly she devoured them all. Once Babbett found "Ernest Maltravers" under her pillow, and suspecting something wrong, threatened to tell the Frau Pastorin. Babbett, good soul, never read anything herself, except the cards, which she punctually consulted every Friday before going to bed. In a moment of good nature, she had confided this secret to Jette, who was a great deal awestruck by this necromancing. Each Friday night of the new moon she reverentially tiptoed into Babbett's room, where, by the dim light of a tallow dip, they crouched like a pair of conspirators, breathlessly alert for the slightest noise, while they revelled in the dim mysteries of the future. Jette sat shivering at the foot of the bed, wrapped in an old quilt, while Babbett perched on a stool, the cards spread out on a little table before her. Only Minka, who had attached herself to Jette and slept on the rush-bottomed chair near her bed, was the sole witness of these secret conclaves; and Minka, of course, could not tell, and would not if she could. Babbett was perfectly well aware that the Herr and Frau Pastorin would have strongly disapproved of these proceedings. So when she threatened Jette with exposure, that young damsel spiritedly promised to retaliate; whereat complete rout and vanquish of the old peasant woman; and Jette was left in undisturbed possession of her lawless readings.

IN FRANCONIA NOTCH.

From Whiting's "From Dreamland Sent." (Little, Brown & Co.)

CLOUD-CROWNED mountains and mists of light
Shining fair through the summer night;
Starry sheen just trembling through
Exhalations of evening dew;
The lingering gleam of the golden mist
Threaded with amber and amethyst;
The lessening light of the summer tide
Where mountains and valley are glorified;
Clouds of sapphire and clouds of pearl,
Ruby-tinted, their wings unfurl.
Beautiful temples that seem to wait;
Portals of gold at the Heavenly Gate;
Topaz and chrystal are the walls,
And over them all the glory falls.

Bicycles vs. Horses.

From Miss Pool's "Sand 'n' Rushes." (Stone.)

Yes, we had a pleasant gallop down that lonely road, and the occupants of the two or three carriages we met did not look upon us as if they saw deformed creatures disporting themselves in a strange way.

We saw no bicycles until we turned on to a fine, wide highway, a strip of State road that had been macadamized, and that consequently was dear to the heart of the wheelman. Here we began to feel old-fashioned, for here the wheels were coming and going, and young men in sweaters and long wool stockings, lying down with the stomach well over the steering bar, rolled up their eyes pityingly at us who were siting upright, and who were not pedaling for dear life.

It was only a transient strained glance that they could give us from crimson, sweat-grimed faces. They looked as if they were undergoing some kind of torture, but I knew that really they were happy, and were pitying us. So we exchanged pity.

Under a pine tree there was a pump and a trough of water. Also under this tree there leanded two bicycles and near them sat two girls. They wore dust-gray short skirts and knickers, their hats were on the ground beside them. Their faces were red; but a red face, even in a girl, is not an infallible sign of unhappiness.

Our horses walked up to the trough and put their noses in, drinking a little, and then splashing their lips about in a sort of luxury. The sun was hot by this time. The girls were eating doughnuts and oranges. We two looked at those two, and we all smiled. Then one of them approached with a folding cup in her hand. She paused at Amabel's side and asked:

"Won't you have a drink yourself? You look so red and tired."

"Thank you," said Amabel, "I am thirsty. And," she added, smiling, "we were just pitying you and your friend for looking so red and tired."

She took the cup and drank.

"It must be awful to be bounced up and down like that," said the girl, as she brought me a cup of water.

"Oh, but," said Amabel, as I drank, "we can keep our legs still. And we don't intend to bounce—much."

"You can't help it," remarked the girl who had not spoken, and who now rose and came forward. She had a half-eaten doughnut in one brown hand. The other hand she put on The Thane's mane, combing it with her fingers.

"You've got to bounce more or less. Just awfully unhealthy. I would not ride horseback for a thousand dollars. I should have a weak spine again. I'm wheeling partly for my spine now. Come into the country for my spine. Learned to row for my spine; but I don't row now, I'm biking it—can't do everything; got to have some time to sleep. Why, for more than a year I've just lived for my spine. What do you live for?" glancing up in an apparently incidental way at me as she put the question.

"I? Oh, just now I'm living for a kitten. We must live for something, you know."

The Anglo-Saxon 'Lieance.

From "Mr. Dooley in Peace and War." (Small, Maynard & Co.)

"YOU an' me, Hinnissy, has got to bring on this here Anglo-Saxon 'lieance. An Anglo-Saxon, Hinnissy, is a German that's forgot who was his parents. They're a lot iv thim in this counthry. There must be as manny as two in Boston; they'se wan up in Maine, an' another lives at Bogg's Ferry in New York State, an' dhrives a milk wagon. Mack is an Anglo-Saxon. His folks come fr'm th' County Armagh, an' their naytional Anglo-Saxon hymn is 'O'Donnell Aboo.' Teddy Rosenfelt is another Anglo-Saxon. An' I'm an Anglo-Saxon. I'm wan iv th' hottest Anglo-Saxons that iver come out iv Anglo-Saxony. Th' name iv Dooley has been th' proudest Anglo-Saxon name in th' County Roscommon f'r many years.

"Schwartzmeister is an Anglo-Saxon, but he doesn't know it, an' won't till some wan tells him. Pether Bowbeen down be th' Frinch church is formin' th' Circle Francaise Anglo-Saxon club, an' me ol' frind Dominigo that used to boss th' Ar-rchery R-road wagon whin Callaghan had th' street contract will march at th' head iv th' Dago Anglo-Saxons whin th' time comes. There ar-re twinty thousan' Rooshian Jews at a quarther a vote in th' Sivinth Ward; an', ar-rmed with rag-hooks, they'd be a tur-rble thing f'r anny inimy iv th' Anglo-Saxon 'lieance to face. Th' Bohemians an' Pole Anglo-Saxons may be a little slow in wakin' up to what th' pa-pers calls our common hurtage, but ye may be sure they'll be all r-right whin they're called on. We've got together an Anglo-Saxon 'lieance in this wa-ard, an' we're goin' to ilict Sarsfield O'Brien prisident, Hugh O'Neill Darsey vice-prisident, Robert Immitt Clancy sicrety an' Wolfe Tone Malone three-asurer. O'Brien'll be a good wan to have. He was in the Fenian r-raid, an' his father carrid a pike in forty-eight. An' he's in th' Clan. Besides, he has a sthrong pull with th' Ancient Ordher iv Anglo-Saxon Hibernyans.

"I tell ye, whin the Clan an' th' Sons iv Sweden an' th' Banana Club an' th' Circle Française an' th' Pollacky Benivolent Society an' th' Rooshian Sons of Dinnymite an' th' Benny Brith an' th Coffee Clutch that Schwartzmeister r-runs an' th' Tur-rnd'ye-mind an' th' Holland Society an' th' Afro-Americans an' th' other Anglo-Saxons begin f'r to raise their Anglo-Saxon battle-cry, it'll be all day with th' eight or nine people in th' wurruld that has th' misfortune of not being brought up Anglo-Saxons."

The Great Ball Game.

From "The Launching of a Man." (Rand, McNally & Co.

THEN came another struggle, and the City men did well, for, at the end of the ninth inning the score stood: University 20, City 20, and there must be another inning. To quote again from the University publication: "Now the work is sharp and short—the friends of the contesting nines at one moment dancing, yelling, throwing their hats for joy, and at the next, with lugubrious faces, sitting in the depths of despair. . . . One tally beats the University, high into the air goes the ball, holding its course close to the foul line toward the left. What a cheer greets the successful batter as he strains every muscle for the home! But other eyes see the ball not at all, they are gazing at the white figure running with inconceivable rapidity across the field. At length the lines of vision of the City men and of the University men meet as the high fly drops into Mayo's hands. Full fifty yards he runs and then takes the ball almost at his feet. What a yell of triumph from the University men! Again it is a tie. Then came the struggle Titanic." And the University journal, even in its exuberance of spirits, did not much exaggerate. The inning to follow must be a test.

Then happened, for a longer time than is required for the ball games of to-day, what was excellent to see. The University nine was of the college athletic sort, which simply means clean, well-built young gentlemen who have practised vigorously a certain sport, and who, in a straight-away manner, came into a strange land, free as gladiators, to do their best.

It had been a tie in the ninth inning, a tie in the tenth inning, and in the eleventh all depended at the final stage, after none had been made by the City, upon what the captain of the University nine, who chanced to be then at the bat, did in the great emergency. It was worth while looking at him then. He was nervous, and his hands shook until they picked up the ashen thing, the bat, fit thing for a strong man's hands to clasp. Then he seemed to forget his nervousness. He became another man. He stood poised, keen-eyed, virile, tense, an expectancy of muscle with mind in it, as the ball, a flashing mist, came. He struck once and missed. He seemed dazed a little, but set his teeth. The shadow flitted again, and again he missed. Then his face whitened a little, and the muscles and veins stood out well where the bat was clasped. The pitcher, steady of nerve and fine, sent another twisting, invisible sphere toward the man at the bat, and the man, this thing of muscle and thought, seemed to spring all apart as he struck with the home stroke.

There was a crack as when lightning has struck something. There was an upward-looking of all eyes. Upon a great green enclosed sward, men, out-fielders, were running like "whiteheads"—whatever a "whitehead" may be. Between the bases other men were running. The audience of thousands was composed no longer of anything in particular. It was a bawl! And, when the roar slackened for a moment, high above everything could be heard the ear-piercing squall of Billy Barnes, and his cry: "This is a red-letter day to be marked with a white stone!" No effort of the experts could save the City. The University had won.

Health Food For Our Picnic.

From Miss Wilkins' "The Jamesons." (Doubleday & McClure Co.)

MRS. JAMESON did not attempt to gather up the jumbles; she just went on after that remark of hers, opening the rest of the things; there were only one or two more. Then she took the cracker-box which Harry had brought; he had stolen away to put up his horse, and it looked to me very much as if Harriet had stolen away with him, for I could not see her anywhere.

Mrs. Jameson lifted this cracker-box on to the table and opened it. It was quite full of thick, hard-looking biscuits, or crackers. She laid them in a pile beside the other things; then she took up the basket and opened that. There was another kind of a cracker in that, and two large papers of something. When everything was taken out she pointed at the piles of eatables on the table, and addressed us: "Ladies, attention!" rapping slightly with a spoon at the same time. Her voice was very sweet, with a curious kind of forced sweetness: "Ladies, attention! I wish you to carefully observe the food upon the table before us. I wish you to consider it from the standpoint of wives and mothers of families. There is the food which you have brought, unwholesome, indigestible; there is mine, approved of by the foremost physicians and men of science of the day. For ten years I have had serious trouble with the alimentary canal, and this food has kept me in strength and vigor. Had I attempted to live upon your fresh biscuits, your frosted cakes, your rich pastry, I should be in my grave. One of those biscuits which you see there before you is equal in nourishment to six of your indigestible pies, or every cake upon the table. The great cause of the insanity and dyspepsia so prevalent among the rural classes is rich pie and cake. I feel it my duty to warn you. I hope, ladies, that you will consider carefully what I have said."

With that, Mrs. Jameson withdrew herself a little way and sat down under a tree on a cushion which had been brought in the carryall. We looked at one another, but we did not say anything for a few minutes.

Finally, Mrs. White, who is very good-natured, remarked that she supposed that she meant well, and she had better put her pies back in the basket or they would dry up. We all began putting back the things which Mrs. Jameson had taken out, except the broken jumbles, and were very quiet. However, we could not help feeling astonished and aggrieved at what Mrs. Jameson had said about the insanity and dyspepsia in our village, since we could scarcely remember one case of insanity, and very few of us had to be in the least careful as to what we ate. Mrs. Peter Jones did say in a whisper that if Mrs. Jameson had had dyspepsia ten years on those hard biscuits it was more than any of us had had on our cake and pie. We left the biscuits, and the two paper packages which Mrs. Jameson had brought, in a heap on the table just where she had put them.

After we had replaced the baskets we all scattered about, trying to enjoy ourselves in the sweet pine woods, but it was hard work, we were so much disturbed by what had happened. We wondered uneasily, too, what Flora Clark would say about her jumbles.

The Maid Meets the Water Spirit.

From "The Sunken Bell." (Russell.)

SCENE: A fir-clad glade in the mountains.

RAUTENDELEIN.

Thou buzzing, golden wight—whence com'st thou here?
Thou sipper of sweets, thou little wax-maker!
Nay! Tease me not, thou sun-born good-for-naught!
Dost hear? . . . Begone! . . . 'Tis time I combed my hair
With Granny's golden comb. Should I delay,
She'll scold me when she comes. Begone, I say!
What? . . . Loit'ring still? . . . Away—away with thee!
Am I a rose-bush? . . . Are my lips a rose?
Off to the wood with thee, beyond the brook!
There, there, my pretty bee, bloom cowslips fair,
And crocuses, and violets—thou canst suck
Thy fill of them. Dost think I jest? No. No.
Quick! Get thee home. Thou'rt not in favor here.
Thou knowest, Granny owes thee many a grudge
For furnishing the Church with altar-lights.
Come! Must I speak again? Go not too far!
Hey! . . . Chimney! Puff some smoke across the glade,
To drive away this naughty, wilful bee.
Ho! Gander, hurry, hurry! . . . Scurry, scurry!
Away! Away! [Bee flies off.] . . . At last! . . .
[RAUTENDELEIN combs her hair quietly for a moment or two. Then, leaning over the well, she calls down.]
Hey! Nickelmann! [Pause.]
He does not hear me. Well—I'll sing to myself.
Where do I come from? . . . Whither go?
Tell me—I long to know!
Did I grow as the birds of the woodland gay?
Am I a fay?
Who asks the sweet flower
That blooms in the dell,
And brightens the bower,
Its tale to tell?
Yet, oft, as I sit, by my well, alone,
I sigh for the mother I ne'er have known.
But my weird I must dree—
And I'm fair to see—
A golden-haired maid of the forest free! [Pause: She calls.]
Hey! Nickelmann! Come up! 'Tis lonely here.
Granny's gone gathering fir-apples. I'm dull—
So dull. . . . Wilt keep me company and tell Me tales? Why then, to-night, perhaps . . as a reward . .
I'll creep in some farmer's yard and steal
A big, black, cock for thee! . . . Ah, here he comes!
The silver bubbles to the surface mount!
If he should bob up now, the glass he'd break,
That such bright answer to my nod doth make.
[Admiring her reflection in the well.]
Godden to thee, my sweet maid o' the well!
Thy name? . . . Rautendelein? . . . Indeed! I see—
Thou'rt jealous of my beauty. Look at me.
For I, not thou, Rautendelein should be.
What didst thou answer! Didst thou dare to point
Thy finger at thy soft twin-breasts. Nay, nay.
I'm fairer; fair as Freya. Not for naught
My hair was spun out of the sunbeams red,
To shine, in golden glory, even as the sun
Shines up at us, at noon, from out a lake.
Aha! Thou spread'st thy tresses, like a net,
All fiery-scarlet, set to catch the fishes!
Thou poor, vain, foolish trull . . . There! Catch this stone.
[Throwing pebble down the well and disturbing the reflection.]
Thy hour is ended. Now—I'm fair alone! [Calling.]
Ho! Nickelmann! Come—help me pass the time!
[The Nickelmann, a water-spirit, half emerges from the well, and flops over the edge. He is streaming with water. Weeds cling to his head. He snorts like a seal, and his eyes blink as if the daylight hurt them.]
He's here! Ha! Ha! Ha! Ha! How dreadfully plain
He is! . . . Didst thou not hear me call! Dear, dear—
It makes one's flesh creep but to know him near!

THE NICKELMANN [croaking].

Brekekekex!

RAUTENDELEIN [mocking]

Brekekekex! Ay, ay—
It smells of springtide. Well, is that so strange?
Why—every lizard, mole, and worm, and mouse—
The veriest water-rat—had scented that.
The quail, the hare, the trout, the fly, the weeds,
Had told thee Spring was here.

THE NICKELMANN [touchily.]

Brekekekex!
Be not too nosey-wise. Dost understand?
Thou ape, thou midge, thou tomtit, irk me not!
I say, beware! . . . So, Quorax! Quack! Quack! Quack

RAUTENDELEIN.

If Master Uncle's cross to-day,
I'll leave him all alone to play.
And I'll go dance a ring-a-round.
Partners a-plenty. I'll be bound,
For pretty maidens may be found.

"How Happy Could I Be With Either."

From Locke's "Idols." (Lane.)

THIS after-dinner scene was a familiar one. She had grown to regard it as an essential in her scheme of life, like sleep and food and raiment.

Of the two men, one was her husband, Gerard Merriam; the other, his life-long, intimate friend. They had chummed together at school, at the University; had joined the same Inn of Court, and had been called to the bar together; and in spite of wide divergence of taste and character, had remained in close relationship to the present day.

It was on the homeward voyage, after a Long Vacation trip to India, that they had met Irene, a lonely girl returning from the grave of a father whose death-bed she had gone out too late to witness. Both men fell in love with her. The rivalry becoming mutually obvious, each gave the other a fair field. The wooing continued in London till success fell upon Gerard. On his meeting with Irene after her marriage, the other, Hugh Colman, bowed low over her hand, kissed it and put a loyal friendship at her service. A proud bearing, emphasized by steel-blue eyes and a supercilious up-sweep of a heavy auburn moustache, gave distinction to the action. He had rather a courtly way of doing things. The tears started to her eyes. She had been greatly drawn to him before, and pitied him out of her girlish heart for having lost in his rivalry; but from that moment she loved him with a pure friendship, and made it a dear object of her life to intensify the brotherly affection between the two men. In fact she had raised her conception of this Orestes and Pylades relationship to a kind of cult, of which she herself was the devoted and impassioned priestess. During the six years of her married life Hugh had dined with them at least once a week. Lately he had taken a flat in their immediate neighborhood, and his visits had grown more frequent. Gerard, being a man of few words, had not said much to evince his gratification, but Irene had sounded the note of welcome loud enough for the two.

As she lay back in her chair watching them, a spice of admiration flavored her thoughts. Both were men of fine physique. Gerard was six feet two, of huge frame, with deep, sloping shoulders indicative of great strength. Hugh, of somewhat slighter build, better proportioned, holding his head erect on square shoulders; finer, too, of face than Gerard, who had heavy features, eyes of uncertain blue and a reddish moustache cut short at the ends. The one face gave the impression of a man proudly scornful, quick in quarrel, with a Celtic strain of sensitiveness; the other that of a man slow in method, determined of purpose, shy of demonstration—one suggesting rather than revealing strength—a dangerous face to trust. Of the two, Hugh was pre-eminently the man more likely, on first sight, to win a woman's heart in a joint contest. Even Gerard himself had wondered at his success. When he questioned his wife, she answered, lifting glorious eyes of faith, "Because you are you." And that was an end of the matter. But perhaps it was the suggestion of reserved strength in the man that had influenced her from the first in his favor, and an intuition, such as so many women have trusted like a divine revelation, that in a great crisis of life the one would be living rock and the other shifting sand.

The Art of Transplanting.

From Jekyll's "Wood and Garden." (Longmans, Green & Co.)

THE grand way to learn, in gardening as in all things else, is to wish to learn and to be determined to find out—not to think that any one person can wave a wand and give the power and knowledge. And there will be plenty of mistakes, and there must be, just as children must pass through the usual childish complaints. And some people make the mistake of trying to begin at the end, and of using recklessly what may want the utmost caution; such, for instance, as strong chemical manures.

Some ladies asked me why their plants had died. They had got it from the very best place, and they were sure they had done their very best for it, and—there it was, dead. I asked what it was, and how they had treated it. It was some ordinary border plant, whose identity I now forget; they had made a nice hole with their new trowel, and for its sole benefit they had bought a tin of Concentrated Fertilizer. This they had emptied in the hole, put in the plant, and covered it up and given it lots of water, and—it had died! And yet these were the best and kindest of women, who would never have dreamed of feeding a new born infant on beefsteaks and raw brandy. But they learned their lesson well, and at once saw the sense when I pointed out that a plant with naked roots just taken out of the ground or a pot, removed from one feeding-place and not yet at home in another, or still more, after a journey, with the roots only wrapped in a little damp moss and paper, had its feeding power suspended for a time, and was in the position of a helpless invalid. All that could be done for it then was a little bland nutriment of weak slops and careful nursing; if the planting took place in the summer it would want shading and only very gentle watering, until firm root-hold was secured and root-appetite became active, and that in rich and well-prepared garden ground such as theirs, strong, artificial manure was in any case superfluous.

When the earliest ignorances are overcome, it becomes much easier to help and advise, because there is more common ground to stand on. In my own case, from quite a small child, I had always seen gardening going on, though not of a very interesting kind. Nothing much was thought of but bedding plants, and there was a rather large space on each side of the house for these, one on gravel and one on turf. But I had my own little garden in a nook beyond the shrubbery, with a seat shaded by a Boursault elegans rose, which I thought then, and still think, one of the loveliest of its kind. But my first knowledge of hardy plants came through wild ones. Some one gave me that excellent book, the Rev. C. A. Johns' "Flowers of the Field." For many years I had no one to advise me (I was still quite small) how to use the book, or how to get to know (though it stared me in the face) how the plants were in large related families, and I had not the sense to do it for myself, nor to learn the introductory botanical part, which would have saved me much trouble afterwards; but when I brought home my flowers I would take them one by one and just turn over the pages till I came to the picture that looked something like. But in this way I got a knowledge of individuals, and afterwards the idea of broad classification and relationship of genera to species may have come all the easier. I always think of that book as the most precious gift I ever received.

Be Adventurous and You Will Be Happy.

From Grant Allen's "Miss Cayley's Adventures." (Putnam.)

AT table d'hôte my new maxim was amply justified. A young man of ample girth and most prosperous exterior happened to sit next us. He had a wife with him, so I judged it safe to launch in conversation. We soon found out that he was the millionaire editor of a great London daily with many more strings to his journalistic bow. I mentioned casually that we thought of going for the winter to Egypt. He pricked his ears up, but at the same time he said nothing. After dinner we adjourned to the cosy salon. I talked to him and his wife; and somehow that evening the devil entered into me. I am subject to devils. I hasten to add they are wild ones. I had one of my reckless moods just then, however, and I reeled off rattling stories of our various adventures. Mr. Elworthy believed in youth and audacity. I could see I interested him. The more he was amused the more reckless I became. "That's bright," he said at last, when I told him the tale of our amateur exploits in the Vale of Manitous. "That would make a good article."

"Yes," I answered with bravado, determined to strike while the iron was hot, "what the Daily Telephone lacks is just one enlivening touch of feminine brightness."

He smiled. "What is your forte?" he inquired.

"My forte," I answered, "is to go where I choose, and write what I like about it."

He smiled again. "And a very new departure in journalism, too! A roving commission! Have you ever tried your hand at writing?"

Had I ever tried! It was the ambition of my life to see myself in print; though, hitherto it had been ineffectual.

"I have written a few sketches," I answered, with becoming modesty. As a matter of fact our office bulged with my unpublished manuscripts.

"Could you let me see them?" he asked.

I assented with inner joy, but outer reluctance. "If you wish it," I murmured, "but —you must be very lenient!"

Though I had not told Elsie, the truth of the matter was I had just then conceived an idea for a novel—my magnum opus—the setting of which compelled Egyptian color; and I was therefore dying to get to Egypt, if chance so willed it. I accordingly submitted a few of my picked manuscripts to Mr. Elworthy, in fear and trembling. He read them, cruel man, before my very eyes; I sat and waited, twiddling my thumbs; demure, but apprehensive. When he had finished, he laid them down.

"Racy!" he said. "Racy! I should like to print these three"—selecting them out—"at our usual rate of pay per thousand."

"Your are very kind"—but the room reeled with me.

Not at all. Will you undertake to let us have three descriptive articles a week on Cairo, the Nile, Syria and India, running to about two thousand words apiece, at three guineas a thousand?"

The very next day everything was arranged.

Palermo Illuminated for a Socialist!

From Lagerlöf's "The Miracles of Antichrist."
(Little, Brown & Co.)

Bosco walks across the deck, and asks the sailors if they do not see the golden cloud on the horizon.

"That is Palermo," say the seamen. "There is always a bright light floating over it at night."

It cannot be anything that concerns him. He tries to persuade himself that nothing is being done for him. He can hardly expect every one all at once to have become socialists.

But after a while he thinks: "Still there must be something unusual going on. All the sailors are gathering forward at the bow."

"Palermo is burning," say the seamen.

Yes, that is what it must be. It is because he has suffered so terribly that he expects something should be done for him.

Then the sailors see the fires on the mountains.

It cannot be a conflagration. It must be some saint's day. They ask one another what day it is.

He, too, tries to believe that it is some such thing. He asks his mother if it is a feast-day. They have so many of them.

They come nearer and nearer. The thundering sound of the festival in the great city meets them.

"All Palermo is singing and playing to-night," says one.

"A telegram must have come of a victory in Africa," says another.

No one has a thought that it can be for his sake. He goes and places himself at the stern in order not to see anything. He will not deceive himself with false hopes. Would all Palermo be illuminated for a poor socialist?

Then his mother comes and fetches him. "Do not stand there! Come and see Palermo! It must be a king who is coming there to-day. Come and look at Palermo!"

He considers a moment. No, he does not think that any king is visiting Sicily just now. But he cannot dare to think, when no one else, not even his mother—

All at once every one on the steamer gives a loud cry. It sounds almost like a cry of distress. A big cutter has steered right down on them and now glides along by the steamer's side.

The cutter is all flowers and lights; over the railing hang red and white silken draperies, everybody on board is dressed in red and white. Bosco stands on the steamer and looks to see what that beautiful messenger brings. Then the sail turns, and on its white surface shines to meet him: "Long live Bosco!"

It is his name. Not a saint's, not a king's, not the victorious general's! The homage is for no other on the steamer. His name, his name!

The cutter sends up some rockets; a whole cloud of stars rain down, and then it is gone.

He enters the harbor, and there is jubilation and enthusiasm and cheering and adoration. People say: "We do not know how he will be able to live through it."

But as soon as he realizes the homage, he feels that he does not at all deserve it. He would like to fall on his knees before those hundred and fifty thousand people who pay him homage and pray to them for forgiveness that he is so powerless, that he has done nothing for them.

By ANNA CHAPIN RAY, author of "Teddy, Her Book," etc. 16mo, cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

Genuinely American all through and consistently fluent and agreeable.—Phila. Telegraph.

Places her among the prominent young novelists of the country.—N. Y. Times.

The Miracles of Antichrist.

A Novel. By SELMA LAGERLÖF. Translated from the Swedish by Pauline Bancroft Flach. 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.50.

Not only a remarkably strong story, but an evidence of exceptional versatility.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

One feels that it is, indeed, "an astonishing book" and of a type almost unique.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Story of Gösta Berling.

Translated from the Swedish of Selma Lagerlöf by PAULINE BANCROFT FLACH. 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.75.

Of such marked power that unless Miss Lagerlöf is unable to sustain the force indicated by this example of her work, she will become one of the great novelists of the continent.—Public Opinion.

The Kinship of Souls.

A Narrative. By REUEN THOMAS. 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.50.

An interesting discussion upon humanity, philosophy, literature and religion from a rarely endowed mind. It is illuminated always by grace of style and often enlivened by humor.—Boston Herald (Editorial).

King or Knave, Which Wins?

By WILLIAM HENRY JOHNSON. A sequel to "The King's Henchman." 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.50.

The story is well told and full of spirit, and certainly deserves the popularity which may be predicted for it.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Pastor Naudié's Young Wife.

By ÉDOUARD ROD. Translated from the French by Bradley Gilman. 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.25.

Contains some masterly studies in character.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

A book of rare qualities.—The Outlook.

Fromont and Risler.

By ALPHONSE DAUDET. Translated by George B. Ives. Introduction by Charles De Kay. With photogravure frontispiece. 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.50.

The first of Daudet's novels to become widely known and the first of his great pictures of Paris.

Without Dogma.

By HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ. Translated by Iza Young. Popular Edition. With photogravure frontispiece. 12mo, cloth, $1.00.

A profound psychological study and an absorbing story of high literary merit.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Duke's Servants.

A Romance. By SIDNEY HERBERT BURCHELL, author of "In the Days of King James." 12mo, cloth, extra, $1.50.

Thoroughly well written, humorous, and most readable.—London World.

Each, 12mo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.00.

MADAME IZÀN. By Mrs. CAMPBELL-PRAED, author of "Nulma," "Mrs. Tregaskiss," "Outlaw and Lawmaker," etc.

This picturesque tale of love-making and travel in the Orient will be of special interest at the present time. The novelty of the chief situations imparts zest to a story which abounds in vivid glimpses of Oriental scenes and experiences, particularly in Japan. This fresh and charming book demonstrates the success of the popular author in a new field.

PURSUED BY THE LAW. By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, author of "The King of Andaman," "The Red Sultan," "The Angel of the Convent," etc.

This stirring and entertaining story shows the possibilities of modern life in the way of adventure. "This novel," says the London Spectator, "reminds us not a little of Charles Reade, with a dash of Stevensonian audacity. Mr. Cobban's hearty geniality and the real skill with which he keeps the reader in suspense disarm criticism."

PAUL CARAH, CORNISHMAN. By CHARLES LEE, author of "A Widow Woman," "A Foreigner in Pendennack," etc.

This charming story of a Cornish village, with its fresh and pungent atmosphere and poetic glimpses of Nature, will impress itself upon readers as the work of an author whose insight, force, and literary quality are distinctly exceptional. The story is told with singular vividness and concentrated interest.

PHAROS, THE EGYPTIAN. By GUY BOOTHBY, author of "Doctor Nikòla," "The Lust of Hate," "A Bid for Fortune," etc.

BY BERWEN BANKS. By ALLEN RAINE, author of "Mifanwy, a Welsh Singer," "Torn Sails," etc.

SCRIBNER'S NEW BOOKS.

A NOTABLE BOOK.

THE ROUGH RIDERS.

By Governor THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Col. 1st Volunteer Cavalry, U. S. A.

With Forty Full-page Illustrations and Two Portraits (One in Photogravure) of Governor Roosevelt.

Octavo, 298 pp., $2.00.

CONTENTS.—I. Raising the Regiment. II. To Cuba. III. General Young's Fight at Las Guasimas. IV. The Cavalry at Santiago. V. In the Trenches. VI. The Return Home. Appendices.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT'S account of the Rough Riders is naturally awaited with intense eagerness from one end of the country to the other. His book has already claimed everybody's attention as in all respects a national event. It has the distinction of being an authoritative narrative, personal and intensely vivid, of a unique fighting corps. The illustrations, from photographs by experts, are especially noteworthy.

HOW TO KNOW THE FERNS.

A Guide to the Names, Haunts, and Habits of Our Native Ferns.

By MRS. FRANCES T. PARSONS (formerly Mrs. Dana). With 144 illustrations. Crown 8vo, $1.50 net.

"This book follows the plan of 'How to Know the Wild Flowers' [now in its 43d thousand]. It is fully illustrated, and will be of great service to all who have not had the opportunity of early training in woodlore. 'How to Know the Ferns' not only identifies the ferns, but their family relations and neighbors. It will beyond doubt receive a general welcome."—The Outlook.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR:

HOW TO KNOW THE WILD FLOWERS

Forty-third Thousand. Fully illustrated. Crown 8vo, $1.75 net.

ON THE SOUTH AFRICAN FRONTIER.

The Adventures and Observations of an American in Rhodesia. By WILLIAM HARVEY BROWN. With 32 illustrations and 2 maps. 8vo, $3.00.

"Every word in Mr. Brown's 'On the South African Frontier' is the simple, straightforward word of a frontiersman who has a tale to tell, and tells it without too much varnish. As a mere narrative of stirring adventures, the book can be recommended to the general reader; but it is of especial value just now on account of the interesting side-light it throws upon the British method of governing savages."—Literature.

IN THE KLONDYKE.

By FREDERICK PALMER. Illustrated from photographs. 12mo, $1.50.

"The best description of the Klondyke mines and miners yet written. Except in his entertaining picture of a passage over the famous Chilkoot Pass, Mr. Palmer has permitted the country and its inhabitants to tell their own story, as it were. The result is a book of extraordinary interest."—Boston Journal.

A TEXAS RANGER.

By N. A. JENNINGS. 12mo, $1.25.

The true story of surprising adventures on the Mexican border by a young man who enlisted in the early eighties in a company of the famous Texas rangers. The book is as thrilling as a border romance, and in addition is a hitherto unpublished record of a body of troops who were the prototypes of the Rough Riders.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK.

SCRIBNER'S NEW FICTION.

Strong Hearts.

By GEORGE W. CABLE.
12mo, $1.25.

"They must stand as among the most charming things he has written. Not even in 'Old Creole Days' is there found more delicate work, and yet underneath it there is felt the grasp of the master."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Greater Inclination.

By EDITH WHARTON.
12mo, $1.50.

"We are brought in the majority of her instances face to face with situations containing material for an Ibsen or a Maeterlinck, but the limitations of the field she has chosen are maintained with discreet and delicate art. . . . Eight admirably written stories." —New York Times.

The Stolen Story.

By JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS.
12mo, $1.25.

"Mr. Williams has the advantage of knowing thoroughly what he is talking about and of making it interesting. 'The Stolen Story' is one of the best short stories that have been written in a long time."—New York Sun.

Across the Campus.

By CAROLINE FULLER.
12mo, $1.50.

Miss Fuller's book is a story of the college life of a group of girls, and reflects the atmosphere of the place with extraordinary fidelity, and with delightful humor, enthusiasm, and gayety of spirits.

The Amateur Cracksman.

By E. W. HORNUNG.
12mo, $1.25.

"It is difficult to imagine anything better in their way than the eight stories of crime here delineated. Short and to the point, each is suggested with admirable art, and each is finished to perfection."—London World.

The Confounding of Camelia.

By ANNE D. SEDGWICK
12mo, $1.25.

"It is indeed good, and more than good; it is fresh, delicately original, and finely observed. Camelia is such a heroine as many novelists can dream of, but few can draw."—London Academy.

Windy Creek.

By HELEN S. THOMPSON.
12mo, $1.25.

A series of sketches which tell, in a straightforward and quite unconventional way, the story of a community of Colorado settlers who are new in literature. These people are characterized by Miss Thompson with an unfailing instinct for what is most poignant and humorous in them.

A Notable Success.

Red Rock.

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE.
12mo, $1.50.

Now in its 45th Thousand.

"Red Rock" is having an unusual success in England, where it is being received with wide praise.

With illustrations by Clinedinst.

"One cannot read this novel without being deeply impressed with its sterling literary beauties and its human interest. It is tender, mellow and sweet, exhaling the flavor of all that is best and most admirable in American life."—London Daily Mail.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, 153-157 Fifth Ave., NEW YORK.

New Fiction.

Vassar Studies.

By JULIA A. SCHWARTZ, A.M. ('96). With 11 illustrations. 12mo, $1.25.

Miss Schwartz's collection of studies has been planned to reproduce, by means of emphasizing in each paper a characteristic element or quality of student life, a faithful impression of the spirit and the personality of modern Vassar. The author has treated of character rather than incident; yet her stories are not lacking in action nor in the picturesque background of college pastime as well as that of college work.

Lone Pine.

The Story of a Lost Mine. By R. B. TOWNSHEND. 12mo, $1.25.

"The book gives evidence of a vigorous capacity in narrative and is full of descriptive force. The writer's strength in dealing with scenes of violence and of bloodshed is certainly remarkable. The book is evidently the work of a clever writer."—The Athenæum.

Children of the Mist.

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS, author of "Down Dartmoor Way," etc. 8vo, $1.50.

Mr. R. D. Blackmore, the author of "Lorna Doone," writes of this book: "I was simply astonished at the beauty and power of this novel. A pleasure is in store for many, and literature is enriched with a wholesome and genial and noble tale."

Miss Cayley's Adventures.

By GRANT ALLEN, author of "Flowers and Their Pedigrees," etc. With 80 illustrations by Gordon Browne. 12mo, $1.50.

This is the obverse of the old story of the youth who starts forth with a sound heart and tuppence in his pocket to win his fortune. Mr. Allen's youth is a girl, a graduate of Girton, who is left penniless, and who is compelled to make her own way in life. Her varied experiences are told in Mr. Allen's old-time graceful manner, which won for him an international reputation.

Agatha Webb.

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN, author of "The Leavenworth Case," "That Affair Next Door," etc. 16mo.

The Passing of Prince Rozan.

A Romance of the Sea. By JOHN BICKERDYKE. 12mo, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Latest Additions in the HUDSON LIBRARY:

The Wheel of God.

By GEORGE EGERTON, author of "Keynotes," etc. 12mo, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

"The author of 'Keynotes' has produced here what is so far her best work. The story presents a searching piece of analysis at once vigorous and delicate and full of pouting passages which refuse to be forgotten. . . . Certainly one of the most notable novels of the month."—Commercial Advertiser.

John Marmaduke.

A Romance of the English Invasion of Ireland in 1649. By SAMUEL HARDEN CHURCH. 7th edition. Illustrated. 8vo, $1.25; 16mo, paper, 50 cents.

"The author has produced a thoroughly interesting story, abounding in stirring scenes which force themselves on the attention of his readers, and peopled with a sufficiency of clear-drawn, vivid, life-like characters, the loveliest of whom, the heroine, Catharine Dillon, is an unforgettable woman."—Mail and Express.

Hannah Thurston.

A Story of American Life. By BAYARD TAYLOR. 12mo, $1.50; paper, 50 cents.

"A really original story, admirably told, crowded with life-like characters, full of delicate and subtle sympathies, with ideas the most opposite to his own, and lighted up throughout with that playful humor which suggests, always, wisdom rather than pure fun."—Spectator.

Yale Yarns.

By J. S. WOOD. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

College days are regarded by most educated men as the cream of their lives, sweet with excellent flavor. A volume filled with the pure cream of such existence, and many "a college joke to cure the dumps" is given. It is a bright, realistic picture of college life, told in an easy conversational or descriptive style.

Rosalba.

The Story of Her Development. By OLIVE P. RAYNER. 12mo, paper, 50 cents. (Ready in June.)

By W. J. ANSORGE, M.A., Medical Officer to Her Majesty's Government in Uganda. With 134 illustrations from photographs by the author, and 2 colored plates. Large 8vo, gilt top, pp. xiv.-335, $5.00.

" . . . Is not only a mine of information at first hand concerning the native races of Uganda, but a well-written and entertaining narrative of uncommon adventures in what was, until very recently, an exceptionally dangerous locality. . . . There are, too, some interesting chapters on big-game hunting, and narrow escapes from elephants and man-eating lions; while the appendix contains some interesting data on new species of Central African birds and butterflies, accompanied by several colored plates."—Commercial Advertiser.

Myth, Ritual, and Religion.

By ANDREW LANG. New Edition, Revised and Reset for reissue in the Silver Library. 2 vols. Crown 8vo, $2.50.

 The original edition of "Myth, Ritual, and Religion," published in 1887, has long been out of print. In revising the book Mr. Lang has brought it into line with the ideas expressed in the second part of his "Making of Religion" (1898,) and has excised certain passages which, as the book first appeared, were inconsistent with its main thesis. In some cases the original passages are retained in notes, to show the nature of the development of the author's opinions. A fragment or two of controversy have been deleted, and Chapters XI. and XII., on the religion of the lowest races, have been entirely rewritten on the strength of more recent or earlier information lately acquired.

THE LIFE OF THE EDITOR OF THE "GOLDEN TREASURY."

Francis Turner Palgrave:

His Journals and Memories of His Life. By GWENLLIAN F. PALGRAVE. With portrait and illustration. 8vo, 288 pages, $3.50.

"Miss Gwenllian F. Palgrave has performed her labor of love with excellent judgment and the supreme good taste which one would expect to find in the daughter of so cultured and restrained a critic. There is not a word too much. The bulk of the book is made up of the letters which the professor wrote to his friends, of their letters to him, and extracts from his journal. His biographer supplies the connecting links, and weaves the story into a complete and well-rounded whole. . . . The book is full of good things."—Daily Telegraph, London.

NEW FICTION for SUMMER READING

J. B. Lippincott Company,

PUBLISHERS.

THE TAMING OF THE JUNGLE.

By Dr. C. W. DOYLE. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.00.

"'The Taming of the Jungle' is thoroughly delightful. It is, in form, one story—the story of the adventures of a man of the Terai, or Himalayan hill folk, named Ram Deen, who drove the mail-cart along one stage of its journey. In reality the book is made up of sixteen tales, connected only by their environment and the personalities of those who figure in them—each of these tales throwing light on the surroundings, life, thought, and religious belief of the jungle people. The tales are cleverly told and, though nearly every one holds a tragic incident, they are tinged with a philosophy that is wholly Indian in its patience and a humor that is equally Indian in its gravity. These tales are well worth the reading, and Mr. Kipling might well have been their author."—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

The Daughters of Babylon.

A New Copyright Novel. By Wilson Barrett and Robert Hichens. With frontispiece by Elenore Plaisted Abbott. Uniform with "The Sign of the Cross," by Wilson Barrett. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

"The scenes are laid in the old days when Babylon was in the heights of its power, and the pages are crowded with picturesque personages and moving and dramatic situations, giving us a historical novel of intense and fascinating interest."—New Orleans Daily Picayune.

Mr., Miss, and Mrs.

By Charles Bloomingdale, Jr. ("Karl"). Tall 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"Some of the stories are full of the despair that follows when love is not reciprocated, others are full of the madness of love. The bitter irony of fate seems to enter into nearly all of them. Hardly any of the stories are more than telling outlines, but their brightness, and the effective way in which the colors are washed in, give life and interest to every movement."—Boston Herald.

A Triple Entanglement.

By Mrs. Burton Harrison, Author of "A Bachelor Maid," "Sweet Bells Out of Tune," "Good Americans," etc. With illustrations by Violet Oakley. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"The story concerns the doings of a set of American tourists in Europe, and it is a very lively and agreeable narrative throughout."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

A Trooper Galahad.

By General Charles King, U. S. A. With frontispiece by Harry C. Edwards. 12mo, cloth, $1.00

"Captain Charles King is always entertaining, and his 'A Trooper Galahad' will be read with no small degree of interest. It is a story of the Southwest, and there are excellent character sketches and pictures of life at a frontier post."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Wind-Jammers.

By T. Jenkins Hains, Author of "Captain Gore's Courtship," etc. 12mo, cloth, ornamental, $1.25.

"Mr. T. Jenkins Hains is to be congratulated in writing a more natural and vigorous sea-story than any other modern American writer of this class of fiction."—New York World.

The Coming of Chloe.

By "The Duchess." New Edition. 12mo, cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

"'The Coming of Cloe' is well written, with an admirably conceived and executed plot, bits of graceful imagery and flashes of wit, just enough of sentiment to be human and natural, and thoroughly clean and sweet from beginning."—Boston Times.

In Lippincott's Series of Select Novels for May, 1899.

Heart and Sword.

A New Copyright Novel. By John Strange Winter.

"'Heart and Sword' deals largely with the life of the Stage, and is in itself an answer to the vital question, 'Should Wives Work?' It is, perhaps, one of the best of John Strange Winter's books."—London Telegraph.

Newest and Best Novels.

MR. DREXEL BIDDLE begs to announce that he has undertaken to arrange with The World's Leading Novelists for the publication of their new and forthcoming works. Under such an arrangement the following Copyrighted Novels are just published, and are the new novels of their respective authors:

600 Copies Sold in Advance of Publication.

By W. E. NORRIS,

GILES INGILBY. Containing many full-page pictures by the celebrated London Artist, F. S. SPENCE. Cloth and gold, 16mo, 400 pages, price $1.50.

The writing of this novel has been the hobby of Mr. Norris for several years. He devoted his leisure time, and hours when he felt freshest, to its authorship. Three certain famous literary men, who style Norris the Thackeray of our day, united recently in prophesying that "Giles Ingilby" would stand pre-eminently as its author's best work and the one upon which his fame would rest.

By OUIDA,

LA STREGA. This new work is a masterpiece, and is likely to be the sensation of the year. Cloth and gold, 350 pages, with a superb frontispiece by J. H. BETTS, price $1.50.

1100 Copies Sold in Advance of Publication.

By W. CLARK RUSSELL,

AN ATLANTIC TRAGEDY. With six full-page reproductions from oil paintings, done specially by C. W. SNYDER. Cloth and gold, 16mo, price $1.25.

"No one tells a tale half as well as Mr. Clark Russell." —Manchester Guardian.

The present is perhaps the most absorbing novel that Mr. Russell has yet written; it teems with romance and marine adventure.

By GUY DE MAUPASSANT,

STRONG AS DEATH. "A powerful novel that will live." Translated by TEOFILO L. COMBA. Cloth and gold, illustrated, price $1.50.

The translator has been especially successful in transferring the story to the English form, the style of the writing being added to rather than impaired, as is so often the case.

By MRS. MOLESWORTH,

THE LAUREL WALK. With a frontispiece portrait of the author, and eight full-page reproductions from paintings by J. STEEPLE DAVIS. Cloth and gold, 16mo, 464 pages, price $1.50.

"In most cases it will be found that a healthy-minded girl will prefer a story like Mrs. Molesworth's 'Laurel Walk,' to the morbid and hysterical productions like 'The Yellow Aster,' 'Beth,' 'et hoc genus omme.' Hence, we extend a cordial welcome to the book selected for publication by the Philadelphia author and publisher, MR. DREXEL BIDDLE. He seems to have a keen instinct for what is likely to be popular."—Montreal Star.

By A. J. DREXEL BIDDLE,

Fellow of the American Geographical Society, etc., etc.

WORD FOR WORD AND LETTER FOR LETTER. A Biographical Romance, with six full-page illustrations by EDWARD HOLLOWAY. Sixth English edition just published in London. Crown 8vo, cloth and gold, gold top, 208 pages, price 75 cents.

"It involves murder and robbery as well as love and adventure."—London Athenæum.

"Is told with a graphic power sufficient to absorb the fastidious admirers of Dr. Doyle, Stanley Weyman and Gilbert Parker."—Philadelphia North American.

1485 Copies Sold Recently in One Day. 1000 Copies Just Sold to a Single Bookstore.

By E. F. BENSON,

Author of "Dodo" and "The Capsina."

THE MONEY MARKET. Illustrated, cloth and gold, 264 pages, price $1.00.

"Better than 'Dodo.'"—New York World.

"The London rage." About to be dramatized.

"Much the best work its author has written."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"Destined to be one of the notable books of the century."

By MRS. DAHLGREN,

Widow of the late Admiral Dahlgren, U. S. N.

THE WOODLEY LANE GHOST, and Other Stories. With a frontispiece portrait of the author. Cloth, ornamental, 12mo, 474 pages, price $1.50.

"The skillful handling of esoteric subjects indicates that the writer was a student of the deep mysteries of Oriental wisdom."—Boston Traveler.

By MRS. ORMEROD,

MADAM PARADOX. The plot has a style that is fascinating. Cloth, with a startling picture of an artist's studio, 12mo, price $1.25.

"Those persons who have seen the manuscript say it will be the sensation of the summer."—New York Times, May 13, 1899.

The Most Important Historical Novel of the New Year.

By SIMPSON NEWLAND,

Ex-Treasurer of South Australia,

PAVING THE WAY. An Historical Novel of Australia. Containing 25 full-page drawings by HERBERT COLE, the famous English artist. Crown 8vo, cloth and gold, printed on English laid paper, 376 pages, price $1.50.

"Mr. Newland has produced a work which does very much for South Australia what 'Lorna Doone' has achieved for Devonshire."—South Australian Advertiser.

An account of the colonization of Australasia, and of a number of remarkable discoveries that the distinguished author has made in the wilds of the Antipodean Continent.

MARLIER, CALLANAN & CO., Publishers, 172 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.

Henry Holt & Co. 29 West 23d Street, NEW YORK,

ROOK'S THE HOOLIGAN NIGHTS. 12mo.

This book appeals to the reader of fiction and, paradoxical as it may seem, to the music hall frequenter who delights in Chevalier's ballads, and to the student of Lombroso. The central figure is the veritable Alf. Hooligan, known as "The Hooligan," and leader of the notorious Hooligan gang of London. His remarkable, though actual experiences are set down by his quondam acquaintance, Mr. Clarence Rook, an English journalist. Alf. is a Cockney with a humor and vernacular worthy of Chevalier. His life might seem grimy and depressing, but he took it in a mirthful, philosophical way. He was burglar, thief, and counterfeiter. He tells of many thieves' devices. His reminiscences include interesting criminological information, told with the charm of fiction. This book does for the criminal quarters of London what Hugo's Notre Dame de Paris did for those of Paris.

They have recently published:

OXENHAM'S GOD'S PRISONER. 12mo, $1.25.

An extraordinary tale of adventures in England and the Southern Seas.
Book-Buyer: "It is not likely that any story bristles more with ingenious surprises."
New York Commercial Advertiser: "Many thrilling scenes and strong delineations of emotion."
Dial: "One of the most captivating works of fiction that it has been our good fortune to read."
Nation: "The sea voyages are well done, . . . and there is no denying to the story a vast and ingenious mechanism."

STACPOOLE'S THE RAPIN. 12mo, $1.25.

A sparkling tale of an artist, an editor, a poet, and other Parisians of to-day.
New York Tribune: "A captivating book, . . . freakish in tone, spasmodic in movement, but its very freakishness gives it charm."

GODFREY'S POOR HUMAN NATURE. 12mo, $1.50.

Bookman: "It is curiously convincing. . . . Each and every character stands out with vivid distinction, and is not soon to be forgotten. . . . The portrayal of local life [in a German city], particularly that appertaining to operatic circles, is full of freshness and interest. . . . It is well written, it is nobly felt, it is altogether an admirable work."

IN CONSTANT DEMAND:

Her Ladyship's Elephant, $1.25. The Gadfly, $1.25.
The Prisoner of Zenda, $1.50; and its sequel, Rupert of Hentzau, $1.50.
Sketches in Lavender, Blue, and Green, $1.25. The Hon. Peter Stirling, $1.50.

Edited by Professor EDWARD ARBER, F.S.A., FELLOW OF KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON, ETC.

THIS is the first adequate attempt that has ever been made towards an historical national Anthology at popular prices.

The Series will contain about 2500 entire Poems and Songs, written by Some Three Hundred Poets.

It will include the largest collection ever printed of the most exquisite Love Lyrics in our language, some serious Poems, many notable Ballads, some Political Verse, a few Prison Songs; also Naval and Military Songs, Drinking Songs, Mad Songs, Satires, &c.; together with Poems in praise of the Country Life and its various pleasures, Hunting, Hawking, Fishing, &c.

Most of this poetry will be quite new to the general Reader.

As each volume represents a definite period of our literary history, some Poets will, of necessity, appear in more than one volume.

Nearly every form of English Versification will be represented in the series.

Each volume will be complete in itself; and will contain a Glossary of such words, &c., in it, as have changed their meanings since its Poems were written.

"British Anthologies" will therefore contain those Poems and Songs with which every one ought to be acquainted; and its volumes will be found, by young and old alike, to be most charming and delightful companions.

GOOD FICTION

THE MARKET PLACE

By HAROLD FREDERIC,

Author of "The Damnation of Theron Ware," "March Hares," etc.

The last work of the greatest of American authors of this decade.

"The Market Place" was finished only a few weeks before Mr. Frederic's fatal illness. It deals with a phase of English life that has no counterpart in this country, and which was so fully exposed in the Hooley scandals. It was written before these exposures, but reads as if it were based on them.

12mo, cloth, with a unique cover after a design by F. Berkeley Smith, ... $1.50

HILDA

By SARA JEANETTE DUNCAN (MRS. EVERARD COTES),

Author of "A Daughter of To-Day," "A Social Departure," etc.

A story of Calcutta, in which an actress and a Salvation Army girl are the leading characters. Interesting and brilliant pictures of social life in India by one who has been most successful in this field adorn a romance of a remarkable sort with a striking dénouement.

12mo, cloth, with ornate cover design by F. Berkeley Smith, ... $1.25

THE STRONG ARM

By ROBERT BARR,

Author of "In the Midst of Alarms," "The Woman Intervenes," etc.

A stirring romance, the scene of which is laid in the same country as that of "Tekla," the Moselle.

It is full of action, and the interest never flags.

"The Strong Arm" resembles "Tekla," the most successful of Mr. Barr's books, more than any other of his works.

12mo, cloth, ... $1.25

OUTSIDERS

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS,

Author of "The Ashes of Empire," "The Haunts of Men," etc.

A story of New York life, the first of a series. This deals with the Bohemian and artistic life of New York. Mr. Chambers, who is an artist as well as an author, is perfectly equipped for handling such a subject, and he has produced a book full of the greatest interest, and entirely fresh and original. Nothing has been published that approaches this work in these characteristics.

12mo, cloth, ... $1.25

LITITIA BERKELEY, A.M.

By JOSEPHINE B. STEFFENS.

A novel of New York life, and including also a description of the life of a medical student in Paris. It deals also with the sex problem, but in a way that attracts rather than repels.

12mo, cloth, ... $1.25

IN A STEAMER CHAIR

By ROBERT BARR,

Author of "Tekla," "The Mutable Many," "In the Midst of Alarms," "A Woman Intervenes," etc.

THE CENTURY CO.'S LATEST BOOKS

No. 5 JOHN STREET. By RICHARD WHITEING. "The book of the season" in England, and one of the successes of the new year in America. Founded upon fact—not as to its plot, but in its vivid presentation of striking social contrasts. "It stands amongst the average output of fiction like an oak in a hedgerow," says David Christie Murray; and a hundred other reviewers have said the same thing, though not in the same words. New edition, $1.50.

THE TWO STANDARDS. By Dr. WILLIAM BARRY. An "up-to-date" romance by a distinguished Catholic priest. Few books have received so much attention from the critics, many of whom praise it in the highest terms. All agree that it is a remarkable work, and written in a style of unusual brilliancy. To judge of its merits, one must read it for himself. $1.50.

CAPT. SIGSBEE'S "THE MAINE" is one of the books of permanent interest that owe their origin to the late war. The story of the terrible event that precipitated the outbreak of hostilities is related clearly and forcibly and in the best possible temper. Illustrated, $1.50.

LIEUT. HOBSON'S "SINKING OF THE MERRIMAC" is one of those rare books in which the doers of extraordinary deeds have shown their ability to write as brilliantly as they acted. Even as a fictitious story of adventure, this true narrative of a world-famous achievement would be heartily welcomed by the reading public. Illustrated, $1.50.

GEORGE KENNAN'S "CAMPAIGNING IN CUBA." A record of thrilling experiences by the famous author of "Siberia and the Exile System." Absolutely necessary to a clear comprehension of the campaign that ended at Santiago. $1.50.

CUBA AND PORTO RICO. By ROBERT T. HILL. A work describing all the islands of the West Indies, and presenting a larger amount and a later revision of facts relating thereto than any other single work in existence. The standard book for students, travellers, and business men. New edition, illustrated, $3.

THE CENTURY CO., Union Square, New York.

A Wind Flower

BY

Caroline Atwater Mason.

Author of "A Quiet King," "A Minister of the World," "A Minister of Carthage," etc.

Beautifully decorated, cloth binding, uncut edges, gilt top, frontispiece, small 16mo, 290 pages.

Price, 75 cts. net; postpaid, 85 cts.

FRONTISPIECE.

Mrs. Mason is one of the most popular of the writers for "The Ladies' Home Journal."

A competent critic who has read this book says that it exceeds all Mrs. Mason's previous stories in power and interest.

"The author is too modest in giving to her latest story the title "A Wind Flower;" she not only puts undue emphasis on her weakest character, but does an injustice to herself and her book. Few would surmise that under such a title lay a most subtle and thorough analysis of high church claims. . . . The book is worthy of a place among the year's best fiction."—Chicago Tribune.

TWO NEW BOOKS.

Field, Forest, and Wayside Flowers.

With chapters on Sedges and Ferns. Untechnical Studies for Unlearned Lovers of Nature. By MAUD GOING, author of "With the Wild Flowers." Crown 8vo, cloth, decorated, illustrated with more than 100 half-tone and line engravings. $1.50.

Written especially for people who, without time or possibly inclination to familiarize themselves with botanical nomenclature and technical terms, are yet true nature-lovers and enjoy the beauties and wonders of familiar plant-life.

From the Child's Standpoint.

Studies of Child-Nature. A Book for Parents and Teachers. By FLORENCE HULL WINTERBURN. 12mo, cloth, with a portrait of the author. $1.25.

This book is a collection of studies of child-nature and child-life, written with that sympathetic insight into the heart of childhood for which this author is so justly noted.

Sent, postpaid, on receipt of the price by

A New Kipling Book

Messrs. ALEX. GROSSET & Co. have just published

The City of Dreadful Night,

By RUDYARD KIPLING,

which was suppressed in India immediately upon publication, and has never been circulated in this country. 12mo, cloth, with striking cover design, and two full-page illustrations and portrait of the author. Price, 75 cents.

Also, a vivid reproduction of Philip Burne-Jones' remarkable picture,

The Vampire.

Size, 8 x 10 inches, in portfolio of heavy, dark gray paper, with original cover design, and Kipling's verses printed on the flaps.

We believe this is the best reproduction yet made of this famous picture. It is beautifully done in Photogravure, and is especially suited for framing, or is a finished production as offered.

Price, 50 cents.

These two publications should be on the counters of every bookseller for the summer trade.

ALEX. GROSSET & CO., Publishers.

11 E. 16th Street, New York.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

THE HILPRECHT EDITION OF THE ::

Holman Pronouncing Teachers' Bible

contains a series of pictures illustrating the progress made in the Babylonian Excavation Work. These pictures are arranged and described by the eminent Assyriologist, Prof. H. V. HILPRECHT, of the University of Pennsylvania, who has probably accomplished more in the cause of Assyriology than any other specialist living.

"There are five expeditions just sent out, each of which is endeavoring to obtain the crown of Archæological research at the close of this century. Foremost among these is the expedition of the University of Pennsylvania."

Made in a variety of beautiful bindings and sold at extremely low prices.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00; per 1000, $40.00.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 50 cents per copy in leatherette.

The Man with the Hoe, and Other Poems.

By Edwin Markham.

IT has been many years since any poem has excited so much interest as has Mr. Markham's now famous voicing of the protest against life's inequalities which he saw in Millet's painting. In a few weeks after its appearance the author had received hundreds of letters from prominent literary people all over the world commending the work highly. Prof. William James, of Harvard, for instance, wrote: "The poem is magnificent and reeks with humanity and morality." This is Mr. Markham's first collection of poems, with a frontispiece reproduction of the painting which inspired his best effort.

The Real Hawaii. By Lucien Young, U. S. N.

THIS is an authoritative work upon our newly acquired possessions by an American Naval officer, who knows his subject thoroughly. It not only gives the inside history of the revolution which ended the Monarchy—Lieutenant Young was on the Boston at that time, and took an active part in the proceedings—but furnishes a reliable handbook to the condition and resources of the island. An appendix contains an elaborate array of statistical information about all sorts of matters, including the sugar, coffee, and other industries.

Size, 5 x 7½ ; Pages, about 325 ; Illustrations and maps ; Price, $1.50.

JOHN LANE'S NEW BOOKS

SOME MODERN CLASSICS.

THE COLLECTED POEMS OF WILLIAM WATSON. With Portrait. $2.50.
"I prefer the poet who sings of my immortal soul to the chap who sings of windlasses and steam-winches. And so I prefer William Watson to Kipling."—Mr. VANCE THOMPSON in The Criterion.

THE LAST BALLAD, and Other Poems. By John Davidson. Fcap. 8vo, $1.50.
The London Times says: "Mr. John Davidson, when the fine frenzy of inspiration is upon him, writes verse that must appeal to all who have any poetical instinct. His imagination glows and his phrases strike home. He stands among the few writers of the day who really write poetry, and 'The Last Ballad, and Other Poems" is a volume in which his finer qualities are evident."

THE SILENCE OF LOVE. Poems. By Edmond Holmes. Post 4to, $1.50.
"Those lovers of what is lovely, who have long treasured Mrs. Browning's 'Sonnets from the Portuguese,' and Rossetti's 'House of Life,' will rejoice to find in this new volume a legitimate successor."—Boston Transcript.

THE ALHAMBRA, and Other Poems. By F. B. Money Coutts. Crown 8vo, $1.25.
The London Daily Chronicle says: "He is a strong poetic craftsman, and his work is always carefully and delicately finished. It is plain on every page that Mr. Coutts is a serious and strenuous craftsman, who places a fine and individual faculty at the service of a lofty ideal."

New Book by the author of "Forest Lovers."

PAN AND THE YOUNG SHEPHERD. By Maurice Hewlett. Crown 8vo, $1.25.
"Even more distinctively and richly imaginative than his 'Forest Lovers.' It is a bit of bold fantasy, veined with passion, lightened by the humors of rusticity."—The Outlook.

The Sequel to "Aylwin."

THE COMING OF LOVE: Rhona Boswell's Story and Other Poems. By Theodore Watts-Dunton, author of "Aylwin." Crown 8vo, $2.00.
Literature says: "In 'The Coming of Love' (which, though published earlier, is a sequel to 'Aylwin') he has given us an unforgettable, we cannot but believe an enduring portrait—one of the few immortal women of the imagination. Rhona Boswell comes again into 'Aylwin.'"

New Book by "Max."

MORE. By Max Beerbohm. A Volume of Essays. $1.25.
"In his hands the knack of graceful impertinence is raised by dint of sheer mastery to the dignity of a serious art; there are moments, indeed, when he brings it within measurable distance of the sublime."—Literature.

THE SPIRIT OF PLACE, and Other Essays. By Alice Meynell. Fcap. 8vo, $1.25.
The London Pall Mall Gazette says: "A rare book. One cannot believe that a writer whose perceptions are so fine but so human, whose reflections are so fine but so just, can write anything one would not wish to read."

New Poems by W. B. Yeats.

The Wind Among the Reeds. By W. B. Yeats. $1.25.
"The London Outlook says: "In truth Mr. Yeats' work, for which we have waited several years, is a beautiful gift."

The New "Golden Age."

DREAM DAYS: Being eight "Golden Age" Stories. By Kenneth Grahame. FOURTH EDITION. $1.25. Uniform with "Golden Age" and "Pagan Papers."
"In this province, the reconstruction of child life, Kenneth Grahame is masterly; in fact, we know of no one his equal."—New York Times.

NEW NOVELS.

By the author of "Patience Sparhawk" and "The Californians."

A DAUGHTER OF THE VINE. By Gertrude Atherton. SECOND EDITION. $1.50.
"Touches and passages in 'A Daughter of the Vine' might, turn by turn, entitle it to a place beside 'Jane Eyre' and 'Wuthering Heights.' Yet, externally, if not essentially, it is as characteristically Californian as they are English."—The Criterion.
The Boston Globe says: "It is so well told that it is sure to outlast a great deal of current fiction."

YOUNG LIVES. A Romance. By Richard Le Gallienne, author of "The Quest of the Golden Girl," "The Romance of Zion Chapel," etc. With a cover design by WILL BRADLEY. $1.50.
Mr. J. Kendrick Bangs in the New York World says: "The old-time Le Gallienne is restored to us. His corner on the library shelf is once more made ready for him."

New Novel by the author of "Derelicts."

IDOLS. By W. J. Locke, author of "Derelicts," etc. $1.50.

New Romance by John Buchan.

UNSOLICITED PRESS NOTE.

CASSELL'S NATIONAL LIBRARY.

The change in the management of the American interests of the great English house of Cassell & Co. has already been noted in The Express. The house is now represented by a New York branch, at Nos. 7 and 9 West Eighteenth Street, bearing the parent company's name of Cassell & Co., Ltd. The imprint of the Cassells is found upon many books of combined value and cheapness, and the company deserves good wishes for prosperity under its new arrangement.

One of its first American enterprises is the beginning of a new series of Cassell's National Library. The first volume is "Hamlet," and other volumes will be published weekly. Cassell's National Library was edited by the late Henry Morley, a teacher of English literature who did untold good in bringing the English classics within the reach of those of slender purses. The volumes in the library are printed on good paper in clear readable type and in handy form and sell at 10 cents in paper, 20 cents in a neat cloth binding. A new design has been made for the wrappers, and in their new dress, these classic gems should prove a boon to students and to others anxious for the best books in their library, but whose purses are light.

IMPERIAL DEMOCRACY

By DAVID STARR JORDAN, Ph.D.,

President of Leland Stanford Junior University.

12mo, Cloth, $1.50.

Dr. Jordan's striking and timely book presents the various phases of a democracy's entrance upon imperialism in the light of history as well as recent facts and developments. He analyzes our relations to the Philippines and discusses various plans of conduct. He draws lessons from our management of Alaska. While the author is opposed to American control of subject races, his discussions are broad and fair, and his statements of the arguments on either side will prove of general interest and value at this time.

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in press a new edition of Edward Bellamy's last book "Equality," which will contain a portrait of the author and a biographical sketch, together with several fragments of hitherto unpublished writings of Mr. Bellamy.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. have in press a "History of America Before Columbus," by P. De Roo, in two volumes; a "Life of Bismarck," by Frank Preston Stearns; and "Lessons in Graphic Shorthand (Gabelsberger,)" prepared for the American public by C. R. Lippman.

DOUBLEDAY & MCCLURE Co. have just ready a volume of poems by Edwin Markham, which takes its title from that remarkably strong poem called "The Man With the Hoe," written after seeing Millet's painting; also, "The Real Hawaii: its history and present condition, including the true story of the revolution," by Lieutenant Lucien Young, U. S. N., being a new and revised issue of "The Boston at Hawaii."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish shortly "A Short History of Free Thought," by John M. Robertson, whose "Modern Humanists," and "Buckle and His Critics," have given him a standing among the writers on economic subjects; "Outlines of the Principles of Differential Diagnosis, with Chemical Memoranda," by Dr. Frederick J. Smith, Senior Assistant Physician at the London Hospital; "The Development of the English Novel," by W. L. Cross, Assistant Professor of English at Yale; and a new novel by Miss Margaret Sherwood, entitled "Henry Worthington, Idealist."

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish on the 10th inst. "The Autobiography of Mrs. Margaret Oliphant, 1828–1897," which is already attracting much attention in London, and which cannot but prove of absorbing interest here to the lover of Mrs. Oliphant's work as well as to the literary profession. They will publish shortly a volume of Venetian stories, entitled "The Enchanted Isles," by Max Pemberton. They have just ready Max Pemberton's new story, "The Garden of Swords," and "Thoughts of and for the Inner Life," by Dr. Dwight, which commemorates his retirement from the Presidency of Yale University.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready "Nature Studies in Berkshire," a collection of nature studies intermingled with the reflections of a writer—John Coleman Adams—who is at once a philosopher and a poet, illustrated with reproductions from photographs and drawings by Arthur Scott; "Ornamental Shrubs" for garden, lawn, and park planting, by Lucius D. Davis, with 100 illustrations; also "Our Insect Friends and Foes: how to collect, preserve, and study them," by Belle S. Cragin, with over 250 illustrations. They announce a book entitled "How to Swim," which will be of interest to experts as well as beginners, by Captain Davis Dalton, champion long-distance swimmer of the world and chief inspector of the U. S. Volunteer Life Saving Corps.

SMALL, MAYNARD & Co. will publish shortly a new novel by a new writer—"The Pedagogues," by Arthur Stanwood Pier. The story concerns itself with the contrasts and humors of that little-known department of Harvard University, the Harvard Summer School, and amusingly depicts the effect of the "minor culture" of a great university on the curiously miscellaneous body of young and old who gather in Cambridge each summer for so many different purposes of study. This house has just acquired the rights to the four books of verse by Bliss Carman formerly published by Lamson, Wolffe & Co.—"Low Tide on Grand-pré," "Behind the Arras," "Ballads of Lost Haven," and "By the Aurelian Wall." These four volumes comprise the whole of Mr. Carman's published work—so far as it has been issued in book form—excepting his part in "Songs from Vagabondia" and "More Songs from Vagabondia," in which he collaborated with Richard Hovey. "Low Tide on Grand-pré" and "Behind the Arras" are at present out of print, but new editions are in preparation for immediate publication.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.). D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., var., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Appleton, Amelia. That other woman. N. Y., F. Tennyson Neely, [1899.] 3-264 p. D. cl., $1. [1669

Boston is the scene of the misunderstandings of two young people. The girl's father had married, believing his wife lost at sea. "That other woman" for years made him believe his second marriage illegal, and the young man's mother would not consent to his marriage with a girl under a cloud.

Addresses delivered in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, Cleveland, Ohio. They are devoted to the consideration of the young man in his relationships as a son, a brother, a member of society, a lover, a husband, a citizen, to a young man and his money, and the young man as himself. The aim of these addresses, or character studies, is to arouse in young men a love and respect for things they are apt to regard lightly.

Barker, G: F., ed. Röntgen rays: memoirs by Röntgen, Stokes, and J. J. Thomson; tr. and ed. by G: F. Barker. N. Y., Harper, 1899. 7-76 p. 8°, (Harper's scientific memoirs, no. 1, ed. by Jos. S. Ames.) cl., 60 c. [1673

A new series of handbooks in science, embracing translations and reprints of various articles on physics, astronomy, chemistry, and other sciences, hitherto practically inaccessible to the general student.

Beresford, C: (Lord.) The break-up of China; with an account of its present commerce, currency, waterways, armies, railways, politics, and future prospects. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 22+491 p. por. maps, O. cl., $3. [1674

Lord Beresford visited China in 1898, at the request of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Great Britain, to make a report of its trade conditions as related to Great Britain. His book is the result of that visit and a concise statement of the Chinese question. He decides in favor of the policy of the "open door," and against "spheres of influence" or the "break-up of China." The author devotes a chapter to each important city, and gives a detailed statement of its trade and commerce, the relations existing between the foreign powers in it, and statements by the viceroys, reports of chambers of commerce, and the interviews with Chinese officials, who bear witness to the necessity of the "open door." Chapters are also devoted to the discussion of waterways, railways, armies and navies, trade, treatises, tariffs and currency, closing with accounts of visits to Japan and to America.

Bible. New Testament. The general epistles of SS. James, Peter, John, and Jude; with notes, critical and practical, by Rev. M. F. Sadler. New cheaper ed. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 39+305 p. 12°, cl., $1.50. [1675

Carus, Paul. Buddhism and its Christian critics. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1899. c. '94, '97. 2-316 p. D. (Religion of science lib., no. 26.) cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c. [1683

"The present book purports to be a contribution to comparative religion, and it is one-sided because it is addressed mainly to Christians, viz., to those Christians who are anxious to acquire an insight into the significance of Buddhist thought as it is at its best. Buddhism and Christianity are in many respects so similar as to appear almost identical; in other respects they exhibit such contrasts as to represent two opposite poles; and it is on this account that a study of Buddhism is indispensable for a proper comprehension of Christianity."—Preface.

Chambers, Rob. W. Outsiders: an outline. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1899.] c. 4+301 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1684

New York City is the scene. Its many little worlds of Bohemia, palatial life, boarding-houses, businesses of all kinds, etc., are worked into a tale dealing with literary and artistic life. The thread of the story only strings together some most suggestive thoughts on a great city.

A member of the Boston bar tells in this little book the story of the Dreyfus trial, etc. He says "a lawyer has tried to state with some legal accuracy, but without technical language, just what the general facts are." This is done in chapters entitled: Secret trial of Dreyfus; The legal situation; The leakage of evidence; The Esterhazy trial; The Zola trials; The Henry confession; Revision; The moral.

Hansson, Mrs. Laura Marholm. Studies in the psychology of woman; tr. by Georgia A. Etchison. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 4-348 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1709

The first attempt of a psychological study of woman by a woman. The writer deals with her subject from points of view and facts which are affected by the social position of women in the present and most recent past. She points out how wholly unsatisfactory for herself and for man her present condition is. Woman has educated her intellect at the expense of her heart and her emotions, and the only force by which she can ever achieve beneficial results—her womanliness—is being sacrificed more and more. The power of religion in the development of women is also studied, and the great differences of Protesant and Catholic conditions are pointed out. The true sphere of woman and its future is practically defined.

The author is professor of biblical history and literature in Brown University. The four centuries which followed the destruction of Jerusalem, the writer points out, witnessed the popular acceptance of the principles enunciated by the pre-exilic prophets and the remarkable expansion and application of the ceremonial law. Many of the religious rites and usages then developed, which, with slight modification, have become the institutions of the Christian church. List of books of reference (2 pages) given in Appendix III.

Locke, W: J:, (pseud.) Idols. N. Y., J: Lane, 1899. c. 5+366 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1725

The author's former work proved him addicted to the study of men and women under abnormal conditions. This book goes a step ahead of "Derelicts" and "At the gate of Samaria." It is a study of two men who loved the same woman. Under almost impossible circumstances the same woman gives false testimony, thinking to please her husband by saving his friend.

Lützow, Francis (Count.) A history of Bohemian literature. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. 12+425 p. D. (Literatures of the world ser.) cl., $1.50. [1726

Beginning with the "Question of the manuscripts," the author takes up the hymns, dating probably from the tenth century, which are the earliest uncontested Bohemian writings. In developing the theme of early Bohemian poetry several valuable translations are furnished as illustrations. A discussion of the early prose writers precedes an important portion of the book which treats of the epoch that witnessed the serious attempts to revive the vernacular in the place of Latin, and to institute linguistic as well as religious reforms, an epoch ending with the burning of John Hus and religious persecutions. Another large phase of the subject—the development of Bohemian prose in the sixteenth century—is fully treated, together with the various new impulses of the last hundred years. The author's treatment of the subject is happily reenforced by translations of characteristic examples of Bohemian literature. Bibliography (2 p.). Index.

Mackail, J. W: The life of William Morris. N. Y.. Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 2 v., 15+375; 8+364 p. pors. il. O. cl., net, $7.50. [1727

This biography was undertaken at the special request of the late Burne-Jones. The author had unreserved access to all materials in the possession of the family of William Morris, architect, painter, poet, decorator, weaver, printer, craftsman in many arts, socialist and revolutionary. His crowded, brave, and useful life is put on record with excellent judgment of essentials and non-essentials. The artistic and literary life of England for two generations can be studied in this book.

McLaughlin, Andrew Cunningham. A history of the American nation. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 14+587 p. pors. maps, il. D. (Twentieth century ser.) cl., net, $1.40. [1728

The purpose is to trace the main outlines of national development, to show how the American people came to be what they are. These outlines include the struggle of the nations of western Europe for possession of the New World; the foundation and growth of English colonies; the development of political ideas; the difficulties and disorders of the confederate period; the adoption of the Constitution of the United States; the effort to maintain national independence; and the subsequent struggles and events that finally brought all sections of the nation into a bond of perpetual union. These events have been so narrated that the reader will come to an appreciation of his political surroundings and of the political duties that devolve upon him. For this reason especial attention has been paid to political facts, to the rise of parties, to the issues involved in elections, to the development of governmental machinery, and, in general, to questions of government and administration. Short reference lists are appended to a number of chapters.

The name of the author stands for the righting of abuses and the championship of the weaker side. The pastor of the Bloomingdale Church, New York City, has written the history of the Jews since they participated in the discovery of America. He shows that the Jews have always been in the forefront in the arts, as poets, dramatists, actors, critics, musicians, painters, sculptors, architects; in the sciences, in literature, and statesmanship. He also aims to fix the responsibility of the Dreyfus affair. The book is a plea for justice for the Jew in America.

Plummer, Mary Wright, comp. Contemporary Spain as shown by her novelists; with an introd. by E: E. Hale, D.D. N. Y., Truslove, Hanson & Comba, 1899. c. 13+199 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1745

Extracts from the works of five leading contemporary Spanish novelists, the earliest of whose novels was published in 1874. These novelists are Pedro de Alarcon, Emilia Pardo Bazan, Beninto Perez Galdos, Armando Palacio Valdés and Juan Valera. The selections are arranged under the following headings: Local description, Religion, Politics, Manners and customs, and Society, upon which subjects they are designed to throw some light.

Plutarch [Lat. Plutarchus.] Plutarch's lives; Englished by Sir T: North; ed. by W. H. D. Rouse. In 10 v. V. 4. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 16°, (Temple classics.) cl., 50 c.; limp leath., 75 c. [1746

Praed, Mrs. Rose Murray Campbell. Madame Izán: a tourist story. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 2+331 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 264.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [1747

China and Japan are graphically and poetically described in telling the story of Madame Izán, who has just recovered from blindness. She had been married, but had never seen her husband, and is journeying to meet him when the various events of the novel take place.

Pritchard, Martin J. [pseud. for Mrs. A: Moore.] The passion of Rosamund Keith. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 5+477 p. D. cl., $1 50. [1748

The author of "Without sin" lays her story first in the hunting country of England, describing specimens of the old and new women. Rosamund Keith, a wholly lovable girl, upon the death of her aunt, goes with her uncle, an artist, through many of the most romantic parts of southern Europe. Reaching Albania in western Turkey, she is snowed into a monastery where she finds a long lost lover. The characteristics of the Greeks, the legends, wars, prejudices, cruelties, etc., of the Turks are worked into a highly sensational plot.

Richebourg, Emile. Les violettes blanches; ed., with grammatical and explanatory notes, and a French-English vocabulary, by F. Julien. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 5+69 p. 16°, (Macmillan's primary ser. of French and German reading books.) cl., net, 50 c. [1749

Sanders, Frank Knight, and Kent, C: Foster. The messages of the earlier prophets; arranged in the order of time, analyzed, and freely rendered in paraphrase. 2d ed. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. '98. 15+304 p. S. (Messages of the Bible, no. 1.) cl., net, $1.25. [1751

A new series in which emphasis is placed upon the concise, forcible, and realistic interpretation of the Bible. The books of the Bible are grouped according to a natural classification, their contents arranged in the order of appearance, and a scholarly yet popular paraphrase of their distinctive thought given in plain and expressive English. The purpose of the series is to enable any reader of the Bible to understand its meaning as a reverent scholar of to-day does, and in particular to receive the exact impression which the words as originally heard or read must have made upon those for whom they were delivered.

Sargeant, Kate R. One hundred mushroom receipts. Cleveland, O., C: Orr, 1899. c. 2-52+4 p. sq. S. bds., 50 c. [1752

The compiler says: "Owing to the present popular interest in the subject of mushrooms, and to the fact that there is no cook-book devoted exclusively to them, it would seem that a collection of receipts like the one here offered would meet with favor." To her own receipts she has added those collected from friends and from the different books, English and American, on the subject. The publisher, Mr. C. Orr, is librarian of the Case Library, Cleveland, O.

Sauer, C: Marquard. Spanish conversation grammar. 5th ed. N. Y., Wycil Publishing Co., 1899. 8+396+56 p. D. (Method-Gaspey-Otto-Sauer for the study of modern languages.) cl., $1.50. [1753

The present edition has been very carefully revised, not only with regard to the grammatical rules, but also with reference to the English text, the Spanish and English exercises, and the idioms in both languages. A key is bound in the volume.

Schwartz, Julia Augusta. Vassar studies. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 7+290 p. D. (University ser., no. 5.) cl., $1.50. [1754

Twelve college stories written with a double purpose. "The essential motive is to embody in literary form for the alumnæ of a particular institution memories and impressions of college days. The secondary purpose is to endeavor to present to the public a truthful picture of the life in a college community." Some of these sketches are entitled: In search of experience; The history of an ambition; The genius; Heroic treatment; The career of a radical; A superior young woman; That athletic girl, etc.

Scott, Hugh S., ["Henry Seton Merriman," pseud.] Dross. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co, 1899. c. 2+330 p. il. D. cl., $1.75. [1755

The story of a curious crime committed through a love of money. The leading character is a young Englishman who flies to Paris to escape his creditors. He takes a position as private secretary to the father of a beautiful girl with whom he has fallen in love at first sight, and becomes the repository of all the family secrets. The time is in the year 1869, just before the ending of the Second Empire.

Solitary summer (The), by the author of "Elizabeth and her German garden." N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 190 p. 12°, cl., $1.50. [1764

Spofford, Mrs. Harriet Eliz. Prescott. The maid he married. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 3+201 p. nar. S. (Blue cloth books.) cl., 75 c. [1765

The story of a pretty country girl who comes to Boston to spend a winter with her mother's sister, who has made a second marriage to a very wealthy elderly man. The girl's head is almost turned by her social success and her many admirers, and for a time she seems to have forgotten her accepted lover left in her little country town. The story turns on a momentary temptation to marry for wealth.

Sterndale, Rob. Armitage. The Afghan knife. New ed. N. Y., Brentano's, 1899. 2+444 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1766

Incidents of the Sepoy mutiny and the besieging of Delhi by the British in 1857 are interwoven. The principal characters are the Indian Prince Nawab Hyder Ali and Sir Paul and Lady Stanford. The Prince becomes involved in a political conspiracy, and he is also concerned in the abduction of a young girl.

Strange, Rev. Cresswell. Instructions on the Revelation of St. John the Divine: being an attempt to make this book more intelligible to the ordinary reader and so to encourage the study of it. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 19+351 p. D. cl., net, $2. [1767

Thompson, Helen Stuart. Windy Creek. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1899. c. 5+356 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1768

Windy Creek is supposed to be in Colorado in the vicinity of Denver. The inhabitants offer types of several kinds of originality. Men and women are susceptible to emotional religion, but lead about the same kind of lives even after they have alternately been stirred by prophets and preachers of the Baptist, Free Methodist, and Come-Outers creeds. The latter sect would seem to answer to the Christian scientists.

Van Bergen, R. Tales of our new possessions: the Philippines. San Francisco, Cal., The Whitaker & Ray Co., 1899. c. 160 p. il. sq. S. (Western ser. of readers, v. 5.) bds., 50 c. [1769

A historical reader, or can be used as a supplementary reader in the fourth, fifth, or sixth grades. The reader is supposed to start on a voyage to the Philippines. He stops at Hawaii, Guam, Yokohama, Tokyo, Woo-Sung, Shanghai, Cavité, and Manila, long enough to learn much about the geography, history, and customs of each place.

Walford, Mrs. Lucy Bethia. A little legacy, and other stories. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 4+344 p. 1 il. nar. S. (Blue cloth books.) cl, 75 c. [1770

Contents: The little legacy; A clerical exterior; Only Kittie; A terrible moment; Jemima; A metamorphosis; The Jubilee seat; Those sort of people.

Walker, S: Dry bread; or, the reign of selfishness: a novel for men. 2d ed. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham Co., 1899. c. '91, '99. 448 p. D. (Dillingham's metropolitan lib., no. 49.) pap., 50 c. [1771

A story of the future, picturing the condition of the poor as all business gradually becomes concentrated in the hands of the few. The hero of the story is Leon Pelon, left by his father an estate of seven millions. Leon is robbed of all he possesses by his guardian, General Sinclair, through the latter's connection with a great trust. All the money of the country finally gets into the hands of the twenty-five hundred directors of "The United Supply Company." The company's rule becomes so oppressive and cruel that the people rebel and a limited capital law is passed, which restores the country to prosperity and happiness.

Walter, Rob., M.D. Vital science: based upon life's great law the analogue of gravitation; agnosticism refuted. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1899. c. 319 p. O. cl., $1.50. [1772

The author believes that the living world is subject to fixed and fundamental laws that may be learned like those of chemistry and gravitation. His book embodies a new theory of creation, a new theory of the constitution of nature, of which John Tyndall only seems to have had knowledge, and new theories of the constitution and immortality of man and of vital forces. The systems of Tyndall, Spencer, Darwin, Drummond, and others are passed in review. He claims to offer convincing proof that the paradoxes of Scripture and the golden rule are scientific and practical truths. The author is a physician in active practice in Walter's Park, Pa.

Warren, J. Byrne Leicester, [Lord de Tabley.] The flora of Cheshire; ed. by Spencer Moore; with a biographical notice of the author by Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 104+399 p. por. D. cl., net, $3 50. [1773

Bibliography (List of books, periodicals, and manuscripts referred to and consulted) 20 p.

Waterloo, Stanley. The launching of a man. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., [1899.] c. 285 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1774

The man, Robert Sargent, is introduced as a sophomore at a western university. College life, from the amusing and serious side, is brought before the reader. After receiving his sheepskin, Robert is launched into life, and goes through the experiences of a practical American man, helping to engineer roads for modern commerce and civilization through the western country. The writer of "The story of Ab" excels in descriptions of nature and of healthy men and women. Ball games, foot races, and competitions in many studies and occupations are described.

Waterloo, Stanley. The wolf's long howl. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 3+288 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1775

A collection of short stories. Contents: The wolf's long howl; An Ulm; The hair of the dog that bit him; The man who fell in love; A tragedy of the forest; Love and a triangle; Red Dog's show window; Love and a latch-key, etc., etc.

Watson, Rosamond Marriott. The art of the house. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 12 + 185 p. 8°, (Connoisseur ser.) cl., price changed to $2. [1776

Weaver, Jonathan (Bp.) Heaven; or, that better country. Dayton, O., United Brethren Publishing House, 1899. c. 240 p. por. sq. D. cl., $1. [1777

Contains a dedication and introduction by the author; a preface by Rev. Wm. M. Weekley; an introduction by Rev. Wm. McKee, D.D., and twelve chapters under the following heads: Is there a better country?; Immortality—the soul; Heaven—a local substantial place; Heaven—various theories; Heaven—a better country; Heaven—progress—employment; Heaven—society—recognition; Heaven—home; Heaven—rest; Heaven—sources of happiness; Heaven—negative descriptions; Heaven—preparations for.

Welch, L: Sheldon, and Camp, Walter. Yale: her campus, class-rooms, and athletics; with introd. by S: J. Elder. Bost., L. C. Page & Co., 1899. c. 25+628 p. por. il. O. cl., $2.50. [1778

"The Yale campus" and "The Yale class-rooms," parts 1 and 2, are written by Lewis Sheldon Welch, and "Athletics at Yale," pt. 3. by Walter Camp. Pt 1 has chapters on: As to making a Yale man; The initiation; The sense of membership; Living only in Yale; Living and working by classes; Yale journalism; The poor student's opportunities, etc. Pt. 2 describes the various class-rooms—the scientific, divinity, medical and law schools, etc. Pt. 3 has chapters on rowing at Yale, football, baseball, track athletics, etc. There are a number of appendices, containing chronologies, tables of gifts, etc., etc.

Wells, Webster. The essentials of geometry. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1899. c. '98, '99. 6+399 p. D. hf. leath., $1.25. [1779

Suited to the needs of high schools and academies, as well as to the requirements of colleges and scientific schools. In some of its features the work is similar to the author's "Revised plane and solid geometry"; but important improvements have been introduced in line with the requirements of many progressive teachers.

Wheeler, W. H. Wheeler's graded studies in English: first lessons in grammar and composition. Chic., W. H. Wheeler & Co., [1899.] c. '98. 3–192 p. il. D. cl., 40 c. [1780

In the preparation of "Graded studies in English," the author has attempted "to present theory and practice in just proportion and in their proper relation." The lessons begin with "a logical development of the relation of ideas as the foundation of all connected discourse." The sentence is considered a unit of language. The relations of words in sentences are shown to be based on the relations of ideas in thought. Beginning with sentences of two words, the development of the sentence is shown until its most complicated form has been reached.

Wilson, Epiphanius. Dante interpreted: a brief summary of the life, times, and character of Dante; with an analysis of the "Divine comedy" and original translations in the Spenserian stanza. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 4+201 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1781

Intended as an introduction to the whole poem of the "Divine Comedy—," the "Inferno," the "Purgatorio," and the "Paradiso"; accompanying are sketches of Dante's life, times, and character, and his style as a poet, his method and materials.

Wise, Barton H. The life of Henry A. Wise, of Virginia, 1806–1876, by his grandson. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 13+434 p. 8°, cl., $3. [1782

Wordsworth, J:, (Bp.) The episcopate of Charles Wordsworth, Bishop of St. Andrews, Dunkeld, and Dunblane, 1853–1892: a memoir; with some materials for forming a judgment on the great questions in the discussion of which he was concerned. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1899. 25+402 p. por. O. cl., $5. [1784

The two great subjects to which Bishop Wordsworth directed his strength were the Eucharistic Controversy and the Reunion Movement. These topics are treated at length, his nephew showing fully his reasons for disagreeing with Bishop Wordsworth. There is a bibliography (List of the principal printed writings of Charles Wordsworth in chronological order) (23 p.).

Yarnall, Ellis. Wordsworth and the Coleridges; with other memories literary and political. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. 9+331 p. 8°, cl., $3. [1785

Young, Lucien. The real Hawaii; its history and present condition, including the true story of the revolution; a rev. and enl. ed. of "The Boston at Hawaii." N. Y., Doubleday & McClure Co., 1899. c. '98, '99. 9+371 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1786

Lieutenant Young was on the U. S. S. Boston stationed at Honolulu in 1892 and 1893, before and after the overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy. He claims to give the inside history of the revolution, his work being a defence of Minister Stevens and Captain Wiltse, the commander of the Boston. The present volume is brought up to date in every essential.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 3, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Books for the "Weekly Record," as well as all information intended for that department, must reach this office by Tuesday morning of each week.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

SUMMER BOOKSELLING.

ALTHOUGH the dog days are not yet upon us, we are rushing towards them, and plans for summer and vacation pleasures are already under debate—indeed, a few of the "early birds" are already on the wing. In our endeavor to accommodate the WEEKLY to the changing opportunities of the bookseller throughout the year, we venture to offer at this time a few hints for making the most of the summer trade, which this season promises to be more prosperous than could be looked for last year, when the country was distracted by the war with Spain.

The trade in novels and similar light reading always takes the lead during the vacation season, and can therefore without hesitation be liberally provided for. Business in this direction has considerably improved, and has become far more profitable, owing quite as much to the fact that more good copyright books, both in paper and cloth covers, are made now than formerly, as to the fact that the mills which for years unceasingly ground out stuff to feed the counters of the book butchers have been obliged to shut down. The American public, too, it is pleasant to note, is becoming fastidious as to the exterior of its reading-matter, as well as to that of other necessities it packs into its summer trunks. The bookseller, therefore, has every year a wider range among a better public, and should prosper accordingly.

Then there are guide-books (of which the more important will be found in the list of "Books for Summer Travellers," printed in the WEEKLY during the summer months,) as well as books of home and foreign travel, always in demand by tourists. The range of these, which should presently be brought prominently forward on the counters, is limited only by the size of the world, and they offer a good opportunity for sales.

One of the most important aids in pushing business during this season is the preparation of a tempting catalogue of books suitable for shore and mountain reading. It should be prepared with the view of bringing to the special attention of summer visitors the classes of books previously alluded to and giving attractive foretastes of the delights stored in them. Such a catalogue should be found serviceable by two classes of the trade: first, city dealers with regular customers, whom it is desirable to follow "with the compliments of the season" into summer haunts, and who may retain trade by filling orders by mail for the multitudes who go far out of sight of any bookstore, but can be cultivated by the aid of Uncle Sam; second, booksellers at or near summer resorts, who desire to pleasantly acquaint summer visitors that there is a bookstore near at hand from which they can be supplied. With such an aid old customers may be retained, and with energy and foresight much new trade can be created.

Those who for the first time establish branch stores at summer resorts, will do well to remember, that the "summer boarder," unlike the eel, strenuously objects to being "skinned;" hence the dealer who is intent upon making a success of his summer venture must be guided by the same rules that govern his business policy at home. He must be as enterprising and alert to meet demands in his summer quarters, as he would be at home during the holiday season, if not more so, because that which a customer wants during his vacation time, he wants at once or as soon as possible, or not at all. Then if the alert bookseller will provide a cool, shady store, and cheerful and intelligent service his customers will not object if the prices are a trifle higher than they are at home.

As we have already noted, A. S. Capehart, the Director of the Liberal Arts division of the Paris Exposition, has expressed his intention to facilitate the collective exhibit of the book trade as planned by M. Em. Terquem. It will be necessary, however, for each exhibitor to make application individually for space, and then to place himself in communication with M. Terquem, whose address is No. 19 Rue Scribe, Paris. The firms who have thus far made arrangements to be represented are D. Appleton & Co., The Century Company, J. B. Lippincott Co., George Barrie & Sons, Rand, McNally & Co., Ginn & Co., Little, Brown & Co., Lothrop Publishing Co., Dana Estes & Co., Small, Maynard & Co., Herbert Stone & Co., D. Van Nostrand Co., W. R.

Jenkins, A. S. Barnes & Co., and W. E. Benjamin. Other firms who have expressed their intention to make application for space are Harper & Brothers, Charles Scribner's Sons, American Book Company, Dodd, Mead & Co., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and the Johns Hopkins Press. The Grolier Club and other book clubs are also making arrangements for elaborate display, so that the book exhibit from this country promises to be a fairly representative one. As the space is limited it is advisable that application should be made without delay. Blanks may be obtained from A. S. Capehart, Director Liberal Arts and Chemical Industries, Paris Exposition, Auditorium, Chicago, Ill.

SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN HAY ON INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

SECRETARY OF STATE JOHN HAY on May 28 wrote a letter to Alfred Austin in reply to his recent communication on the subject of international copyright, which we give below, omitting only the complimentary introduction:

". . . I am, as you assume, greatly interested in the subject of international copyright. I sympathized and, to the extent of my ability, co-operated with the efforts of men more energetic and capable than myself to reform our objectionable copyright system and to have the present arrangement enacted into law. I think you do something less than justice to the law itself and to the Congress that enacted it. There were many interests opposed to it, and it required no little patience and care to bring together the different groups of opinion favorable to the principle involved. The law as passed was not what everybody wanted, but it was the only settlement within reach, and it was in itself, I venture to say, if not perfect in all its provisions, a most laudable and beneficent act. Its good effects have surpassed the expectations of its friends.

"From inquiries I have recently made I am led to believe that the operation of the law has not profited American publishers to anything like the extent they anticipated, and while it has certainly been an advantage to American authors they have not been its chief beneficiaries. English writers have profited largely by the protection afforded them, and English publishers have reaped great advantage by establishing branch offices in this country, which have enabled them to handle their English business at inconsiderable expense and to extend their profitable operations here.

"It is not in its application to pure literature alone that our law of copyright ought to be judged. In the department of art it affords absolutely perfect security to producers, all rights in paintings, etchings, drawings, sculpture and architectural plans being reserved by simple registry at a nominal fee. The same is true of musical works of all sorts. Recent legal decisions have taken the highest ground, following the purpose of the framers of the law, in affording to music the most liberal protection. Dramatic works also receive the most ample security. They are better protected, I am informed, than even in England.

"It is in the matter of the manufacture of books alone that the complaint of the English author is founded, and I cannot but think that the hardships which are alleged to proceed from this source are somewhat exaggerated. The operation of the law has been in the main of enormous value to English authors, both in their financial returns and the spread of their fame and influence. In many cases the prices of literary work under the action of the law have more than doubled. The world of English letters was never so prosperous as now. The hardship of compelling the manufacture of English books in America has greatly decreased with the constantly diminishing cost of the work, and where a book impresses a publisher as worthy his attention the question of the outlay for printing is hardly regarded. Where such a book has not seemed of sufficient value to be reprinted here, the author has, of course, been free to import a foreign edition, but I am told there has not been an instance in which this has operated disadvantageously to a later edition of the work or to the author's next book.

"The growth of respect for literary property has always been proportionate to the familiarity with literary exchange, and since the passage of our law the security conferred upon many people formerly indifferent to the subject has created for the copyright law a body of new supporters. It is a great advantage to feel that no backward step will be taken, and the almost unanimous voice of American men of letters, including the entire league of American authors and not a few of our most prominent publishers, is in cordial sympathy with your own lofty and generous aspiration for the absolute freedom of literary exchange throughout the world."

KIPLING'S GRIEVANCE AGAINST G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS.

THE counsel for G. P. Putnam's Sons received a copy of the long expected complaint from Rudyard Kipling's attorneys on the afternoon of May 19, in which the author sets forth his grievances against various publishers for having, as he claims, reproduced his books without proper authority.

In the outset of his complaint Kipling declares that action is brought against G. P. Putnam's Sons, George Haven Putnam and Irving Putnam, also D. Appleton & Co., the Doubleday & McClure Co., Charles Scribner and Arthur H. Scribner, trading as Charles Scribner's Sons, and the Century Company.

In the body of the complaint Kipling alleges, in the first place, that he is temporarily an inhabitant of the State of Vermont, and is an alien and a subject of her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain. The complaint goes on to state that the plaintiff is an author, and carried on the business of writing books, "comprising tales, sketches, ballads, verses, and other literary compositions," and has been engaged in such business for fifteen years, during which time he has carefully schooled himself in the requirements of his business, and in acquiring and developing a style of composition and presentation which, in his opinion, is peculiar to himself.

The ground of complaint against the defendants, according to the formal complaint, is that at various times the accused publishers have gathered together under a common name series of volumes of Kipling's works, numbered in sequence, and all forming an edition. Kipling sets forth in his complaint that he has only authorized one édition of his collected works in this country, that one having been published by Scribners and known as the Outward Bound edition.

In support of the complaint, Kipling cites incidentally the fact that in collecting the various short stories, ballads, and verses which he has written from time to time for newspapers and periodicals, he has devised and appropriated in advance of all others, for the purpose of identifying his own writings, a name in the nature of a trade-mark; that among the names so devised and first appropriated are the following: "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Soldiers Three," etc.

Limited rights for publication as individual volumes were extended to various firms, but none of them, with the exception of Charles Scribner's Sons, was authorized to publish a complete set of the author's works under one name.

COPELAND & DAY RETIRE FROM THE PUBLISHING BUSINESS.

COPELAND & DAY announce officially that as soon as necessary arrangements can be made they will withdraw from the publishing business. We agree with the Boston Transcript that no firm in the country has preserved a higher standard of integrity in craftsmanship and in commercial standing, as well as in the character of literature issued, than the young firm that is now withdrawing from the field. The history of Copeland & Day begins with the publication of the "Poems" of Francis Thompson, in connection with a London house, and closes with the publication of a novel, a book of essays, and a book of verse, namely, "How Hindsight Met Provincialatis," by L. C. Whitelock, "Literary Likings," by Richard Burton, and "Impressions," by Lilla Cabot Perry. Lovers of fine books all over the country will learn with regret that no more new books are to come from the quaint little place in Cornhill, bearing the imprint of the "lily among thorns." To be sure this regret will be tempered to collectors who possess certain of the rare and beautiful books which Copeland & Day have made during the past five and a half years, and the reflection will be a soothing one that their value, which has steadily increased, will now increase the more.

The list of original work by Copeland & Day comprises a number of books which have taken their place in the first rank of those produced by authors of these closing years of the century. Among the publications of this house are the poems of Lionel Johnson, Francis Thompson, and the "Matins" of Francis Sherman; "The Road to Castaly," by Alice Brown; the "Poems" of John Tabb; "Patrins," by Louise Imogen Guiney; "Harvard Episodes," by C. M. Flandrau; "The Arabella and Araminta Stories," by Gertrude Smith; "Songs from Vagabondia," by Bliss Carman and Richard Hovey; "The Listener in the Town" and "The Listener in the Country," by J. E. Chamberlin; "The Black Riders," by Stephen Crane; "Lyrics of Earth," by Archibald Lampman; "Free to Serve," by E. Rayner; "In Titian's Garden," by Harriet Prescott Spofford; "In Childhood's Country," by Louise Chandler Moulton; the volumes of the Oaten Stop Series of poetry, wherein many minor poets found expression in beautiful form—Madison Cawein, Hannah Parker Kimball, Evelyn Stein, Zitella Cocke among them; the charming and only complete translation of the famous "Aucassin and Nicolette," by E. W. Thompson; the translations of "Our Lady's Tumbler," by Isabel Butler; the Zola translations by William Apthorp, and his two volumes of Essays "By the Way," "About Music," and "About Musicians."

These are but a few among the four-score books that have been issued during the short history of the house. Of these, several were privately printed, notably the memorial book of Robert Louis Stevenson, by Alice Brown and Louise Imogen Guiney, of which several copies have recently found their way to collectors through auction rooms, and have brought sums in large advance on the original price. Among the few privately printed books of Copeland & Day is "The Decadent," the first book to bear their imprint.

The individual members of the firm are Herbert Copeland and F. Holland Day. They have had about them a pleasant set of latter-day litterati, and some of the breakfasts given by the firm to their authors will long be remembered in contemporary annals, notably the one given on the day of the publication of "Vivette," by Gelett Burgess, "Middleway," by Kate Whiting Patch, and "Victory," by Hannah Parker Kimball.

SUIT OF GILMORE vs. EARLE AND THAYER DECIDED IN FAVOR OF PLAINTIFF.

JUDGE LOWELL in the United States Circuit Court of Boston, on May 18, sent down a final decree in the case of Laura E. Gilmore against James H. Earle and William M. Thayer, awarding the plaintiff $11,181. The action has been pending for twelve years, and was brought for an alleged violation of the copyright law on the part of the defendants, the plaintiff claiming that a portion of a life of James A. Garfield, written by Mr. Thayer and published by Mr. Earle, was made up from the life of Garfield written by James R. Gilmore, the plaintiff's husband.

CASSELL & CO. SUSTAIN THEIR RIGHTS IN THEIR DICTIONARIES.

AN interesting decision upon the subject of trade rights or good will in books has just been rendered by Judge Kirkpatrick in the Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey. As is well known, Cassell & Company, Limited, of London and New York, have for a number of years, published a series of school dictionaries, including French-English and English-French, German-English and English-German. In the latter part of 1898 there appeared upon the market books that resembled these dictionaries; a close inspection, however, showed them to be imitations made by photographically reproducing the pages upon a somewhat reduced scale, and then dressing up the books so as closely to resemble the genuine article. An action was brought; and the decree signed, among other things, enjoins the defendants and all in privity with them, "from directly or indirectly advertising, printing, manufacturing, selling, offering for sale, or otherwise disposing of, any dictionaries whatever with a back of a red or reddish color having stamped thereon a title in letters of a size and character and arranged similarly to the title stamped upon the complainant's dictionaries; or any French-English and English-French dictionary containing title-pages arranged like or substantially like the title-pages in complainant's French-English and English-French dictionary, or containing the matter and heading 'Preface to the 116th Thousand' or the matter entitled 'Preface' which appear therein; or any German-English and English-German dictionary containing the matter entitled 'Preface' which appears in complainant's said dictionary; and also from using with any dictionaries whatever the name 'Cassell's;' or a red or reddish back and green or greenish sides, or any form of binding, lettering or statement which shall by reason of the collocation of size, shape, or color, or statement, present the general appearance of complainant's dictionaries or of any of them."

A CURIOUS DECISION AS TO MECHANICAL REPRODUCTION OF COPYRIGHT MUSIC.

JUSTICE STERLING on May 20 rendered a curious decision regarding a mooted point in musical copyright. The decision was given in the Chancery division of the English High Court of Justice. It was in favor of the Æolian Co., against whose agents, Boosey & Co., action had been brought to restrain them from issuing paper rolls so perforated as to reproduce the airs of songs copyrighted by them. The Justice's decision was that the paper rolls are part of the instrument, consequently their sale involves no breach of copyright.

He held that, as the perforated sheets are unintelligible to all except the initiated, they were outside the copyright act. This act provides that the word "copyright" means "the sole and exclusive liberty of printing or otherwise multiplying copies of any subject." As it is impossible to read these rolls of music when not used in connection with the "Æolian," for which they were made, no infringement was allowed.

A curious feature of the decision was the finding that the defendants had no right to take from sheet music published by the plaintiffs the words "andante," "adagio," or other such terms regulating the expression. The Justice issued an injunction restraining the defendants from doing this.

It would be an interesting test of this decision if perforated music sheets were to be made on which translations into English of the recognized marks of musical expression appeared instead of the Italian words.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MISS HARRIET A. FARRAND, author of "The Moravian Indian Boy," and several books on religious subjects, died at Chicago May 30. For thirty years she was associate editor of The Advance.

REV. BEVERLY BETTS died May 21 at Jamaica, L. I. He was born in New York August 3, 1827. He was librarian of Columbia College for fifteen years, and was a well-known writer on genealogy and heraldry.

JOHN W. OVERALL, author of "A Catechism of the United States Constitution," "The Negro as He Was and Will Be," etc., died in New York May 20. He was born in 1823 in the Shenandoah Valley, Va., where his ancestors had settled in 1700.

WILLIAM WARE, of the school-book publishing firm of William Ware & Co., Boston, died at Milton, Mass., May 16, aged fifty. His firm is the successor to the firm of Hickling Swan & Brewer, afterwards Brewer, Tileston & Co., and then since 1877 William Ware & Co.

ROSALIE, more generally known as Rosa, Bonheur, the famous animal painter, died at Fontainebleau, May 26. She was born at Bordeaux, France, March 22, 1822, and studied under her father Raymond Bonheur. She is perhaps known best in this country by her "Horse Fair," which is now the property of the Metropolitan Museum of Art at New York.

BENJAMIN VINCENT, the editor of "Haydn's Dictionary of Dates," died recently at the advanced age of eighty-seven. When failing health some half a century ago forced Joseph Haydn to retire from his task, Mr. Vincent took his place, and ever since 1856 the work has been edited by him. Mr. Vincent until the last labored at the dictionary, preparing, adding, and arranging its text.

DR. JOHN MOIR, late president of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, died in Edinburgh, Scotland, May 14, aged ninety-two.

He was born in Verdun, France, his father, a surgeon in the British navy, having been taken prisoner during the Napoleonic wars. Dr. Moir was a prominent writer, not only on medical matters, but on religious subjects, being the author of the popular pamphlets on "Systematic Giving," widely read in this country. He was the brother of James Moir, well known as a merchant in New York City up to his retirement in the seventies, and uncle of the Rev. W. W. Moir, of the Church of the Holy Communion, in West Twentieth Street, New York.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. FLORA ANNIE STEEL has written a new novel of life in India—one which is expected to rival "On the Face of the Waters." It is mentioned as a powerful story, and it is to be published as a serial in the Pall Mall Magazine.

MAURICE HEWLETT, author of the "The Forest Lovers," etc., begins a new romance in the current number of The Fortnightly Review, entitled "The Judgment of Boris." Most of the action takes place in Venice in the middle of the fifteenth century.

THE announcement that Richard Henry Stoddard is preparing to publish his reminiscences reminds us that the genial poet is actually nearing his seventy-sixth year, and has been known to the public as a writer for over half a century. He may be considered the last of that circle of writers of which Poe, Longfellow, Lowell, and Bryant formed a part. Stoddard came into close contact with many of the more famous of his contemporaries, and his notes, therefore, promise to have a personal as well as a literary interest.

PROFESSOR ARTHUR TWINING HADLEY, author of a work on "Railroad Transportation," and "The Relations Between Private Property and Public Welfare," etc., was elected on May 25 President of Yale University. Professor Hadley was born in New Haven April 23, 1856, and is the only child of James B. Hadley, professor of Greek at Yale. He entered Yale in 1872 and was graduated in 1876. He was the next two years at the University of Berlin, and upon his return was made tutor at Yale, giving instructions in various branches for four years. From 1883 to 1886 he was university lecturer on railroad administration. Since 1886 he has been professor of political science in the graduate department. For two years—1887 to 1889—he was associate editor of The Railroad Gazette of New York. From 1885 to 1887 he was Commissioner of Labor Statistics of Connecticut, and in this capacity he published two reports which attracted great attention. In 1883 he contributed a series of articles on "Transportation" to "Lalor's Cyclopædia of Political Science," and in 1886 he was employed to prepare part of the article on railways in the "Encylopædia Britannica." He is the author of the chapter on the railway in its business relations in Scribner's "American Railways," 1888. He wrote the labor report of the State of Connecticut for 1885–'86, and that of 1886–'87, while he was Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Camera Obscura is the title of a new international monthly magazine to be printed in four languages. It is to be edited by J. R. A. Schouten.

A "NEW Lippincott," begins with the July issue of Lippincott's Magazine. With the forthcoming issue the readers are promised practically a new magazine. A posthumous story by the author of "David Harum" will be presented; it is called "The Teller." The novel of the number is "The Fox-Woman," by John Luther Long. The fiction is further strengthened by "Marta's Inheritance," in which Mrs. Crowninshield gives the intimate flavor of Cuban life. Anne Hollingsworth Wharton will contribute the first of two articles on "The Salon in Old Philadelphia." The poetry of the number will include a song by James Whitcomb Riley.

IN celebration of its twentieth anniversary The Art Amateur has issued an exceedingly handsome number. It begins with a retrospect of the magazine at a time when the art movement was in its beginings. The Art Amateur, it will be remembered, was founded by Montague Marks, of whom an interesting account is given as well as of his successor, John W. Van Oost, who is a descendant of the famous Flemish artist of the same name. Among the contributors to this number are Montague Marks, W. A. Rogers, Ernest Knaufft, Rhoda Holmes Nicholls, David Malcolm, E. C. Dierhold, Cecilia Bennett, E. C. Darby, and Fannie Rowell Priestman.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BOSTON, MASS.—Lee & Shepard have removed to far more convenient and attractive quarters at 202 Devonshire Street, which are more in keeping with the new life that has been infused into their business under the management of W. F. Gregory.

CARTHAGE, N. Y.—Bennett & Stafford, booksellers, have been succeeded by Holbrook & Son.

CLEVELAND, O.—Fred L. Becker, bookseller, has sold out.

CLINTON, MASS.—George E. Martin, bookseller and newsdealer, has made arrangements for the use of the entire store where he is now located as soon as the post office is removed.

GALESBURG, ILL.—P. J. Andrews, of the firm of Dellquest & Andrews, of El Paso, Tex., has, together with his brother, S. J. Andrews, opened an Eclectic Book Store here. Andrews Bros. is the style of the new firm, and the business will be under the management of S. J. Andrews.

EL PASO, TEX. — A. W. Dellquest, of the firm of Dellquest & Andrews, has leased his half interest in the Eclectic Book Store here to his partner, P. J. Andrews. Mr. Dellquest left El Paso on May 24 for New England, where he intends to start another Eclectic Book Store.

GRIFFIN, GA.—J. F. Huff, bookseller, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

HAMPTON, VA.—Ellison & Keator have opened a book and stationery store here.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—H. W. Beecher and J. Leo Kymer have purchased the interest of G.

Raynor in the business formerly run as Raynor & Co., and will conduct it under the firm-name of Beecher & Kymer. They assume all liabilities and will collect all outstanding bills.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The real estate, uncollected accounts and stock of books, stationery, etc., of Lozell H. Fielding will shortly be sold at private sale.

TACOMA, WASH.—G. Wolff & Co., booksellers, have been succeeded by J. Warren Martenis.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LTD., have just ready "Mulhall's Dictionary of Statistics," thoroughly revised to November, 1898.

D. C. HEATH & Co. have in preparation for the English Classics Series Cooper's "Last of the Mohicans," edited by John G. Wright, principal of the Girls' High School, New York City.

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, will publish a new edition of De Morgan's "Elementary Illustrations of the Differential and Integral Calculus."

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish in the fall "The Life and Letters of Dr. John Donne, Dean of St. Paul's, 1573–1631," by Edmund Gosse; also "Imperial India," by G. W. Steevens, author of "With Kitchener to Khartoum."

M. F. MANSFIELD & A. WESSELS will publish shortly "'Black Canyon,' [by Samuel Osbourne,] 'Not I,' [by Robert Louis Stevenson,] and other Stevensoniana," reprinted in facsimile of the original editions, 250 copies on Enfield and 100 on Japan paper.

A. M. ROBERTSON, of San Francisco, Cal., has just published in an attractive pamphlet, "The Man with the Hoe," the poem written by Edwin Markham after seeing Millet's famous painting, and published originally in The San Francisco Examiner, January 15, 1899.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY, Philadelphia, have purchased from the New Amsterdam Book Company the plates and all of the sheet and bound stock of "Uncrowning a King," by Edward S. Ellis, and will add the book to their series of books for young people.

R. H. RUSSELL has just published two of Hauptmann's plays, translated by Mary Morison—"Lonely Lives" and "The Weavers." Hauptmann's poetic masterpiece, "The Sunken Bell," translated by Charles Henry Meltzer, will be published at once. These plays are issued uniform in style with Russell's edition of "Cyrano."

GINN & Co. have in preparation "Irving's Sketch-Book," edited, with introduction and notes, by Mary E. Litchfield. The notes give such information as is necessary to an intelligent study of the work. The introductory chapter makes clear the conditions under which Irving wrote, and defines his place in American and English literature.

BRENTANO'S will shortly publish, under the title of "Queer Luck" a collection of stories of interest to every lover of the game of draw poker, by David A. Curtis, that attracted attention all over the country when they appeared, first at irregular intervals, in the Sunday edition of the New York Sun. They will publish at the same time a volume of short stories, entitled "A Silent Singer," by Clara Morris, the well-known actress.

THOMAS B. MOSHER, Portland, Maine, has just published an exquisite vest pocket edition of the Rubàiyàt in Fitzgerald's final revised translation, with his notes printed without abbreviation, and a preface by Nathan Haskell Dole, who has also contributed a pronouncing vocabulary of all Persian names in the translation. The matter is printed on Van Gelder's hand-made paper, and decorated with Chiswick head-bands and tail-pieces.

ARTHUR MACDONALD, specialist in the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., will shortly publish in a separate volume his "Experimental Study of Children, including anthropometrical and psycho-physical measurements of [1074] Washington school children, and a bibliography." This matter has already been published in chapters xxi. and xxv. of the Report of the Commissioner of Education for 1897–1898, U. S. Bureau of Education, whole number 248.

A CLEVER swindle is being worked with great success throughout Adams County, Pennsylvania. A woman book agent goes from house to house leaving books for examination, which are collected by a man the next day. Later the woman again appears, and upon being told that the man had taken away the sample books weeps copiously, says the villain has been collecting her books all over town, pleads poverty and accepts the compensation, which is generally offered.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish in the fall Winston Spencer Churchill's book, "The River War—an account of the recovery of the Soudan." The author will describe in exact military detail Lord Kitchener's campaigns from 1896 to 1898. Sixty drawings will be contributed by Lieutenant McNeil of the Seaforth Highlanders. The work will be edited by Col. F. Rhodes. The last two chapters will deal with the military lessons of the campaign and with the Imperial aspect of the recovery of the Soudan.

H. W. BRYANT, Portland, Me., has just published the famous oration pronounced by Victor Hugo on Voltaire on the one hundredth anniversary of the death of the philosopher. The translator is James Parton, author of the "Life of Voltaire." In a brief introduction it is stated that among the Americans present on that memorable May 30, 1878, when the oration was delivered, was the historian Thomas Wentworth Higginson, who has left an account of his impressions on the occasion in his "Cheerful Yesterdays."

CASSELL & COMPANY, Limited, have just ready an entirely new edition of Lewis Wright's "Practical Poultry Keeper." The first edition was published in 1867, its object being to give practical details with such clearness and simplicity that it might be "put into the hands of a person totally ignorant of poultry keeping, with the reasonable certainty that its instructions, if followed, would command success." The constant demand for rapidly succeeding editions would seem to prove that the work has fulfilled its intended purpose.

"THE TWO KINGDOMS," a work dealing with social questions of the day, has been lately written and brought out by the Rev. Thomas McGrady, of Bellevue, Ky. After publication the book met with the disapproval of Father McGrady's bishop, who ordered it suppressed, and the copies already printed to be expurgated by cutting out pages 127–140, and obliterating with ink twenty-four passages in the remaining text. A very small part of this expurgated edition is in circulation. A few copies are now in the hands of The Robert Clarke Company, and are selling rapidly as literary curiosities, at $1 each.

RAND, MCNALLY & CO. will publish on the 15th inst. "The Romance of Graylock Manor," a story by Louise F. P. Hamilton. This work carries with it a pathetic interest, from the fact that the author, who was the wife of Major-General Schuyler Hamilton, U. S. V., died shortly after completing the manuscript, and was unable to experience the pleasure of seeing her first literary effort in print. They have just ready Stanley Waterloo's new novel, entitled "The Launching of a Man." This story describes university life in a vivid and fascinating manner, and possesses an atmosphere of the campus and schoolroom that will be appreciated by every "U" man in the country. The hero, Robert Sargent, passes successfully through college, and is then "launched" upon the ocean of American business life, where he battles long and arduously for supremacy. The book contains much humor, some pathos, and is interspersed with plenty of healthy sentiment.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish this month the first volume of the series of Oxford Commentaries. The series is under the general editorship of Walter Lock, D.D., Warden of Keble College, and Ireland Professor of the Exegesis of Holy Scripture. The first volume is that on Job with introduction and notes by Edgar C. S. Gibson, D.D., Vicar of Leeds. The object of each commentary is primarily exegetical. The editors will deal only subordinately with questions of textual criticism or philology, but taking the English text in the revised version as their basis, they will "try to combine a hearty acceptance of critical principles with loyalty to the Catholic Faith." In this way it is expected that the series may be of use both to the theological student and to the clergy, and also to the growing number of laymen and lay-women who wish to read the Bible intelligently and reverently. Other books of the series will be: Samuel I. and II., by L. J. Bebb; Ezekiel, H. A. Redpath; Wisdom, E. L. Delahey; St. Matthew, J. H. Bernard; St. Luke, W. K. Burroughs; St. John, H. Scott Holland; The Acts, R. B. Rackham; Romans, A. Robertson; Corinthians I., H. L. Goudge; Colossians, H. J. Riddelsdell; Ephesians, Walter Lock; Hebrews, E. C. Wickham; and St. James, R. J. Knowling.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & CO. publish to-day "The Prometheus Bound of Æschylus," translated by Paul E. More, who has both the scholarship to insure accuracy and adequateness in his rendering, and the literary skill to give it an English form worthy of its classic original; "Every-Day Butterflies," a work for popular reading (with 8 full-page illustrations), by Dr. Samuel H. Scudder, well and widely known as an authority on butterflies; also, "A First Book of Birds," by Olive Thorne Miller, who describes birds' nests, the young birds—their growth and how they are fed, how they get their feathers, and are taught to fly and to do various other things—who, in short, provides for the layman a small encyclopædia of birds, full of information and exceedingly interesting, illustrated with many pictures of birds. They have just added to their Riverside Literature Series Schurz's "Abraham Lincoln," Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," and "Selections from the writings of Eleven English authors." They will publish shortly a volume entitled "A Dividend to Labor," by Professor Nicholas Paine Gilman, who conceives the dividend to labor (aside from wages, which he does not discuss) as direct or indirect. The indirect dividend will be the subject of the larger part of the volume, the closing portions of the book being devoted to the subject of profit sharing.

THE fifteen-volume edition of Kipling's works is not to be published by the Doubleday & McClure Company, as has been reported, nor, for that matter, by any one publishing house. It is an edition arranged for by the author and issued jointly by his authorized publishers—D. Appleton & Co., The Century Company, and the Doubleday & McClure Company. It will be marketed, as already announced by us, by the Book Department of the H. B. Claflin Co. The edition will comprise the following volumes: (1) "The Seven Seas"; (2) "Many Inventions"; (3) "The Jungle Book"; (4) "The Second Jungle Book"; (5) "Captains Courageous"; (6) "The Day's Work"; (7, 8) "From Sea to Sea," two volumes; (9) "Barrack-Room Ballads," "Departmental Ditties," and other verses; (10) "Plain Tales from the Hills"; (11) "The Naulahka"; (12) "Soldiers Three," "Story of the Gadsbys," and "In Black and White"; (13) "Life's Handicap," and "Stories of Mine Own People"; (14) "Under the Deodars," "The Phantom Rickshaw," and "Wee Willie Winkie"; and (15) "The Light that Failed." The set will also contain a biographical sketch by Professor Charles Eliot Norton, and will have a photogravure portrait of Kipling. The edition will be sold only in sets, and for the present the output is limited to 20,000 sets, which will retail at $15 a set.

L. C. PAGE & CO., Boston, have in preparation The Court Memoir Series, which will include the memoirs of Marguerite de Valois, written by herself; those of Henry IV. by the court historian of Louis XIV.; those of the Cardinal de Retz, and of Mme. de Montespan and the secret memoirs of the courts of the last three Louis who really reigned, written by the Duchess of Orleans, Mme. du Haussett, and the Princess Lamballe. These volumes will be illustrated with etchings, photogravures, and mezzotints. They also announce an edition of "The Imitation of Christ," with illustrations by Lawrence Housman, engraved by Miss Clemence Housman; "Saints in Art," by Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement, a new volume in the Art Lovers' Series; "Our National Music and Its Sources," by Louis C. Elson, and "Famous Violinists of To-day," by Henry C. Lahee, two new volumes in the Music Lovers' Series; "Great Actors" and "Famous Actresses," two volumes in a new series—The Stage Lovers—by Norman Hapgood; and "Poetry of American Wit and Humor," by Frederick Laurence Knowles, an addition to the Cap and Gown Series. There is to be a new Omar Khayyám volume by Heron Allen, a companion to that published last fall, and comparing Fitzgerald's translation with the original Persian. Fitzgerald's "Salámán and Absál," an allegory from the Persian of Jami, will appear in a style uniform with the new Omar volume and will be edited by Nathan Haskell Dole.

HARPER & BROTHERS have in press a comprehensive history of "The War with Spain," by Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, which will be profusely illustrated; "Japan in Transition," by J. Stafford Ransome, whose work is a review of the progress, policy, and methods of the Japanese since the war with China, and is somewhat similar in character to Colquhoun's "China in Transformation," that attracted great attention last year; "That Fortune," a new novel by Charles Dudley Warner, which is said to be "a vivid and powerful portrayal of the life and character of the modern millionnaire heiress;" "Puerto Rico: its Conditions and Possibilities," by William Dinwiddie, who was special correspondent for Harpers' Weekly in that island, and who gives much practical information to those who may contemplate settling, or investing capital, in this new possession of ours; "The Sixth Sense," a collection of nine short stories, by Margaret Sutton Briscoe; "Mrs. Milo Bush and other worthies—their recollections," a collection of humorous and whimsical stories, by Hayden Carruth, with illustrations by A. B. Frost and Marshall Wilder; "Lady Louisa Stuart—selections from her manuscripts," edited by A. J. Home, a book that is certain to appeal to lovers of biography and history, as Lady Stuart (who died in 1857 at the age of ninety-four) brings the reader into contact with court life at the close of the eighteenth century, as well as with the noted literary men and women of her day; "The Santiago Campaign," by an eye-witness—Captain John Bigelow, the brother of Poultney Bigelow; also "Cromwell's Own," a stirring story of the English Civil War, by Arthur Paterson.

FOREIGN NOTES.

DR. GARNETT'S successor as keeper of the printed book department of the British Museum is Mr. G. K. Fortescue, son of the Dean of Perth. He has long been an official of the Museum, and is the author of more than one valuable index.

GREENING & CO., London, will publish shortly a volume entitled "Rudyard Kipling, the Man and His Work, being an attempt at an 'appreciation,'" by G. F. Monkshood. The volume will include a chapter on "the last and early works of Kipling."

ELLIS & ELVY, London, announce another volume of the Siddal edition of D. G. Rossetti's poems, to be issued early this month. The new volume will be entitled "Ballads," and will contain the three poems: "Rose Mary," "The White Ship," and "The King's Tragedy."

ELLIOT STOCK, London, has in preparation a volume that will be of great service to all who have occasion to look up the literature of any particular subject. It is entitled "A Contents Subject Index to General and Periodical Literature," and is compiled by Mr. A. Cotgreave, the chief librarian of the West Ham Public Libraries, assisted by several other gentlemen. It will include a supplement, an extensive list of useful works arranged under the subjects they treat of, and other matter of interest and service to authors, librarians, students, and indeed to every class of reader, and also to all who may require information on particular subjects.

PICK-UPS.

A CUSTOMER recently called for "When Chivalry Was in Bloom," and felt satisfied when he got "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

THE following, from a pioneer in West Africa, recently brought a ray of sunshine to the office of a New York publisher: "Dear sir I hope this may meet you in a good and happy state and a bright and happy new year likewise. Sir I beg most respectably to let you send me per book post of your Ready Reckoner with another sweet story book of yours— I shall be very much glad indeed. I hope you are quite well you must do me that oblige for my christmas and new year. — — — Trusting to hear from soon by the very boat . . . . . I am yours humble servant — —., Fort Stuart Old Calabar Jan. 8, 1899."

MIXED METAPHORS.—One does not often find so many mixed metaphors thrown together in verse as in the following poem in Longman's, by Frank Ritchie:

The good wine needs no bush, yet I sow
My wild oats under the rose;
And I pluck sour grapes from a thorn in the flesh,
Where the crumpled rose-leaf grows.

I show the white feather that flocks together,
I pick the crow as it flies;
There's a flash in the pan of my Parthian dart,
And the green-eyed monster dies.

I eat the leek with a grain of salt,
Though my salad days are o'er;
I give the last straw to the golden calf,
To keep the wolf from the door.

I mounted my hobby to go to the dogs,
And I won my spurs as I passed;
For I scotched the earliest worm as it turned Down the long lane at last.

I have crossed the Rubicon, burned my boats,
As I fled from chimæras dire;
And the oil on the waters smelt of the lamp,
When I set the Thames on fire.

My geese are all swans, and their golden eggs
In a mare's nest mostly are laid;
And I fear I have let the cat out of the bag,
Though I meant to have belled her instead.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:

With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00; per 1000, $40.00.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

The regular Educational Number of "THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY" will be supplied at 50 cents per copy in leatherette.

THE

For 1899 (Twenty-Seventh Year.)

Large 8vo. With Duplex Index.

"The Publishers' Trade List Annual" for 1899 will contain:

The latest CATALOGUES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names and smaller lists at the end of the volume.

These Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase or sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we are now applying it to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Only those subscribing and forwarding amount now are entitled to subscription rate of $1.50; after publication day, and on orders for which we have to collect after that date, the regular price will be $2.00 net.

Remittances should be made by Check, Money Order on New York, or Registered Letter, as we cannot be responsible for any losses. Receipt for remittance will be sent by return mail.

☞ Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for $1.20 per copy extra.

"One of the most time-saving and profitable instrumentalities used by the trade."
—AMERICAN NEWS CO.

We have also the agency in this country for "WHITAKER'S REFERENCE LIST." A few copies are left. The price for the present is $5.00 net, in two volumes. Those desiring this useful work of reference are advised to order at once, as it will shortly be out of print.

HOLBEIN

who only lived forty-six years, (1497–1543,) was one of the most precocious geniuses of history—appearing as an able painter at the age of fourteen—and was among the few masters of the North who evidenced the decided influence of Italian art and used it with perfect independence. As is pointed out in the volume on HOLBEIN, in Knackfuss's admirable

MONOGRAPHS ON ARTISTS,

Holbein was the only one among the painters of his day who reached a perfectly free and grand style, freed himself from the petty tastelessness of those around him, and conceived the human figure in its perfect truth and beauty. He was one of the first masters of religious historical painting, and his beautiful and distinct coloring has not been attained by any other Northern painter. This side of Holbein's character is especially emphasized by Prof. H. Knackfuss, whose text is based upon recent authorities, and illustrated with care and discrimination.

THE KISS

AND ITS HISTORY.

By CHRISTOPHER NYROP, PH.D.,

Professor of the Roman Languages and Literature at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Officer of Public Instruction of France; also Honored by the Gold Medal for Merits of Roumania.

This pretty volume has been, without a single exception, most favorably received by the leading newspapers of the United States, from which we quote only a few extracts:

"Prof. Nyrop writes of the kiss with the fervor of a poet, the judgment of an epicure, and the learning of a pundit."—The Chicago Times-Herald.

"It is so replete in its historical facts, admirable in its analysis of objects and motives . . . as to be a delightful study for any reader."—The Inter-Ocean.

"It is a pretty little volume . . . and gives a great deal of curious information. Prof. Nyrop writes pleasantly, and knows how to border along delicate themes without offence."—The Chicago Chronicle.

". . . Interesting and not nauseating."—The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"If Prof. Nyrop has overlooked any kiss that ever happened, it will be detected by some one who knows more about the subject than I do."—The Louisville Courier-Journal.

"It is now possible for young and romantic people to learn all that is known about kissing, and in book form."—The Boston Globe.

PUBLISH TO-DAY:

What Shall We Think of Christianity?

By Prof. W. N. CLARKE, of Colgate University. 12mo, $1.00.

Dr. Clarke examines the historical development and present condition of the three great contributions which Christ has made to the moral wealth and welfare of humanity —the Christian People, the Christian Doctrine, and the Christian Power. Thus the book deals in a broad manner with the great essentials of Christianity, and will prove helpful and stimulating to thoughtful persons of all denominations.

Authority and Archæology.

Sacred and Profane. Edited by DAVID G. HOGARTH. 8vo, $5.00.

A volume prepared by various experts and designed to summarize the contributions made to archæology in this century. Dr. Driver, of Oxford, treats of the Old Testament; Mr. Griffith, Egyptology and Assyriology; Mr. Haverfield, Rome and Latin literature and archæology; Rev. A. C. Headlam, Christian Antiquities; and Mr. Hogarth, Greece, prehistoric and classical.

The United States and Foreign Powers.

By WILLIAM E. CURTIS. 12mo, $1.25 net.

A popular narrative, brought down to date so as to include the all-important events of the last few years, of the diplomatic history of the United States. The new position which the United States occupies among the great powers of the world gives timeliness and importance to this authoritative work.

Princeton—Old and New.

Recollections of Undergraduate Life. By JAMES W. ALEXANDER, A.M. Illustrated. New Edition. 16mo, paper cover, 50 cents.

"While the book has its chief interest for Princeton graduates, it might well attract strangers to that lovely place. Attractive, too, is the individuality of Princeton College life as described by Mr. Alexander, than whom no one is more intimately acquainted with it."—The Nation.

NOTES IN SEASON.

BRENTANO's have acquired control of the two excellent collections entitled "In Friendship's Name" and "What Makes a Friend," collected and compiled from various sources by Volney Streamer. Each volume is tastefully bound in Japanese vellum. A thoroughly revised edition of both books is preparing.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready Justin McCarthy's "Reminiscences," in two volumes, with portrait; "When the Sleeper Wakes," by H. G. Wells, who takes his readers into the twenty-first century, and describes, in the most realistic manner, the customs of the people, their manner of living, and the queer machines in general use; "The Dreamers: a Club," by John Kendrick Bangs; also, "Cromwell's Own," a tale of war and adventure in the early days of Cromwell's career, by Arthur Paterson.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish on the 16th inst. "A Cosmopolitan Comedy," a novel, by Anna Robeson Brown, dealing with the Spanish "secret service" in the late war, and the comic yet seriously performed duties of a Spanish spy in securing a map of New York harbor after the Spanish fleets had been destroyed. They will publish shortly three Spanish books —"Cervantes' El Cautiro," an episode from "Don Quixote," the text of which is based on the edition of the Royal Spanish Academy, and is edited, with an introduction and notes, by Professor Eduardo Tolrá y Fornes, of the University of Barcelona; "El Si de Las Ninas," a comedy, by Leandro Fernandez Moratin, also edited by Professor Tolrá; and "The De Tornos Method of Learning the Castilian Language," by Professor Alberto de Tornos, of New York City, who has had a broad experience in the teaching of his native language, both to Spaniards and to foreigners.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS publish to-day a work entitled "What Shall We Think of Christianity?" by Professor W. N. Clark, of Colgate University; "Authority and Archæology, Sacred and Profane," a volume prepared by various experts, such as Dr. Driver and Messrs. Griffith, Haverfield, and Headlam, designed to summarize the contributions made to archæology in this century, edited by David G. Hogarth; "The United States and Foreign Powers," a popular narrative, brought down to the present, by William E. Curtis; also, a new edition of James W. Alexander's interesting volume, "Princeton—Old and New." They have just imported "The Cathedral Builders—the Story of a Great Guild," by Leader Scott, and "Old Clocks and Watches and Their Makers," an historical and discriptive account of the different styles of clocks and watches of the past in England and abroad, by F. J. Britten. Both volumes are adequately illustrated.

DODD, MEAD & CO. announce that they will shortly publish the only authorized edition of the early novels of Henry Seton Merriman, author of "The Sowers," "In Kedar's Tents," "Roden's Corner," etc. It will include "The Phantom Future," "Young Mistley," "Prisoners and Captives," and "Suspense." The volumes will be printed and bound alike, making a uniform edition. They have been revised, condensed, and in part rewritten by Mr. Merriman, and are to be brought out by his direction and with his authorization. As some of these books were written years ago, and are now considered by Mr. Merriman immature and below the level of his more recent work, it has been his desire that they should not be further circulated, and at some trouble and expense to himself he arranged but a short while ago to have them withdrawn entirely in England. As, however, two of them have been recently reprinted here, Mr. Merriman feels compelled, in justice to himself, to have issued a revised and authorized edition, hoping that the many readers who have shown evidences of their appreciation of his later work will clearly understand that these books were the product of his years of immaturity. Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish in this country Mr. Merriman's forthcoming novels, one of which, entitled "The Isle of Unrest," is announced for issue in 1900. It is the only story written by him since "Roden's Corner."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.). D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., mar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Adams, J: Coleman. Nature studies in Berkshire; with il. in photogravure from original photographs by Arthur Scott. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 8+225 p. O. cl., $4.50. [1787

A collection of prose pictures of skies and woods and fields, intermingled with the reflections of a writer who is at once a philosopher and a poet—one who enjoys profoundly the beauties of the Berkshire hills. Illustrated with sixteen full-page photogravures.

Addison, Jos., and Steele, R: Sir Roger de Coverley, and The Spectator's Club. N. Y., Cassell & Co., Ltd., 1899. 3-192 p. T. (Cassell's national lib., new ser., v. 6, no. 305.) pap., 10 c. [1788

Æschylus. The Prometheus bound of Æschylus; tr., with introd. and notes, by Paul Elmer More. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1899. c. 3-107 p. D. cl., $1. [1789

The subjects of the introduction are: "Origin of Greek tragedy," "Moral aspects of Greek tragedy," "Life of Æschylus," "Production of the play," and "Significance of the play."

Aldrich, Julia Carter, ["Pitresia Peteis," pseud.] Hazel Bloom: [poems.] Buffalo, N. Y., C: Wells Moulton, 1899. c. 218 p. 16°, cl., $1. [1790

Allen, Grant. Miss Cayley's adventures; il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. 7+344 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1791

Miss Cayley is a Girton graduate, who by her stepfather's death is left almost penniless—twopence being her whole capital. She is a clever, spirited, and unconventional girl, who makes up her mind to go round the world. She first hires herself as companion to a "cantankerous old lady," going with her to Germany. From the beginning she has numerous adventures, that are often very amusing.

Baird, S. W. Graded work in arithmetic. In 5 books. Bk. 5, Grammar grades. N.Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. 356 p. D. cl., 65 c. [1792 Completes a well-graded and progressive series of arithmetics, and furnishes to grammar school pupils a text-book carefully planned to strengthen their power of mathematical reasoning, presenting a range of topics sufficiently comprehensive to familiarize the students at the same time with the important practical applications of the science of numbers.

Barnes, Annie Maria. Tatong, the little slave: a story of Korea. Richmond, Va., The Presb. Committee of Pub., [1899.] c. 2-252 p. il. D. cl., $1. [1793

Barzilla, Jacob. She beats the devil. Los Angeles, Cal., C: W. Palm Co., 1898. c. 12+330 p. il. S. cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c. [1794

Emma Riley is the heroine of a series of sensational incidents, said to be founded on facts. The most remarkable episode is her saving a man from the scaffold. Because of this intervention and on account of her ministry to her blind sister, supposed to be possessed with evil spirits, it was said of her "She beats the devil." Questions of heredity are dealt with.

Becker, G: J. Ornamental penmanship, analytical and finished alphabets and draughtsman's letter book. Phil., J: Jos. McVey, 1899. c. 40 p. obl. 4°, cl., $2. [1795

Blake, W: William Blake: seventeen designs to Thornton's "Virgil"; reproduced from the original woodcuts, 1821; with vignettes by Selwyn Image, taken from The Century Guild Hobby Horse, 1884-1892. Portland, Me., T: B. Mosher, 1899. 60 p. 8°, bds., Van Gelder pap., 450 copies, net, $2; 25 copies on Japan vellum, net, $7.50. [1797

Boardman, G: Nye. A history of New England theology. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1899. c. 2+314 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1798

The term New England theology designates a system of theology developed in America between the years 1730 and 1830. The initial purpose was resistance to influences which it was feared were leading orthodox believers away from the truths of the Gospel. The present work had its origin in a series of lectures prepared for an elective course in Chicago Theological Seminary, in which institution the author is a professor. The aim is to trace the development of the "New Divinity," formerly so called, through the century 1730-1830.

Booth, Mrs. Eliza M. J. Gollan, ["Rita," pseud.] Good Mrs. Hypocrite: a study in self-righteousness. N. Y., F. M. Buckles & Co., 1899. c. 2-284 p. D. cl., $1. [1799

The central figure is a middle-aged Scotch woman, unbeautiful of face and ungainly of form, whose life has been devoted to so-called Christian work. She is hard, selfish, and cruel, seeking only her own comfort and self-aggrandizement. She becomes housekeeper for her invalid brother, and makes his life miserable. Her hypocrisy and innate wickedness are ruthlessly laid bare by the narrative.

Brockelmann, C: Syrische grammatik, mit litteratur chrestomathie und glossar. N.Y., Lemcke & Buechner, 1899. 13+190 p. D. pap., $2.35; cl., $2.70. [1800

Burton, J: Bloundelle. Fortune's my foe: a romance. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. '98, '99. 3+245 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no 265.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [1801

The heroine is born on board a British man-of-war, of which her father is captain, during the siege of Cartagena off the Spanish West Indies, in the year 1739. Her father meets his death from a stray shot, and her mother dies shortly afterward. Ariadne, named after her father's ship, grows up a beauty and a great heiress. An attempt by a nobleman, ruined in purse and name, to marry her for her money has long and disastrous consequences. Life on a British man-of-war during a war with France adds many adventurous episodes to the story.

Butler, H: Montagu, D.D. Public school sermons. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1899. 4-271 p. D. cl., $2. [1802

Sermons preached at Marlborough College, Harrow School, Eton, Radley, and many other celebrated institutions. Some of the subjects are: Christian greatness; The rich and the poor; Bluster and faith; Easter Day; Public school esprit de corps; Son of the Highest; and The attraction of the cross.

Christian, J: T., D.D. Baptist history vindicated. Louisville, Ky., Baptist Book Concern, 1899. c. 20+223 p. D. cl., $1. [1804

Offers many new facts bearing on the history of the English Baptists in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, culled by Dr. Christian from material in the British Musem, from civil and ecclesiastical court records, old churches, libraries, etc.

Churchill, Winston. Richard Carvel; il. by Carlton T. Chapman and Malcolm Fraser. N. Y., The Macmillan Co., 1899. c. 9+538 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1805

The author sets his scene between the years 1765 and 1782—in colonial Maryland, on the high seas, in London, and again in Maryland. The novel is a love-story first of all, and is related by Richard Carvel in his old age to his grandchildren. Carvel was first a gallant lieutenant under John Paul Jones, and in love with Dorothy Manners, the famous Annapolis beauty of Washington's day. The famous men of colonial times are introduced, and on the other side of the ocean, in brilliant society scenes, Fox, Walpole, Garrick, Lord Baltimore, and others figure.

"The substance of the present work was written towards the close of the year 1875 for the new edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' Having been abridged and mutilated contrary to the author's wishes before its publication there, he resolved to print it entire. With that in view it has undergone repeated revision, with enlargement in different parts, and been made as complete as the limits of an essay appeared to allow."—Preface.

Dr. Griffis is well known as a writer upon Oriental themes. In this volume, besides chapters showing our naval history and exploits in Asiatic waters up to the day of Dewey, and others on our new fellow-citizens in Hawaii, he gives in epitome the history of China, Japan, and Korea—revealing the true condition of the Far East in its social and political relations. He then shows what American leaven has already done to transform the mass and to bring in the new era. Copious information about the countries bordering on the Pacific will be found here presented in trustworthy form.

framing of the United States Constitution to the present date. The book can be used also as an introductory or supplementary text-book in United States history.

Gwynn, Stephen. The repentance of a private secretary. N. Y., J: Lane, 1899. 5+194 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1820

An episode from modern English life, rather cynically narrated. Gerald North's repentance is not of the kind that carries a moral with it. In his capacity of private secretary to a prospective M.P. he falls in love with his employer's wife, his love being returned. The events leading up to this point, and the final action of the chief characters, is the story.

Hirsch, S: Raphael, (Rabbi.) The nineteen letters of Ben Uziel: being a spiritual presentation of the principles of Judaism; tr. by Bernard Drachman; with a preface and biographical sketch of the author by the translator. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1899. c. 13+222 p. por. D. cl., $1. [1822

The author, Rabbi Samson Raphael Hirsch, was for many years the most prominent representative of the Jewish clergy in Frankfort-on-the-Main. His work is a complete treatise on the philosophy of Judaism, its doctrines in regard to God, the world, the mission of mankind, and of Israel, the aims and purposes of the Mosaic legislation, and the religious and social problems which affect the Jewish people in the modern age. It is in the form of a correspondence of nineteen letters between a young Israelite of inquiring disposition, rather inclined to scepticism, and his friend, a learned and zealous rabbi named Naphtali (Ben Uziel).

The purpose of the lectures is to strengthen moral convictions and to promote legal interests. The titles are: Teleology, or moral causation; Essence, concrete existence, and attributes of natural law; Human acts and animal motions; Freedom of the will; Utilitarianism; Justice; The individual; The family; The state; Property; On taxation; Conflict of rights; Combinations of capital and labor organizations; Legal ethics. Contains also rules for guidance of a lawyer.

Hourst, —. French enterprise in Africa: the personal narrative of Lieut. Hourst of his exploration of the Niger; tr. by Mrs. Arthur Bell, (N. D'Anvers.) N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1899. 16+520 p. por. il. map, O. cl., $6. [1824

A record of an adventurous voyage down the Niger, from Timbucktu to the sea, such as has never before been accomplished. It adds largely to the knowledge of the Niger itself, its basin, and the various tribes occupying the riverside districts. It is remarkable that, in spite of much opposition, Lieutenant Hourst managed to keep the peace with the natives from the first start from Timbucktu to the arrival at Bussa. He brought his party through without the loss of a single life. The expedition started on October 10, 1895, from Kayes, and got back to France on December 12, 1896.

James, C: C. Practical agriculture. American ed.; ed. by J: Craig. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 7+208 p. il. D. cl., 80 c. [1828

The purpose is to aid the reader and student in acquiring a knowledge of the science of agriculture as distinct from the art of agriculture; that is, of the knowledge of the why, rather than a knowledge of the how. The science of agriculture may be said to consist of a mingling of chemistry, geology, botany, entomology, physiology, bacteriology, and other sciences, in as far as they have a bearing upon agriculture. The aim has been to include the first principles of these various sciences, and to show their application to the art of agriculture.

Marchmont, Arthur W. A dash for a throne; il. by D. Murray Smith. N. Y., New Amsterdam Book Co., 1899. c. 4-352 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [1837

A romantic story of Prussia, with its scene laid in recent years. The young hero is half English by birth and a lieutenant in the Prussian navy. Having drank too freely on the imperial yacht, he insults the future emperor. As the prince cannot meet him in a duel, the lieutenant is advised to end his life in some way. It is given out that he has died of a fever. After his funeral he disguises himself and becomes an actor under a new name. For five years he lives a life of adventure, when he is carried back to Prussia in mistake for another man and is forced into a fight for a throne. A beautiful woman is mixed up in this intrigue, and the hero has innumerable stirring adventures.

An elementary nature study intended for children. It describes birds' nests, the young birds, their growth and how they are fed, how they get their feathers, and are taught to fly and to do various other things. It tells of the language of birds, their food, their migrations, their mental and moral development, their structure, their economic value to mankind. It instructs how to attract them to visit about our houses and how to study their ways.

Milne, W: J. Plane and solid geometry. N. Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. 384 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1840 Effort is made to introduce the student to geometry by means of inventional steps; but the somewhat fragmentary and unsatisfactory result of such teaching is supplemented by demonstrations, in consecutive order, of the fundamental propositions of the science. Every theorem has been introduced by questions designed to lead the student to discover the geometrical concept clearly and fully before a demonstration is attempted.

Vascovia, a mythical kingdom of eastern Europe, is the point towards which the events of this story concentrates. Three members of the reigning house, whose gypsy strain of blood led them to be wanderers, are first introduced as travellers in South America. They go through a wonderful series of adventures with unknown tribes, etc. The second part of the book is taken up with the attempt of the Princess of Vascovy to regain the throne for her son. This is the reason for a second series of exciting and novel incidents. By the author of "God's prisoner."

Pemberton, Max. The garden of swords. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1899. c. '98. 7+329 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [1851

By the author of "Kronstadt," etc. The time of the novel is in the seventies, during the Franco-Prussian war. The heroine is a young English girl who marries a French officer. The story is a record of life under tragic and historic circumstances, and is filled with dramatic and exciting scenes and incidents.

Porter, Rob. P. Industrial Cuba: being a study of present commercial and industrial conditions, with suggestions as to the opportunities presented in the island for American capital, enterprise, and labor. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 11+428 p. il. map, O. cl., $3.50. [1852

Aims to give a description of Cuba as it appeared to the author when, as Special Commissioner of the United States, he was sent by President McKinley to report on its industrial, commercial, and financial condition, soon after the signing of the protocol of peace, August 12, 1898. The political future of Cuba is discussed, and the various views entertained by those capable of judging are carefully considered. In the important work of municipal reconstruction and sanitary reform the author had the benefit of Colonel Waring's report, and also of reports by E. Sherman Gould and Ricardo Narganes, and others. The chapters on banks and currency, the Cuban debt, revenue and expenditures, and the amended tariff and internal taxation, may be regarded as official. In addition, presents the latest statistics concerning transportation and navigation, and also concerning the industries of Cuba, such as sugar, tobacco, mines and mining, agriculture and stock, timber and fruit.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 10, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

HARPER & BROTHERS AND S. S. McCLURE COMPANY FORM AN ALLIANCE.

ONE of the surprises of the week in the book world was the announcement of an alliance between Harper & Brothers and the S. S. McClure Company. Though the negotiations leading to the arrangement entered into by the two houses have been in progress for some time, no one excepting the members of the firms concerned were aware of the contemplated movement until late on Saturday afternoon, the 3d inst., when the formal legal preparations necessary to be made could no longer be kept secret. And even now, as we go to press, very little more than the fact that such an alliance has been made is known. It is tacitly admitted that John W. Harper will be elected a second vice-president of the S. S. McClure Company, and that J. Henry Harper and H. Sleeper Harper will also become officers of the S. S. McClure Company. S. S. McClure, on the other hand, is to become a vice-president of Harper & Brothers, and his associates, John S. Phillips, Frank N. Doubleday, and Albert B. Brady will hold minor offices in the firm of Harper & Brothers. The management and principal offices of both firms will remain unchanged.

The following statement of John W. Harper is printed by authority:

"We have some plans looking toward developments in the magazine world in a field in which Mr. McClure has been very successful. Mr. McClure believes, too, that our facilities would enable us to carry out together certain important publishing plans of his since we have one of the largest plants in the country and issue more periodicals than any other house. So, finding a number of points of common interest, we decided to work together. To that end several of our people have become interested in the S. S. McClure Company, and Mr. McClure, with his associates, has become interested in Harper & Brothers. We regard Mr. McClure and his associates, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Brady, and Mr. Doubleday, among the most successful men in the publishing world, and, although we had the very highest opinion of their abilities before we entered on this matter, an investigation of their business showed that they had done a great deal more than even we had imagined. We therefore welcome Mr. McClure and his associates, and while we do not contemplate any marked changes and will manage the business in the same conservative manner that has characterized the house, yet the new developments which this will bring us will no doubt inure very much to our benefit."

Mr. McClure sailed for Europe on the 3d inst. In his absence his principal associate and partner for years, Mr. Phillips, has made a statement to the effect that "the arrangement is an alliance rather than a consolidation. We have had certain publishing plans that it seemed could be better carried on by a coalition of this sort. It is impossible to say more than that the alliance is made with a view of realizing certain specific publishing plans. We cannot at this time speak definitely about these plans. Announcements will be made as occasion arises." This is substantially all that can be learned concerning the matter. In fact, we understand that the details of the alliance have not yet been completed, and no announcement of plans will be made public until they have been matured.

INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHERS' CONGRESS.

THE third International Publishers' Congress was formally opened at Stationers' Hall, London, on the 7th inst. All of the prominent British, Continental, and American publishers were present. Among the leading American delegates were representatives of Harper & Brothers, D. Appleton & Co., D. C. Heath & Co., G. P. Putnam's Sons, and A. S. Barnes. John Murray, president of the Publishers' Association, presided. In his address he said that one object above all others was earnestly wished, namely, the drawing within the fellowship of the Berne convention of the nations, which still hold aloof. If, for example, he said, they could do anything to persuade their good friends and cousins of the United States, who are yearly becoming a more prominent part of the readers and writers in the world of letters, to adhere to the convention they would by this act alone have earned a high place in the history of this successful congress. In making this statement he was assured of the sympathy and assent of the American representatives, and he was happy to see present a large body of the enlightened and educated men they represent.

BLIND MAN'S LAW FOR BOOK AGENTS IN MAINE.

WM. J. RYAN, a blind man of Portland, Me., who gains his living by peddling an almanac about the State, found his business being forestalled by some enterprising book agents. Ryan, according to the Bookseller, Newsdealer and Stationer, "was enterprising himself. He had a law drafted excluding book agents from the list of those who might peddle without a license, and including in the list disabled veterans and blind men. On his next business trip he took with him a petition asking the legislature to pass this law, and obtained, it is said, 22,000 signatures to it. On the strength of this the law went through. So now book agents, subscription agents, students, teachers, and ambitious scholars have to pay a tax of from $3 in towns of less than 1000 inhabitants, to a maximum of $20 for larger cities to sell books. The law works a great hardship to students and scholars who have long looked to this business as a means of raising the wind to carry them through college and seminary, and an outcry is beginning to be heard from all quarters, especially as there is a Supreme Court decision making a tax on drummers selling goods from samples as agents of firms located in other States an interference with interstate commerce, and therefore unconstitutional. So this 'blind man's' law simply penalizes citizens and publishers of the State of Maine, and is a recorded testimony to Mr. Ryan's astuteness and enterprise."

THE GROWTH OF THE FIRM OF D. C. HEATH & CO.

FEW more striking instances of continuous growth can be found than that shown by the publishing house of D. C. Heath & Co. This growth is remarkable also for its extent. The house began with a list of thirteen books and eleven pamphlets. To-day there are more than eight hundred titles in their catalogues each one of which has an influence and character of its own. For nearly fourteen years the house has published an average of more than one new book a week. One year eighty-five new books were issued. Judged by the amount of the annual sales, the house, we are informed, has for some years ranked third among the great school-book publishers.

The home offices of the house in Boston have been outgrown four times. The house has just taken possession of the complete floor of one of the largest office buildings in Boston, overlooking the Common and adjoining the old public library building. This building faces on three streets and provides space for the offices and part of the shipping department of the business. Every modern facility has been provided for the speedy and prompt transaction of the large and growing sales of the house.

On entering from Boylston Street the visitor finds himself in the spacious show-room where the publications of the firm are displayed. From the cushioned seats in the bay windows he may enjoy an unrivalled view of the State House, Boston Common, and of the suburban cities and towns. Comfortable chairs and tables scattered about invite him to read and inspect the books. A well-appointed reception-room, where teachers can write letters, talk to the principals or agents, and meet their friends at their ease, is an attractive feature of the vast floor. Facilities are also provided for the editorial rooms, the bookkeepers' rooms, record rooms, stenographers' rooms, the private offices of the partners, and the offices of the shipping department.

One of the characteristic features of the decoration of Mr. Heath's private office is the covering of the walls with a beautiful green bookbinder's cloth with dado of blue. The desk and chairs and the whole of the furniture of Mr. Heath's office are of mahogany, all the rest of the establishment being furnished with oak. On the walls are hung portraits of many of the authors who publish with the house, some of them being the originals of those which adorn their books.

In this building there are over fifteen hundred running feet of bins, besides two large double aisles of stacks to provide for the smaller shipments to customers. The bulk of the large shipments, often amounting to ten or fifteen carloads, is necessarily sent direct from the bindery to its destination.

A BOOKSELLER STRIKES WHISKEY!

WHEN one finds in every bookstore from Portland, Maine, to San Diego, California, books with the imprint of Rand, McNally & Co., he would naturally think that to keep all these irons in the fire the entire devotion of a corps of workers, from the stoker in the engine room to the grand master whose word decides the fate of a trembling author as he presents his manuscript, would be required. But out here in Altadena, California, we find one of the finest fruit ranches in that region, a beautiful home, and not far away at Miranda several hundred thousand dollars invested in fruit culture by Andrew McNally. The lemon, orange, grape fruit, and olive add yearly a generous sum to his bank account. Then Mr. McNally strikes a minor key in his profession, and, while a purveyor of literature for the brain, seeks a sound body for his constituents. Hence he has invented the grape bitters to cure grippe, drive away malarial diseases, and tone up the system, thus making the reading of his books far more enjoyable, by adding to the physical welfare of their readers.

But "what we were about to say" is that in sinking a well at La Miranda, about 600 feet from the surface, he struck a stream of whiskey. The miners drank therefrom, were refreshed, and a regular war-medicine buffalo dance celebrated the wonderful discovery. They all drank and were filled. Fearing his illustrious firm of sober and honest men, remembering that he belonged to a noble fraternity, that East and West he was recognized, or should be, as a temperance man by his peers, he ordered his men to dig deeper. They obeyed and came to a vein of pure, sparkling water, and there has never been a whiskey dance since on his premises.

In a journey across the continent and from Coronado Beach to Portland, we find "David Harum" in every bookstore, and young and old, business and professional men, asking the same question, Have you read "David Harum?" It is as popular here in the extreme West as in the East. S. E. B.

BOOK STEALING.

CONTINUING the article on "Book Stealing," the first part of which was printed in the issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY for May 6, Albert Sim says: Robberies of books perpetrated at the warehouses of publishers, binders, booksellers, and dealers may be classed under two heads: thefts committed by the staff of the publisher, binder, or bookseller, or by the assistant of houses doing business with this staff; and thefts perpetrated by the public, habitual or casual customers.

A publisher notices that books are disappearing in quantities from his warehouse, without being able to trace either in his correspondence or in his books the reason for their absence. He scents out a systematic swindle. The guilty person must necessarily have accomplices in order to pass on his goods. Who, then, are these receivers? How can they be discovered? One method that I saw used not very long ago consists of marking in secret, very faintly in pencil (in the same manner as they stamp the books of a library on a given page,) in one and the same place, the volumes that are likely to be taken. As booksellers or dealers who buy and stock books in large quantities are not relatively very numerous, and as they have for the most part a specialty, a certain class of books that they usually deal in, conjecture is soon circumscribed within narrow limits, and the receiver, with the marked volumes in his possession, cannot deny his complicity.

About twenty years ago a dozen assistants of the chief music publishers conceived a device as simple as it was ingenious for defrauding their principals. They carried on a barter among themselves, and by this means did without, or nearly suppressed, that compromising intermediary, the receiver; in other words according to the dictum at their trial, they acted as receivers for each other.

To enumerate all the methods employed by unscrupulous customers or professional thieves to defraud booksellers and dealers in old books would be endless. Let us confine ourselves to the most ordinary.

A lady who at last acquired a legendary reputation among the dealers on the Quay—"The lady with the umbrella," as they called her—contrived to let fall into her umbrella, which was propped against her person, closed but neither rolled nor fastened, the book which she selected; and her choice—"cruelle enigme!"—fell almost exclusively upon the novels of Paul Bourget.

Another type not less notorious is the amateur of first editions, a little lame individual who never went about without the help of a stick, a beautiful rattan-cane with chased silver knob, and was never seen without a heavy morocco portfolio. He used to go from one bookseller to another where he knew he should find first editions of the best modern novels, and as soon as the volumes he called for—fifteen or so at least—were piled up on the counter, and as he was on the point of looking at them, he let fall his stick. The shopman out of politeness towards a customer, and out of consideration for an invalid, immediately stooped to pick it up, and this half-second sufficed for the little man to hide away two or three copies in the portfolio upon the counter beside him.

In one of the sonnets which he has published under the title of "Légendes du Livre," François Fertiault, a fastidious scholar and ardent bibliophile, has celebrated the misdeeds of a certain Dr. R. in the shops of Lyons. In order to obtain cheaply choice works published in several volumes, Dr. R. used to purloin one of the volumes, and then, eight or ten days later, he would return and haggle over the work—"which, as you see, is not complete!"

> "Alors à prix bas, il tâche qu'on le cède, > Pour un dépareillé, bonne affaire. On accède."

And so the trick succeeded, and the work was complete once more.

It is notorious that people who steal books are found in every grade of society. There are street-boys trained to steal books, and these do their work under the supervision of a chief. One of these was lately arrested in the neighborhood of the Odéon; he used to lie in wait regularly in the garden of the Luxembourg, beside the railing that runs along the Rue de Médicis, and from this place he watched over his pupils, who used to prowl about under the galleries and bring him their plunder as they got it. He knew books with a reputation, was careful to acquaint himself with new books and those that made a hit, and he pointed these out to "his men." All that they carried off sold well.

Amongst thefts of books that have made a sensation in the last year or two we must not omit to mention those of the Abbé B., who held the post of professor at an important educational establishment in Paris. There is hardly a bookseller or old dealer on the left bank of the Seine who has not received frequent visits from this ecclesiastic. Shopmen who at last succeeded in spying out his manœuvres and giving their principals information were within an ace of being suspected themselves and dismissed. Unfortunately for him the Abbé B.—who, by the by, belonged to the category of thieves noticed at the beginning of this article, "who keep and do not sell again"—had a mania for geology; he was caught in the act of stealing specimens of minerals from the École des Mines; his dwelling was searched, and everything discovered. Shortly after, the Abbé B., who left Paris and took refuge in Normandy, was said to have been found dead at the foot of a cliff.

According to many booksellers, it is towards the end of the month, that is to say, when purses are empty or getting low, that these thefts are of most frequent occurrence. What are termed "library books," books of current reference, encyclopædic works, are those which thieves lay hands upon by preference. Larousse's large dictionary is notably an object of cupidity. The weight of a book is not always an obstacle to its abstraction: witness "The man with the Inverness cloak," as he was called, whose memory is still green at Hachette's establishment. This particular individual, who always came dressed in a voluminous cloak with a cape, and who had already aroused suspicions, probably well-founded, succeeded one fine day in slipping into the lining of his cloak twelve volumes of Reclus' "Géographie," which represents the respectable weight of eighty pounds or more, and does credit to the tailor who supplied such stout, well-sewn material.

But the neatest trick was that practised some years ago upon a bookseller in the Rue Soufflot. A passer-by sees one morning amongst the books exposed outside this shop a copy of Littré's Dictionary, five bound volumes, in perfect condition, marked eighty francs. There is no shopman on duty, nobody looking after the place, the pavement is deserted. Quickly he seizes the five books, slips them under his arm, thrusts the compromising ticket with the price into his pocket, and enters the shop of the very man to whom the Littré belongs—belonged, rather—and proposes to him that he should buy them. "A Littré?" the tradesman interrupts; "I can't do with that; I have one on show there, and two others yonder." However, scenting an exceptionally good bargain, he changes his mind. To drag these enormous and heavy quartos about the streets, thinks he, this poor devil must be hard up. Moreover, with a Littré there is no risk, it will always sell. "I cannot give you more than thirty francs," says he; "I have already three Littrés. It is solely to oblige you that I offer that." "Say thirty-five?" "No; thirty; no more." The vendor is in great need of money; he accepts; pockets the sum—and disappears! The "Littré dodge" is not yet forgotten in the trade and the book world generally.

In spite of its frequency, and save in some quite exceptional cases, book stealing is without doubt the least lucrative of all thieving. Leaving out of question those large and important works called "library books" just referred to; omitting some novelties and especially rare volumes, certain illustrated books, some first editions, the treasures of bibliophiles—stolen books sell at a ridiculous price. The reduction of sixty per cent. to which a large book dealer owned, is generally a great deal exceeded in wholesale and second-hand sales such as follow upon embezzlement and theft. It was at a reduction of ninety per cent. that one of our noted publishing houses cleared off, some years ago, a quantity of copies de luxe; and it was upon almost the same terms that the splendid stock of M. Jouast, one of the last printers of the old school, was parted with. As to the book at 3 fr. 50 c., the discount, except in the case of a novelty, is still more considerable. At sales of publishers' stock effected of late, the price of volumes marked 3 fr. 50 c., except for authors with a high reputation, fluctuated between 0 fr. 05 c. and 0 fr. 30 c., that is to say, they underwent a loss of from ninety-one to ninety-eight per cent.

A PHENOMENALLY SUCCESSFUL BOOK.

According to the latest reports over three million copies of "In His Steps," by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, have been sold in this country and Great Britain. Mr. Sheldon is a New Yorker, having been born at Wellsville in 1857. He was educated at Phillips Academy, Andover and Brown Universities, and was graduated from Andover Theological Seminary in 1886. After a summer in Europe he entered the ministry and began preaching at Waterbury, Vt. In 1888 he accepted a call from the newly established Central Congregational Church in Topeka. His congregation in a short time grew from 60 to 300 members. Dissatisfied with the apparent good his sermons were doing his congregation, and wanting to preach an every-day Christianity in an attractive form, he became convinced that a novel would more nearly accomplish his object than a series of abstract sermons, and "In His Steps" was the result. It was written, a chapter each week, and as each chapter was completed it was read the succeeding Sunday. The story was completed in the spring of 1897, and during the following summer was published as a serial in a Chicago publication. In November of the same year it was first published in book form by the Fleming H. Revell Company.

The immense sale of "In His Steps" in England is doubtless due largely to the fact that twenty English firms were pushing the book at one time. An English publication says that "in four months its circulation has far surpassed the total circulation of all of Mrs. Henry Wood's novels in forty years. 'East Lynne,' which has had a larger circulation than any other English copyright novel, has only reached 480,000 copies, and it is said that the total number sold of William Black's novels is not more than 300,000. 'Three Men in a Boat,' a remarkably popular book, reached 160,000; 'Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush,' 90,000; 'A Prisoner of Zenda,' 70,000, and 'The Christian,' the most popular book of 1897, sold to the extent of 123,000 in that year. But 'In His Steps' has reached a sale of 3,000,000 copies." Three of Mr. Sheldon's books, published in England at a penny, ran through an aggregate edition of 900,000 in three weeks.

TENNESSEE TEXT-BOOK LAW.

The City Attorney of Chattanooga, Tenn., on the 5th inst. rendered an opinion to the effect that Chattanooga is not included in the uniform text-book law of Tennessee. The city attorneys in Memphis, Knoxville, and Nashville have rendered similar opinions. This is the outcome of a fierce fight now in progress between the American Book Company and Governor Benton McMillin. The Governor caused the Legislature to pass a law excluding the publications of the American Book Company from all public schools in the State. The company will test the law in the courts. If it is declared unconstitutional, Governor McMillin will call a special session of the Legislature to pass a new act along the same line.

OBITUARY NOTES.

JOHANN STRAUSS, "the waltz-king," who wrote "The Beautiful Danube," and hundreds of other captivating waltzes, died on the 8th inst., at Vienna, where he was born February 12, 1825.

MISS LOIS KNIGHT, one of the best-known plate engravers in the United States, died at the New York Hospital on the 1st inst. She was born at Utica, Mich., in 1867. After graduating from the high school of her native town she came to New York and took a course of art study at the Cooper Union, after which she entered the service of a large engraving establishment in Providence, R. I., as its only woman apprentice. Her last work was a book-cover design for an edition of Rudyard Kipling's novel, "The Light That Failed."

EDWARD W. NASH, the well-known bookseller, died at his residence, 1356 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., on the 2d inst. He was born in New York City in 1838, and when quite a young man entered the employ of William Gowans. He served in the war with the Seventh Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y. On his return he again associated himself with Gowans, whose confidential and trusted clerk he remained until Gowans died, when Nash became the executor of his estate. After he had liquidated the estate he went into business on his own account. Mr. Nash was a quiet, unassuming man, faithful in the smallest as well as the most important affairs of life, and a staunch friend. Though a sufferer for years from the distressing disease that finally carried him away, he was always cheerful and patient.

ELISE POLKO, the well-known German writer, died at Munich, Bavaria, May 15. She was born at Leipzig, March 31, 1832. Her early inclinations were for the stage, and, after a thorough musical training in Berlin and Paris, she made her début in grand opera at Frankfort-on-the-Main. After her marriage to Polko she retired from the stage and devoted herself to literature, in which field she won for herself international renown. Her first book, a volume of "Musical Fables," was published in 1852. Translations of her "Musical Sketches" and her "Reminiscences of Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy" were among the first of Frederick Leypoldt's publishing ventures. Her published writings form upwards of fifty volumes, one of which, "From Garden and Field," was written in English. She was a sister of the famous African explorer Eduard Vogel.

REUBEN ALDRIDGE GUILD, for nearly fifty years librarian of Brown University, died at Providence, R. I., May 14. Dr. Guild was born at West Dedham, Mass., May 4, 1822, and graduated from Brown University in 1847. In the following year he was made librarian of Brown University, succeeding Prof. Charles C. Jewett. He held this position until July, 1893, when he was made librarian emeritus. He was the author of a "History of Brown University," "Chaplain Smith and the Baptists," "Footprints of Roger Williams," "Life of James Manning," "Account of the Writings of Roger Williams," and "Librarian's Manual." He was a frequent contributor to Norton's Literary Gazette and Publishers' Circular, and assisted Norton in compiling his literary almanacs, if he did not actually perform all the work on them. He also edited several of the publications issued by the Narragansett Club.

SISTER MARY FRANCIS CUSACK, known as the "Nun of Kenmare," died on the 7th inst., at Leamington, Eng. "Sister Mary Francis Clare" and "The Nun of Kenmare" were two of the appellations applied to Miss Mary Francis Cusack by the Roman Catholics. She was born in 1830 near Dublin, Ireland. When young she entered an Anglican sisterhood, but became a Roman Catholic and joined a Franciscan community known as the Irish Poor Clares. In 1861 she founded a convent of Sisters of Peace at Kenmare, where she devoted her labors toward relieving the peasantry of that district, one of the poorest in Ireland. In 1885, while visiting the United States, she established a similar house in Jersey City. She raised large sums of money for the relief of the poor in Ireland during the famine in the eighties. She wrote a number of books, the first of which, "An Illustrated History of Ireland from the Earliest Period," appeared in 1868. Among other works from her pen were "Advice to Irish Girls in America," "A History of the City and County of Cork," and "From Killarney to New York." In 1888 her autobiography, "The Nun of Kenmare," was published.

CHARLES HENRY LAMPORT, of the Boorum & Pease Company, died at his home, 42 W. Ninety-third Street, New York, May 25. He was born in Canandaigua, N. Y., in 1833, and was the son of W. H. Lamport, who, in the fifties, represented Ontario County, N. Y., in Congress. Mr. Lamport entered the book business of Nafis & Cornish in New York. In 1852 he became a member of the firm of Cornish, Lamport & Co., which succeeded the firm of Nafis & Cornish, and shortly after he was the senior member of the firm of Lamport, Blakeman & Law. In 1854 his firm sold out its business and he became a member of the firm of Sheldon, Lamport & Blakeman, the predecessors of the present firm of Sheldon & Company. In 1856 Mr. Lamport became one of the partners of the firm of J. Q. Preble & Co., manufacturers of stationery. Then he became treasurer of the J. G. Shaw Company, blank-book manufacturers, which position he retained when the company was succeeded by the National Blank-Book Company. He remained with the last-named company until about 1884, when he joined the Boorum & Pease Company, blank-book manufacturers, New York, where he remained until he died, and where, as superintendent of the New York salesroom of the company, his work was exceedingly valuable because of his practical knowledge of the business and his wide acquaintance with the trade throughout the United States.

AUGUSTIN DALY, the famous theatrical manager and playwright, died suddenly at Paris on the 7th inst. Mr. Daly was born at Plymouth, N. C., July 20, 1838. In 1854 he came to New York, and during the following four years wrote a number of dramatic compositions, at least four of which were produced by W. E. Burton, Mrs. Wood, and Laura Keene. In 1859 he began to write for the New York Sunday Courier, under the pseudonym of "Le Pelerin." Later he succeeded James Otis as dramatic critic of The Evening Express. He also contributed to The Weekly Citizen, Beach's Sun and the New York Times, and wrote stories for The Chimney Corner. He first came into prominence through his "Leah, the Forsaken," which he adapted from the German for Kate Bateman. His first original drama, "Under the Gaslight," was produced in 1866. Its companion, "A Flash of Lightning," was produced a year or so later. He became manager of the Fifth Avenue Theatre in 1869, since which time he was always prominently before the public. In 1893 he opened Daly's Theatre in Leicester Square, London. Mr. Daly also wrote a life of Peg Woffington, and published the prompt-books of all the famous old plays revived at his theatre, with historical and critical introductions by William Winter. As contributions to theatrical history Mr. Daly published, in limited editions, with rich illustrations, "A Portfolio of Players," written by Brander Matthews, Laurence Hutton, H. C. Bunner, William Winter, and E. A. Dithmar; "A Daughter of Comedy," by William Winter; and "Memories of Daly's Theatres," by E. A. Dithmar. His private library, formed since 1878, when his first collection of books was sold, includes many "grangerized" books, chiefly theatrical. It also contains good copies of all four of the Shakespeare folios, some of the original Ireland forgeries, a copy of the first edition of "Paradise Lost," and many other treasures.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

On the Queen's birthday Henry M. Stanley was made a Knight Grand Cross of the Bath.

The authorship of the charming love-letters issued last spring in book form in Paris with the title "Amitié Amoureuse," and brought out in translation as "Love in Friendship," has just been revealed. The Countess de Nouhy acknowledges the fact that they were collected from the papers left by the late Guy de Maupassant. New editions of the work in Paris as well as the English edition, brought out here by Meyer Brothers' Company, will in the future bear the name of the author of "Pierre et Jean" on the title-page.

Some efforts, good-natured or otherwise, having been made to identify "Fiona Macleod," the lady takes this hunting up of her own personalty in high dudgeon. She has written to her publishers, Archibald Constable & Co., London, that she is very much annoyed and that no one has so far identified her, and she concludes "that her name is her own and that all she asks is the courtesy of good breeding and common sense—a courtesy which is the right of all, and surely imperative of a woman acting by and for herself."

Mark Twain is intending to return to America at the end of this year and settle in Florida. He will be in London for a short time in the summer and then stay in Scotland for a while. He has lately been at work on a book which is, he says, a portrait gallery of the remarkable people whom he has met from his childhood upwards, including, like "Chambers's Biographical Dictionary," monarchs and desperadoes, poets and lawyers. But this new book is not to see the light of day for one hundred years, because, to use his own words, "a book that is not to be published for a century gives the writer a freedom which he could secure in no other way."

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

Beginning with June, the International Publishing Company, of New York, will publish the Jewish Scientific Library, a quarterly magazine devoted to popular science. The initial number is an exposition of the discovery of the law of gravitation, by Sir Isaac Newton, beautifully printed in Hebrew, the work of a learned and competent pen.

The Anglo-Saxon, Lady Randolph Churchill's gilt-edged quarterly magazine, will very likely be published in this country by John Lane some time during this month. There is a report that a Boston firm has copyrighted the title The Anglo-Saxon for a cheaper publication in that city, but it is not expected that the sale of Lady Randolph Churchill's magazine in this country will be interfered with on that account. As already noted the subscription price will be $24 a year, single numbers costing $6. Each number is to contain 250 pages and will be profusely illustrated.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

Edouard Rouveyre, 76 Rue de Seine, Paris, has just issued the second volume of the new enlarged edition of his "Connaissances Nécessaires à un Bibliophile." The volume treats of the format of books, miniature books, very large books, books printed or written in microscopic characters, collating, abbreviations used by bibliographers to indicate the condition of a book, signs and abbreviations used in ancient books, and imprints and dates. The volume is illustrated with many full-page plates, some of them in colors, and cuts in the text. (Pt. 2, 8+220 p. 8°, pap., 6 francs.)

A bibliographic club has been formed at Chicago, whose object it is to prepare and publish special bibliographies. One of the first of these will be a "Chicago Bibliography," or a list of works indicating the bibliographical riches of the libraries of Chicago. The active members of the club are A. G. S. Josephson, of the Crerar Library, who is chairman pro tem.; C. Hastings, of the University of Chicago, who is temporary secretary; C. W. Andrews, librarian of John Crerar Library; A. H. Hopkins, assistant librarian of John Crerar Library; Professor Karl Pietsch, of the University of Chicago; J. Dieserud, librarian of the Field Columbian Museum; F. H. Hild and C. B. Roden, of the Chicago Public Library.

"A List of the Book-Plates Engraved on Copper by Mr. Edwin Davis French" is the title of a catalogue of great value to collectors of ex-libris, prepared by Paul Lemperly, of Cleveland, O., and published by him in a limited edition for subscribers. Mr. French is easily first in the rank of book-plate engravers, and the list shows 133 exquisite specimens of his art. The volume also contains a portrait of Mr. French, a view of his studio at Saranac Lake, and four book-plates printed directly from the original coppers. The volume, furthermore, is a charming specimen of the work of the Marion Press, at Jamaica, L. I.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE FREDERICK A. STOKES CO. will publish next week Robert Barr's new story, "The Strong Arm."

HARPER & BROTHERS will publish at once William Edward Tirebuck's new romance, "The White Woman."

D. VAN NOSTRAND COMPANY have just ready a revised and enlarged edition of Gould's "Primer of the Calculus," the first edition of which was exhausted in a short time.

THE HOME PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish on the 15th inst. Gunter's new story, "M. S. Bradford, Special," said to be a dramatic story of the copper trust,

W. W. DENSLOW is engaged in illustrating a book for young people by Frederick Baum, author of "Mother Goose in Prose," which is to be ready for the Christmas trade.

A. N. MARQUIS & CO., Chicago, have just ready "Whose Who in America, a dictionary of living men and women in the United States who have gained more than local distinction."

THE Book Department of the H. B. Claflin Co. has bought from Charles Scribner's Sons an edition of 100,000 copies, bound in paper covers, of Richard Harding Davis's "Soldiers of Fortune."

THE AMERICAN UNION LEAGUE SOCIETY has published a volume entitled "Facing the Twentieth Century," by Rev. Dr. James M. King, General Secretary National League for the Protection of American Institutions.

C. F. PAGE, for several years secretary of L. C. Page & Company, of Boston, and for the last year their New York representative, has resigned his position with the company. F. T. J. Nunan will hereafter represent the house in New York.

UNITED STATES CONSUL JOHNSTON writes from Utilla, Honduras, that he has persuaded the school board on the island to adopt American school-books. The English language, not Spanish, is taught in the schools, and heretofore the books used were published in England.

L. C. PAGE & CO. have bought from the trustee of Lamson, Wolffe & Co. "Cyrano de Bergerac," translated by Howard Thayer Kingsbury; "Mademoiselle de Berny," by Pauline Bradford Mackie, and "Le Lyttle Salem Maide," by Pauline Bradford Mackie.

JEAN BOUSSOD, MANZI, JOYANT & CO. have just published the first part of the "Figaro-Salon, 1899," with text (in French) by Arsène Alexandre. The double-page supplement is a reproduction in colors of J. Benoit-Levy's powerful painting, "Le Matin du 14 Juillet, 1789."

DODD, MEAD & CO. have in preparation a volume entitled "Reminiscences of the Life of Edward P. Roe," to which are added sketches and other papers of an autobiographical nature. The text is edited by his sister, Mary A. Roe. They will publish shortly a volume of essays by David S. Meldrum.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will publish at once Brassey's Naval Annual for 1899. The important features of this year's volume are "The United States Navy," by W. H. Beehler, U. S. N.; "The Spanish-American War," by G. S. Clarke; and "Operations of the Gunboats During the Nile Expedition."

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. will publish shortly "Thoughts on the Collects for the Trinity Season," by E. Romanes; also, "The Correspondence of M. Tullius Cicero," presented in chronological order and with numerous notes, together with critical essays, by Robert Yelverton Tyrrell and Louis Claude Purser, both of Trinity College, Dublin University.

THE History Committee of the Grand Camp, Confederate Veterans of Virginia, passed a resolution on the 5th inst. condemning the use of Fiske's history in the schools of the South on the ground that the book is unfair to the South and Confederate soldiers in the Civil War; the literary excellence of the book, however, was admitted to be above reproach.

GINN & CO. will publish in July "An Introduction to Rhetoric," by William B. Cairns, of the University of Wisconsin. The author has laid the main stress on style; but he has given considerable space to invention, believing that students should be taught to choose and arrange what they have to say on a subject, at the same time that they are learning to write effective sentences.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish early in the fall an important work under the title of "Famous Homes of Old England and Their Stories." It will be edited by A. H. Malan, and will comprise descriptions of twelve notable homes, namely: Alnwick, Blenheim, Charlecote, Penshurst, Hardwick, Chatsworth, Lyme, Cawdor Castle, Belvoir Castle, Battle Abbey, Holland House, and Warwick Castle. Among the writers are the Duke of Marlborough, Lady Dudley, Lady Newton, Lady Warwick, Hugh Campbell, and A. H. Malan. There will be nearly 200 illustrations, for the most part full-page.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH COMPANY have just published "A History of New England's Theology," by George Nye Boardman, Professor Emeritus of Systematic Theology in Chicago Theological Seminary. The author traces the "New Divinity," formerly so called, in its development through the century between 1730 and 1830, through its Berkshire and Hopkinsian eras to its final form as New England Theology.

THE first move towards making permanent the history of the Cup Races in book form is made by R. H. Russell, who will bring out shortly a history in pictures, by L. A. Shafer, of the winning and defence of the America's Cup. The pictures, reproduced from large wash drawings, show the most interesting point of each of the races. There is no type, save a concise note of explanation of the different challenges with dates and results, accompanying each of the pictures.

THE personal library of the late William F. Poole, LL.D., the noted librarian and author of Poole's "Index to Periodical Literature," is to be sold en bloc. Dr. Poole's literary tastes ran in the line of Americana, and it is in this particular that his library of about 3000 volumes and a large number of periodicals excels. The collection would be a valuable addition to some new library desiring to strengthen its department of Americana. Information and lists may be obtained of William F. Poole, Jr., 500 The Temple, Chicago.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, will publish on the 13th inst. "Dainty Breakfasts—what to Order and how to Cook it," by Phyllis Browne; also, "A History of England, from the Landing of Julius Cæsar to the Present Day," by H. O. Arnold-Foster, M.P. They will publish shortly the "Royal Academy Pictures" for 1899, and a new issue of "Drawing in Charcoal and Crayon for the Use of Students and Schools," by Frank Fowler, with an introduction by Charles De Kay, the well-known art critic, and secretary of the National Arts Club.

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY announces "The Naked Truth," by Albert Ross; "The Slave of the Lamp," by Henry Seton Merriman; "The Sacrifice of Silence," by Edouard Rod; "A Princess of Vascovy," by John Oxenham, author of "God's Prisoner;" "Hats Off," by Arthur Henry Veysey, and "The Man Who Dared," a historical romance of the time of Robespierre. The second edition of "Waters That Pass Away" is sold out, and a third edition is in press. "Gettysburg, Then and Now," with 125 full-page half-tone illustrations, is just off the press, and offered to the subscription trade.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & CO., Philadelphia, will publish shortly Dr. Henry C. McCook's new book, "The Martial Graves of Our Fallen Heroes in Santiago de Cuba." The initial purpose of the book is to give an exact picture of the condition of the battlefields of Santiago de Cuba after the conflict. In connection with this, the book gives graphic and accurate descriptions of the various battlefields. This is done not only by the verbal descriptions of a personal observer, but by numerous photographs, drawings, maps, and charts. Moreover, a concise account is given of the various battles in which the fallen heroes lost their lives.

MEYER BROTHERS & CO. will publish shortly a limited edition, printed from special type, of de Bury's "Philobiblon," with introduction and notes by Charles Orr, librarian of the Case Library of Cleveland. They will also bring out a new story of Balzac, so far unpublished, translated by Edgar Saltus, and illustrated in colors, reproduced from the water colors of one of the best known French artists. The edition will be limited to 400 copies. The copies nos. 1 to 25, on Japan paper, have already been subscribed for. An extra set of the plates printed on China paper will add to the value of the book manufactured and printed in America.

THE S. S. WHITE DENTAL MFG. CO., Chestnut Street, corner Twelfth, Philadelphia, will soon issue "Interstitial Gingivitis, or so-called Pyorrhœa Alveolaris," by Eugene S. Talbot, M.D., D.D.S. This is an extended analysis of all the dental and pathologic problems involved in so-called pyorrhœa alveolaris from the preliminary to the closing stages of the disease with exfoliation of the teeth. The work is based on original research, conducted during the past four years in seven different chemic and pathologic laboratories, by different observers of admitted skill in pathology, bacteriology, and chemistry. The experiments have been conducted on sheep, dogs, and man. The results are excellently shown by clear micro-photographs, (5 x 6½,) which form an important feature of the book.

HENRY HOLT & CO. will publish shortly "The Hooligan Nights," the central figure of which is the veritable Alf. Hooligan, known as "The Hooligan," and leader of the notorious Hooligan gang of London. His remarkable though actual experiences are set down by his quondam acquaintance, Clarence Rook, an English journalist. Alf. is a Cockney with a humor and vernacular worthy of Chevalier. His life might seem grimy and depressing, but he took it in a mirthful, philosophical way. He was burglar, thief, and counterfeiter. He tells of many thieves' devices. His reminiscences include interesting criminological information, told with the charm of fiction, and the book, it is said, does for the criminal quarters of London what Hugo's "Notre Dame de Paris" did for those of Paris. They have in preparation an important historico-geographic work entitled "Russia in Asia," by Alexis Krausse.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY has just published a work by Professor A. H. Keene, of the Anthropological Institute, in London, entitled "Man, Past and Present." In his preface to "Ethnology," which formed the first volume of the Cambridge Geographical Series, of which the present work is also a part, a promise was held out that it might be followed by another dealing more systematically with the primary divisions of mankind. The present volume appears in part fulfilment of that promise. In the "Ethnology" were discussed those more fundamental questions which concern the human family as a whole. In the present work these divisions are treated more in detail, with the primary view of establishing their independent specialization in their several geographical zones, and at the same time elucidating the difficult questions associated with the origins and inter-relations of the chief subgroups, and thus bridging over the breaks of continuity between "man, past and present." They will publish immediately "Landmarks in English Industrial History," by George Townsend Warner, who in this work brings out the salient features of England's industrial and commercial progress in the past; also, a "Source Book of American History," in which the editor, Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard, presents 139 extracts from writers contemporary with the events which they describe, with introductions on the uses of sources, materials for source study, and subjects for topical study from sources.

FOREIGN NOTES.

A NEW volume of poems by Pope Leo XIII. will be published in the fall.

M. H. SPIELMANN, the historian of Punch, in criticising the series of papers now appearing in The Critic, which profess to identify and describe Thackeray's unknown contributions to Punch, cites no fewer than seven contributions which are wrongly attributed to Thackeray, and adds the names of the real authors.

GRANT RICHARDS, London, will publish at once "Francesco Crispi: Insurgent, Exile, Revolutionist, and Statesman," a story of the great Italian politician and patriot, by W. J. Stillman. The book will be a character study and a history of the times in which Crispi lived. In an appendix will be given an important item of correspondence between Crispi and Mazzini, and the volume will include two portraits.

PUBLISHED TO-DAY!

The Autobiography of Mrs. Oliphant.

With Portraits, One Volume, Cloth. Price, $3.50.

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY have now ready the long-awaited Autobiography of Mrs. Oliphant. The book contains portraits, and it has been fully and carefully arranged by Mrs. Caghill, who was for a long time in the confidence of Mrs. Oliphant.

Aside from being an interesting record of a lifelong devotion to literature, the book is important in that it throws a strong light on the literary masters and methods of the last fifty years in England. There was hardly a man or a woman prominent in English letters that Mrs. Oliphant did not know well. It is hardly known in this country what a remarkable woman she was, nor can we credit the list of her books given in the back of the Autobiography, so astounding does it seem that one woman could have written 160 books, and countless contributions to the magazines, in nearly all the branches of literature—fiction, history, biography, essays, and language

The book is full of strong passages and interesting reminiscences, but we cannot resist quoting the following paragraph from it, so admirably does it sum up the attitude which a literary master frequently holds toward his work, and so interesting is it as a revelation of Mrs. Oliphant's character:

"When people comment upon the number of books I have written, and I say that I am so far from being proud of that fact that I should like at least half of them forgotten, they stare—and yet it is quite true; and even here I could no more go solemnly into them, and tell why I had done this or that, than I could fly. They are my work, which I like in the doing, which is my natural way of occupying myself, though they are never so good as I meant them to be. And when I have said that, I have said all that is in me to say.

"Freedom! I have never known what it was. I have always had to think of other people, and to plan everything—for my own pleasure, it is true, very often, but always in subjection to the necessity which bound me to them. On the whole, I have had a great deal of my own way, and have insisted upon getting what I wished, but only at the cost of infinite labor, and of carrying a whole little world with me whenever I moved."

"The Biography of the Spring."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS beg to announce that they have in preparation for early publication

Scribner's Popular Series of Copyright Novels

EACH 12mo, CLOTH, 75 CENTS

All but two of the authors represented in this new cheap series of copyright novels are Americans, and their portraits, with one or two exceptions, are printed herewith. More than 2,000,000 copies of these books have been sold in the regular cloth binding. Each volume has a special cover design by the distinguished artist, Henry McCarter; the cloth and size being uniform throughout the series, however.

The thirty-three volumes in this series have been prepared for the widest possible circulation. Exceptionally low net prices will be quoted on large quantity orders.

TO THE TRADE

A NEW EDITION OF

HENRY SETON MERRIMAN

DODD, MEAD & COMPANY announce that they will shortly publish the only authorized edition of the early novels of Henry Seton Merriman, author of "The Sowers," "In Kedar's Tents," "Roden's Corner," etc. It will include "The Phantom Future," "Young Mistley," "Prisoners and Captives," and "Suspense."

The volumes will be printed and bound alike, making a uniform edition. They have been revised, condensed, and in part rewritten by Mr. Merriman, and are to be brought out by his direction and with his authorization, as he feels deeply aggrieved that some of these books have been recently reprinted in this country, and so announced and advertised that the general public has supposed them to be his latest writings. As they were written years ago, and are now considered by Mr. Merriman immature and below the level of his more recent work, it has been his desire that they should not be further circulated, and at some trouble and expense to himself he arranged but a short while ago to have them withdrawn entirely in England.

As, however, two of them have been recently reprinted here, Mr. Merriman feels compelled in justice to himself to have issued a revised and authorized edition, hoping that the many readers who have shown evidences of their appreciation of his later work will clearly understand that these books were the product of his years of immaturity.

Dodd, Mead & Company will publish in this country Mr. Merriman's forthcoming novels, one of which, entitled "The Isle of Unrest," is already announced for issue in 1900. It is the only story written by Mr. Merriman since "Roden's Corner."

NOW READY:

Alaska and the Klondike.

A Journey to the New Eldorado. With Hints to the Traveller and Observations on the Physical History and Geology of the Gold Regions, the Condition of and Method of Working the Klondike Placers, and the Laws Governing and Regulating Mining in the Northwest Territory of Canada. By ANGELO HEILPRIN, Professor of Geology at the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, Past-President of the Geographical Society of Philadelphia, etc. Fully illustrated from Photographs and with a new Map of the Gold Regions. 12mo, cloth, $1.75.

It may fairly be said that Professor Heilprin's interesting and authoritative book presents for the first time an accurate general account of the region which has so recently become famous. Much has been written about the Klondike, but a large proportion of this material contains so many exaggerations that a proper perspective is impossible. It was for the purpose of discriminating between fact and fancy by means of a personal knowledge of the region and its varied conditions that Professor Heilprin, an experienced traveller and the leader of the Peary Relief Expedition of 1892, made his journey through the region. He now presents the results of his observations in a series of graphic chapters which describe the features of the journey, the character of the country, and the life of the mining camps. To those specially interested in the practical possibilities of the region, the book will make a special appeal. Students will find it the first adequate presentation of the Klondike gold problem made by a geologist, and it will prove invaluable to prospectors and others practically interested, since it furnishes assistance not to be found in any other publication.

Imperial Democracy.

By DAVID STARR JORDAN, Ph.D., President of Leland Stanford Junior University. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

Dr. Jordan's striking and timely book presents the various phases of a democracy's entrance upon imperialism in the light of history as well as recent facts and developments. He analyzes our relations to the Philippines, and discusses various plans of conduct. He draws lessons from our management of Alaska. While the author is opposed to American control of subject races, his discussions are broad and fair, and his statements of the arguments on either side will prove of general interest and value at this time.

A Cosmopolitan Comedy.

By ANNA ROBESON BROWN, author of "Sir Mark," etc. No. 266, Appletons' Town and Country Library. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

This bright, ingenious, and charming story will rank among the most entertaining examples of summer fiction. The scenes are laid in Paris and on the New England coast in the summer of 1898. There are adventures which involve curious mystifications, in addition to the development of the love story, and the reader is kept in suspense up to the ending of a fresh and delightful tale.

These books are for sale by all booksellers; or they will be sent by mail, on receipt of price, by the publishers,

D. APPLETON & CO., 72 Fifth Avenue, New York.

WE desire to have the trade know that we propose to publish new authorized editions of several important and standard books, and at prices which will make it profitable for the booksellers to handle the authorized editions.

ABBOTT'S BIOGRAPHICAL HISTORIES

We are printing a new and complete edition of these histories in 32 volumes in cloth binding at 50 cents retail per volume. The type and illustrations will be identical with the present edition, and the printing and binding will be better than before, and more attractive than that of any unauthorized, incomplete issue. The entire set will be completed before September 1st, and the attention of the trade is directed to the fact that the set will not run out of copyright until the year 1912, and no other edition can be made complete.

We offer the books at the following prices:

1000 Volumes, 17 cents each	250 Volumes, 25 cents each
500 " 21 " "	100 " 27 " "

Less than 100 Volumes, 28 cents each

ABBOTT'S LIFE OF NAPOLEON

We are now preparing a new edition of this work for publication immediately, particulars of which will also be given out directly.

CURTIS'S PRUE AND I

We are preparing two attractive editions of this book—one illustrated by Albert E. Sterner, originally sold at $3.50; and another, in most attractive and dainty form, with a portrait and three illustrations, at 50 cents retail. Particulars of same will be sent out directly.

NOTES IN SEASON.

DODD, MEAD & CO. will shortly reprint, from the first London edition, "The life of Charlotte Brontë," by Mrs. Gaskell, with notes by Clement Shorter, which will include the much-discussed suppressed chapters. They will publish early in the fall Benjamin Swift's new novel, "The Syren City," which is largely a study of Naples.

SMALL, MAYNARD & CO., Boston, will immediately publish a new "bird book," entitled "On the Birds' Highway," by Reginald Heber Howe, Jr. Mr. Howe's essays comprise studies of the birds along the eastern coast from Maine to Maryland. The book will contain some sixty illustrations in half-tone from photographs by the author and a colored frontispiece in heliotype after a painting by Louis Agassiz Fuertes.

THE AMERICAN NEWS COMPANY (not the H. B. Claflin Co., as was announced in our last week's issue) have purchased from Charles Scribner's Sons an edition of 100,000 copies of Richard Harding Davis's "Soldiers of Fortune." It will be published as the August number of their People's Library, which now includes Anthony Hope's "Phroso," and "The Prisoner of Zenda," James Lane Allen's "The Choir Invisible," Marie Corelli's "The Sorrows of Satan," and Hall Caine's "The Manxman."

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY will publish the authorized translation of Clara Tschudi's "Life of Eugénie, Empress of the French." The mother of the wife of Napoleon III., it is probably remembered by few at this time, was the daughter of a Scotchman named Fitzpatrick, who kept a wine room in Malaga. The empress' mother, Manuela, was her father's assistant for some years, and in that capacity brought to her feet one of her father's regular customers, Don Cipriano, Count Téba, who was a colonel in the artillery regiment stationed in Malaga. As may be imagined, her life and that of her daughter, the Empress Eugénie, are full of romance. The translation from the Norwegian has been made by E. M. Cope, who also translated Clara Tschudi's "Marie Antoinette."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS will soon publish a new book on embroidery. It will be the combined work of Lewis F. Day, who is just completing a course of lectures on the subject at the Royal Institution, and of Miss Mary Buckle, an accomplished embroideress and teacher of the art, both of London. Its scope is practical and it is addressed to all interested in embroidery and embroidery design. It will be fully illustrated by reproductions of needlework on a scale large enough to show the stitch, and the artistic and technical side of the art will be treated with equal thoroughness. They have just imported the second edition of Baedeker's "United States," which contains sixty pages more than the first issue. The material has been thoroughly revised throughout, every department having been overhauled either by those who originally prepared the matter, or by others who were as well posted.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "Selections from the Manuscripts of Lady Louisa Stuart," and "Puerto Rico: Its Resources and Its Possibilities," by William Dinwiddie, already fully described by us. They announce a new and complete authorized edition of Abbott's popular biographical histories. The type and illustrations will be identical with the present edition and the printing and binding will be better than before, and more attractive than that of the unauthorized, incomplete issues now in the market. The entire set will be complete before September 1, and the attention of the trade is called to the fact that as these histories will not run out of copyright until 1912 no other edition can be made as complete as this. The volumes are made to retail at fifty cents each, the price to the trade will range from seventeen to twenty-eight cents each, according to quantity. They are also preparing two attractive and inexpensive editions of Curtis's "Prue and I," one of which will have the illustrations by Albert E. Sterner.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

The songs in this book have been written or planned and arranged to correlate with work in the schoolroom as outlined in "The plan book." "The plan book" was issued in ten numbers or volumes, one for each month of the school year, bringing to hand the material for each day's lessons and plans. In outlining these plans considerable difficulty was experienced in finding suitable songs for special days, programmes, and birthday celebrations. Aim is made to fill this need. Every birthday, holiday, and special day celebration, as observed in the lower grades, has been provided for.

Judson, E: The institutional church: a primer in pastoral theology; with an introductory word by Bp. Potter. N. Y., Lentilhon & Co., [1899.] 211 p. S. (Handbooks for practical workers in church and philanthropy; edited by S. Macauley Jackson.) cl., 50 c. [1932

The author defines an institutional church as an organized body of Christian believers who, finding themselves in a hard and uncongenial social environment, supplement the ordinary methods of the gospel, such as preaching, prayer meetings, Sunday-school, and pastoral visitation, by a system of organized kindness. The purpose of such churches is to direct humanity to the cross. This work is a study of methods.

Paterson, Arthur. Cromwell's own: a story of the great Civil War. N. Y., Harper, 1899. c. 2+407 p. D. cl., $1.50. [1964

The author of "The gospel writ in steel" and "For freedom's sake" has laid the scene of his romance in the stirring times of Cavalier and Roundhead. The story opens at the University of Cambridge, in the year 1640, when the hero, Ralf Dangerfield, and his profligate Cavalier friend, Viscount Charlton, are introduced. Ralf, after his father's death, serves in Cromwell's army, and falls in love with Cromwell's ward, Rachel Fullerton. The story is rich in incidents.

Pier, Arthur Stanwood. The pedagogues: a story of the Harvard summer school. Bost., Small, Maynard & Co., 1899. c. 4+287 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1965

The young instructor of the class in English composition and literature in the Harvard summer school is the hero of the book. He is a clever fellow, with some humor and a wide knowledge of human nature, accustomed to think of himself as a handsome man. There is some love-making, but the narrative is chiefly devoted to sketches of the odd men and women of all ages who congregate at the summer school and of their equally odd actions.

The poems here collected were published in part more than forty years ago. Under the title of "Consolations of solitude," a small volume was issued anonymously in 1856 by John P. Jewett & Co., but failed to make its way, although acknowledged by critics to contain work of unusual merit. These poems are bound in this volume, with a facsimile of the original title-page, inscription, introduction, etc.; also a number of unpublished miscellaneous poems, and a poetical work called "Metamorphoses of longing." These are preceded by an account of the Randall family, and of John Witt Randall in particular, which includes appreciative letters from Emerson, Richard A. Dana, Epes Sargent, S. Conant Foster, and William Cullen Bryant, written in 1856, when "Consolations of solitude" first appeared.

Sienkiewicz, H: In vain; from the Polish, by Jeremiah Curtin. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. c. 3+237 p. D. cl., $1.25. [1978

"In vain," the first literary work of Sienkiewicz, was written before he had passed the eighteenth year of his life, and while he was studying at Warsaw. It is a love story of student life in Kieff, full of the atmosphere of a Polish university, and crowded with scenes that the western reader will find unfamiliar and novel. A clear presentation of the mental power of the students gives fullness to the character drawing, and with this there is a philosophic outlook on life and character.

Wells, Herbert G: When the sleeper wakes. N.Y., Harper, 1899. c. 4+329 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [2001

A story of the future. Graham, the sleeper, goes into a trance at the end of the nineteenth century and sleeps for two hundred years. During all this time his small fortune continually increases, and when Graham awakes he finds that he has become the owner of more than half the world. The plot is slight. The interest consisting in the picture given of the civilization of two hundred years hence, when there are but four cities in England, when country life is a thing of the past, when newspapers have been replaced by large phonographic machines, when aëropiles and aëroplanes hover in the sky, and when what Mr. Wells calls "moving ways" have taken the place of railways, trolleys, etc.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 17, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

PROTECTION EXTRAORDINARY FOR THE DRAMATIST IN NEW YORK.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT has signed a remarkable amendment to the Penal Code, just passed by the New York Legislature, making it a criminal offence for a manager to produce, or an actor to take part in, an unpublished and undedicated play without the consent of the owner of the play, even though such play has not been copyrighted. The text of the new section of the Penal Code is as follows:

"PENAL CODE, Section 729.—Producing unpublished, undedicated, or copyrighted opera, etc., without consent of owner.—Any person who causes to be publicly performed or represented for profit any unpublished, undedicated, or copyrighted dramatic composition, or musical composition known as an opera, without the consent of its owner or proprietor, or who, knowing that such dramatic or musical composition is unpublished, undedicated, or copyrighted, and without the consent of its owner or proprietor, permits, aids or takes part in such a performance or representation, shall be guilty of misdemeanor."

It was supposed by all interested that when the national law against play piracy was passed that that measure was an effectual barrier to unauthorized reproduction of dramatic and musical compositions. As a matter of fact, the law has proved effectual whenever the author or manager took the precaution to have his production copyrighted, printed, and published. However, as a play cannot be copyrighted—and consequently cannot be protected by the national law—unless it is published; and, as scarcely one play in a hundred is ever printed at all, dramatists and authors have never been quite satisfied with the measure, because a play which is not published is protected only as a simple piece of property under the common law. Of course, with this Congress could have nothing to do, and, therefore, unpublished plays, even though copyright was formally applied for, were no better off than before if copyright was not completed by depositing at the Copyright Office at Washington two printed copies of such plays.

The uncopyrighted play being protected as a simple piece of property, the process of bringing the force of the law to bear upon it is not only cumbersome and procrastinating but expensive, and, as appeared in the case against Lee Beggs, that came before Judge Grosscup, at Chicago, about six months ago, very uncertain at the best.

The new law is intended to remedy all this. By its provisions stealing a play will become much the same thing as stealing a watch. That is to say, the person who gives an unauthorized production of a play can be treated exactly like the person who picks a pocket. He can be arrested, tried, and imprisoned. But it is very doubtful whether this will be realized. On the contrary, it is expected by competent legal authorities that the moment an offender against this law, which is to go into effect on September 1, shall come before the courts for trial, it will be set aside as in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Among the powers which that document reserves to Congress is the power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." In the exercise of this power Congress has at various times passed laws providing for the protection of the author upon the fulfilment of certain conditions and the payment of certain fees, in default of which he forfeits his rights in his productions. These prerogatives of the United States Government this new law of the State of New York would seem to trench upon, and for that reason it appears to be unconstitutional. Indeed, it is held by a writer in the New York Home Journal that this law would be unconstitutional, even if it applied only to copyright works; for no state is entitled to impose an extra penalty for an offence of which Congress may properly take cognizance, and for which Congress has already prescribed a penalty.

MORALITY IN BOOK COLLECTING.

"THE average bookseller," according to W. Roberts, in Literature, "will tell you that he has met with an honest book collector or two, but not many; whilst the collector is quite as likely to retort that the only upright bibliopoles of his acquaintance are those ignorant of their trade.

"I do not say that morality is a positive hindrance in successful book collecting, but I fear that 'trimming' is a quality much more likely to prove satisfactory. Here is an illustration: A few years ago a certain little booklet of Charles Dickens was considered to have survived in only three or four copies. It realized about £20 when it occurred in the saleroom, and the whereabouts of all were known. An unrecorded example occurred in the catalogue of a second-hand bookseller at a very moderate price; it was purchased by a collector who had a copy already. The next catalogue included another copy, and the collector began to think. He bearded the bookseller in his den, and then discovered to his dismay that a whole batch of nearly fifty copies had been unearthed at an old warehouse of the printer, and that they had been secured by the bookseller. Here was a dilemma. The collector asked himself: Shall I allow every one of my book-hunting rivals to possess a copy at a fifth of the price I originally paid, or shall I purchase the entire remainder? It is almost needless to say that he not only bought the whole, but that, with three or four exceptions, he consigned his purchase to the flames!

"It may be urged that a book collector is not obliged to teach a bookseller his business, and certainly the knowledge of rare books is only acquired after long and often costly experience. A certain Holborn bookseller once gained some valuable information in a curious manner. In one of his catalogues he entered a quite unpretentious little booklet as follows, or to this effect:

"'Hornem (Horace), The Waltz, 5s.'

"When folding the catalogues for the post one afternoon, a customer happened to come in and take up one of the new lists; in going through he paused at the 'Hornem' entry, and blandly asked to see the book; after a momentary glance he planked down the full catalogue price and carried it home. The catalogues for the London district reached their destinations by the last post the same evening, and, curiously enough, this Hornem article attracted the attention of more than one bookman. As the bookseller lived off the premises, nothing could be done until the morrow. At six o'clock the next morning an enthusiast from the northern heights of London started for town in the full confidence of bringing home the rarity. He arrived at the bookshop at seven o'clock, and, consoling himself with a pipe, took his seat confidently on the doorstep. By eight o'clock two other bookmen had arrived. When the bookseller came to open his shop he was rather astounded at the eagerness of the small crowd. These worthy hunters all wanted the same book, which had, however, gone beyond recall, so to speak, several hours previously! I will not dwell on a description of what their feelings might have been, or what their language certainly was, when they discovered that the book was gone. The bookseller, however, learnt that the little quarto which he had sold for 5s. was one of Byron's rarest pieces and worth quite £80.

"The legal mind is curiously complex. A distinguished Q.C. had the good luck to purchase a bundle of pamphlets at Hodgson's in Chancery Lane for three shillings and sixpence against a whole room-full of booksellers. Now that little parcel included a first edition of Gray's 'Elegy in a Churchyard,' worth perhaps £70 or £80. Ever since then the Q.C. has been more or less unhappy—find the rightful owner he cannot; pay the auctioneer commission on the higher amount he will not. To me this unrest is altogether inexplicable, and, to ease the Q.C.'s conscience, I suggested that he should hand the little rarity over to me. I could live quite comfortably with it; but this suggestion he firmly declines. This half-repentant sinner still goes on his way. I mention this little anecdote partly because it is the only recorded instance in which a book collector has half-repented a good bargain, and partly in the hope that so eminent a jurist will one day come to the conclusion that repentance is only good for the soul when it is full and unequivocal.

"Book collectors are all pretty much of the same type. For many years Macaulay hunted high and low for a little volume which was known to contain information on a minor problem of historic interest. He had all but given up the quest of a very bad job, but one day he happened to mention the name of the book to a then well-known old bookseller, who shook his head and said that he had never heard of the book, and, should it occur, the inquirer would certainly have to pay a stiff price. Now, outside this old man's shop there was a box of what may be described as 'malcontents'—odd volumes and despised books generally, offered at a uniform price of about sixpence each. Macaulay turned over a few volumes, and, to his unspeakable joy, discovered the very book which he had so long sought in vain. He rescued it, and, after paying for it, allowed the old bibliopole to see it. What the vendor's thoughts were, there is, as the coroner's jury would say, 'nothing to show.' Neither is there anything to prove that Macaulay paid more than the stipulated price. Indeed, the art of book collecting may be said to resolve itself into a matter of knowing what you want and buying it 'on the nail' when the opportunity occurs. A book collector once saw on a miscellaneous stall in Leather Lane a volume of seventeenth century plays priced at sixpence. Being uncertain in his dates, and not wishing to risk so large a sum on an uncertainty, he rushed off to the British Museum and discovered that the plays were of the right edition and very rare. Returning to purchase he discovered that in the short interval another man had come along and carried the volume off!

"Whatever the morality of book collecting, he who undertakes it should remember the answer of an old bookseller to the man who had purchased his business as a going concern, and who complained, after he had been in it a few months, that the takings had greatly fallen off: 'Sir, I sold you my business—not my brains.'"

INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHERS' CONGRESS.

At the second session of the International Congress of Publishers, held at Stationers' Hall, London, on the 8th inst., F. R. Daldy delivered an address on "Canadian Copyright, and the Relations of American and Canadian Publishers." In this he gave the substance of a provision which the Canadian Authors' Society proposed should be inserted in the bill before the Imperial Parliament, providing that the importation of English editions of works, of which Canadians have purchased the right to publish, be totally prohibited. It was stipulated, however, that copies of a local edition should be regarded as pirated copies if found in colonies outside of the one for which the license had been granted. Professor Mavor spoke in a similar tenor, and the Congress passed a resolution endorsing the Canadian proposal. On the 9th Professor Mavor appeared before the Select Committee of the House of Lords on Copyright, and introduced the Canadian proposition referred to. It is not expected that the bill will become law at this session.

D. C. Heath's paper on "The Need for More Complete Protection for Copyright Works" met with general approval.

Arthur Waugh, the author, denounced the reviewer's habit of lifting titbits of books into the newspapers, but the publishers, including Smith, Elder & Co. and Longmans & Co., differed. They thought that there were few abuses in reviewing. President John Murray recalled curious instances of the influence of publicity on books. He published a small book on rat-catching, which a weekly paper reviewed, and this resulted in orders from all parts of the country. On the other hand, the memoirs of Daniel O'Connell, on which Mr. Gladstone wrote a magazine article, and which he commended in his public speeches, was a failure.

The Congress decided to establish a permanent bureau to carry out the resolutions of previous, present, and future congresses, the expenses to be met by pro rata contributions from the national associations, and also to appoint an international commission to examine and report on the relations between authors and publishers in all countries.

At the banquet given by the Stationers' Company on the evening of the 7th inst., George Haven Putnam's toast to "Literature," according to the London correspondent of the New York Times, was the "hit" of the evening, and was generally acknowledged to be most learned. It was characteristically American in the manner of delivery, shrewd mother-wit, and frank, kindly view of men and things. He drew a glowing picture of the international influence of literature in the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries, showing that literature superseded the Papacy as a unifying force in the direction of human brotherhood. Professor Lecky, the historian, in replying, paid a warm tribute to the literary activity of the United States, and pointed out that the best history of the British navy was written by an American, Capt. Alfred T. Mahan.

The delegates to the Publishers' Congress visited the Royal Library and the private apartments at Windsor on the 10th inst., by a special invitation of the Queen—a favor rarely granted.

NEW YORK'S COLONIAL HISTORY.

State Historian Hastings, on the 7th inst., after conferring with State Comptroller Morgan, at Albany, N. Y., announced that the work of transcribing the old Dutch records relating to the colonial history of New York State and their preparation for publication would begin July 1, under his direction, though the actual work would be done by Dr. E. T. Corwin, of New Brunswick, N. J. The records which are to be transcribed, as already noted by us, are copies of documents from the ecclesiastical archives of Amsterdam and the Hague, and were secured by representatives of the Dutch Reformed Church, who sent Dr. Corwin to Holland to obtain them. The latter spent fifteen months abroad and brought back fifteen volumes of manuscript, which will be converted into about two volumes of English. Much valuable data relating to the early history of New York was found, and the last Legislature made an appropriation of $5000 in order that the results of Dr. Corwin's labors might be secured for the state historian's department. The work of preparing the records for publication will take about two years. At the conference which the state historian had with the comptroller Dr. John B. Drury, of the Christian Intelligencer, was also present, representing the Dutch Reformed Church of the United States.

MONTANA'S STATE PRINTING.

The fight that has been going on in the courts between The Independent and the State Publishing Company over the contract for the state printing was again passed upon by the Supreme Court on the 12th inst. The contract for the printing was awarded to the State Publishing Company early in the year. The constitution provides that the contract, to be binding, must be approved by the Governor and the State Treasurer. Those officials withdrew their approval and approved the contract with The Independent. Then counsel for the State Publishing Company commenced mandamus proceedings in the Supreme Court against the Governor and Treasurer to compel them to approve the contract with the State Publishing Company.

The court rendered its decision, quashing the writ. The court finds that it cannot under the constitution interfere with the action of a coordinate branch of the state government. The Governor is not amenable to mandamus. The court does not go into the matter whether the State Publishing Company was, as it claimed, the lowest bidder, but confines itself chiefly to the constitutional features of the points raised.

DEMURRER IN THE KIPLING-PUTNAM SUIT.

The attorneys for G. P. Putnam's Sons have filed a demurrer to the complaint alleging infringement of copyright served upon the publishers by the counsel for Rudyard Kipling. Counsel for defendants say that the complaint shows no sufficient cause of action. It is reported that Kipling will not return to this country till next year, to appear in the trial.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE TROLLEY PARTY.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE has made arrangements for a Trolley Party to Far Rockaway, L. I., on Saturday afternoon, June 24. The party will leave at two o'clock sharp, from Broadway Ferry, Brooklyn, which may be reached conveniently from New York by the Grand Street, Roosevelt Street, and Twenty-third Street ferries. Tickets, including dinner at the beach, are one dollar each. The entire edition of tickets is limited to sixty numbered copies. Word from those who wish to join the party must reach the committee—Charles A. Burkhardt and Cass Richardson, at Dutton's, 31 West Twenty-third Street, or James Macdonald, at 32 Lafayette Place—not later than the 19th inst.

OBITUARY NOTES.

FRANK H. FISKE, of the book and stationery firm of Fiske & Schwartzman, Meadville, Pa., died May 29, aged fifty-two. Mr. Fiske had been in ill health for several years. Mr. Fiske became a clerk in Ingham & Bragg's bookstore in 1864. In time he became manager for the firm and retained this position for twenty years. He then founded the firm of Fiske & Schwartzman, with George Schwartzman as his partner.

THE Rev. Louis Jouin, professor of philosophy at St. John's College, Fordham, N. Y., died at the college on the 10th inst., eighty-one years old. Father Jouin was born in Berlin of French parentage, and came to this country in 1848, since which time, with the exception of a few years, he had been connected with St. John's College. Father Jouin was the author of several works on philosophy, metaphysics, and the evidences of religion, and was noted as a linguist.

THE Rev. William Garden Blaikie, D.D., LL.D., Professor of Theology, Free Church, Edinburgh, died on the 11th inst. Dr. Blaikie was born in Aberdeen in 1820, and educated in the University of Aberdeen. He was ordained in 1842, and the following year joined the Free Church of Scotland. In 1868 he was appointed professor of apologetics and pastoral theology in New College, Edinburgh. Dr. Blaikie was one of the chief promoters of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance, and was president of the meetings at Toronto in 1892. In the same year he was chosen moderator of the General Assembly of the Free Church. He was at various times editor of The North British Review, The Sunday Magazine, and The Catholic Presbyterian, and he wrote many religious works, as well as a life of David Livingstone.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY is at work on a book on the state of Ireland in his youth.

EMILE ZOLA proposes to write a book on England, and a novel on the Dreyfus affair.

IT is reported that Le Temps has secured Gustave Larroumet to succeed the late M. Sarcey, who, as has been said, wrote the Lundi dramatic feuilleton for that journal for over forty years.

CLEMENT SCOTT, the veteran dramatic critic, whose writings for so many years appeared in the columns of The Daily Telegraph, of London, is correcting the last proofs of his "Reminiscences," which The Macmillan Company will bring out as soon as completed. Mr. Scott's peculiar individuality, his broad acquaintance among dramatists and actors, and his long career among the most famous journalists of the latter half of this century, should justify us in expecting memoirs of more than usual interest.

RUDYARD KIPLING, his wife, two children and his father sailed for England on the 14th inst. by the White Star liner Teutonic. He was also accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Doubleday, who have been a great deal with the Kiplings since they arrived in this country. Kipling is reported to have said shortly before sailing that he now feels himself capable of writing a mature novel, instead of sticking to the short stories and poems which have made his reputation. Apropos of Kipling, Mark Twain suggested in a recent speech in London: "Since England and America have been joined together in Kipling, may they never be severed in Twain."

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

J. FRANKLIN JAMESON has reprinted from the American Historical Review for July, 1896, his very interesting and useful "Bibliography of Early Party Conventions." (12 p. 8°.)

THE BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY has made an interesting contribution to bibliography and to science in the publication of a "Selected Bibliography of the Anthropology and Ethnology of Europe," by William Z. Ripley, assistant professor of sociology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and lecturer at Columbia University. The work is the outgrowth of the lectures delivered since 1893 at Columbia and at the Lowell Institute, and later prepared for publication, under the title of "The Races of Europe," and it gives the sources of information for the material there presented. The bibliography covers 160 pages, and includes nearly 2000 titles. In its preparation Mr. Ripley has had the co-operation of most of the leading anthropologists of the world, and the proofs have been submitted to many European specialists for the addition of foreign titles. It is arranged in an alphabetic author list, entering publications chronologically under author, to which is appended a useful subject index, referring to individual authors. In details of arrangement, typography, etc., the bibliography maintains the high standard set by the Boston Public Library in its publications. Despite its extent, the list is primarily a "selected" bibliography, representing the careful choice and deliberate judgment of competent authorities. Incidentally it gives interesting evidence of the extent of the Boston Public Library collection inasmuch as fully 95 per cent. of the works listed are contained in that library, and are entered with the library call numbers indicated. (10+160 p. O.)

(No. 1, 260 titles.)

BUSINESS NOTES.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y.—In our last week's issue we noted that P. F. Madigan had opened a new bookstore. This was only half true. Mr. Madigan only gave an exhibition of bindings and rare editions in the Crandall Library Building, but in no sense opened a bookstore there. Mr. Madigan is carrying on a general subscription, and is meeting with considerable success.

HALIFAX, N. S.—William T. Allen has purchased the interest of the late T. C. Allen in the book, stationery and printing business formerly carried on by T. C. Allen & Co., and will continue it in all its branches as heretofore under the same firm-name.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—W. W. Haygood, wholesale and retail dealer in new and second-hand school and miscellaneous books, has bought the good-will and stock of W. C. Holt, bookseller. Mr. Haygood will remove from 26 Commerce Street, and continue at Holt's old quarters at 77 Dexter Avenue.

NEW YORK CITY.—William J. Arkell has been appointed permanent receiver of the Arkell Publishing Company, with a bond of $150,000, and an order dissolving the corporation has been granted. Bartlett Arkell was the temporary receiver, but as it was stated that he will be away for some time on a trip to Europe, William J. Arkell was put in his place as receiver. The report of the referee gives the liabilities of the company at $750,126 and assets at $537,333.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Dodge Publishing Company, on account of steadily increasing business, will remove next month to larger and more central quarters at 150 Fifth Avenue.

NEW YORK CITY.—During July the American branch of John Lane, now under the management of Hunter H. Robinson, will remove to larger quarters at 251 Fifth Avenue.

NEW YORK CITY.—Lionel Alers-Hankey was appointed temporary receiver of Howard Lockwood & Co., Incorporated, on the 8th inst. The liabilities are reported to aggregate $75,000 and the assets $49,000. The printing business now owned by Howard Lockwood & Co., Incorporated, was established about twenty years ago by the late Howard Lockwood, he being in turn succeeded by Howard Lockwood & Co., the "Co." being W. P. Hamilton. On the death of Mr. Lockwood in 1892, according to Paper, the enterprising journal edited by Colin K. Urquhart, who was for years connected with Howard Lockwood & Co., the business was continued by his widow and W. P. Hamilton under the old firm style. In 1896 the business went into the hands of a receiver, and late in the same year it was purchased by the corporation of Howard Lockwood & Co., of which the widow of Mr. Lockwood, then Mrs. Alers-Hankey, was president, and her husband, Lionel Alers-Hankey, was treasurer. In July, 1897, according to statement made by the treasurer, Howard Lockwood & Co. had a surplus of $86,000. Yet, later the Paper Trade Journal, the American Stationer, and "Lockwood's Directory," publications of the house, were sold to the Howard Lockwood Publishing Company, a corporation composed of the same stockholders as Howard Lockwood & Co., the stock paid for them being divided among the stockholders of Howard Lockwood & Co. Recently these publications were sold to the Lockwood Trade Journal Company. Howard Lockwood & Co. also lately sold its other publication, The Printer and Bookmaker, but has continued to carry on the printing business. The sudden transfer of these papers may lead to a contest on the part of some of the creditors, on the ground that valuable assets were disposed of at a time when the concern was known to be insolvent. It is likely, however, that Mrs. Alers-Hankey, who is supposed to have some outside means, may assume all the debts or cause them to be paid, so as the avoid litigation.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HENRY HOLT & CO. have ready at last the long-promised "Hooligan Nights," by Clarence Rook.

F. M. BUCKLES & CO. have just published "Captain Jackman, or a tale of two tunnels," by W. Clark Russell.

WILLIAM ROHDE, of Rohde & Haskins, 7 and 9 Cortlandt Street, New York, will sail for Europe on July 8, to make an extensive tour of England, Scotland, and the Continent.

D. APPLETON & CO. have in press "The Story of Eclipses, with Special Reference to the Total Eclipse of the Sun of May 28, 1900," by George F. Chambers, author of "The Story of the Stars."

JOHN LANE will publish at once a volume of Lord Rosebery's "Appreciations and Addresses." The former will deal with Burke, Burns, Wallace, Stevenson, Gladstone, and Landor, and the latter with "The English-Speaking Brotherhood" and other non-political subjects.

THE DODGE PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish to-day Elizabeth Strong Worthington's long-expected story entitled "How to Cook Husbands," who are said to be really delicious when treated according to Mrs. Worthington's method. Mrs. Worthington is the author of many interesting magazine articles which show great wit and humor.

THE CASLON PRESS, of New York, has just published in a small quarto volume, a reprint of Tennyson's "Sir Galahad," with the illustrations by Dante Gabriel Rossetti. The edition consists of 100 numbered copies printed in red and black on Dutch hand-made paper, with a Japan proof of the illustration, and bound in a gray paper wrapper.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready a volume entitled "Two Women in the Klondike," the story of a journey to the gold fields of Alaska, by Mary E. Hitchcock. The journey was undertaken in the summer of 1898, and extended from San Francisco to Dawson, and back by way of the White Pass. The volume contains upwards of one hundred illustrations.

THE SHAKESPEARE PRESS, Westfield, N. J., will publish on the 30th inst. No. 12 of the publications of The Shakespeare Society of New York, entitled "In Re Shakespeare's 'Legal Acquirements': notes by an unbeliever therein," by William C. Devecmon, of the Maryland bar. The Shakespeare Press announces that the third edition of Appleton Morgan's "Study on the Warwickshire Dialect" is entirely sold out, and that a new edition will be ready in September.

WYCIL & CO., 83 Nassau Street, New York, are issuing a new and improved edition of four methods in the famous Otto-Gaspey-Sauer series to be sold at popular prices. The Spanish conversation grammar is now ready. It will be followed at once by the French, German, and Italian conversation grammars, all of which will be ready this month. A special feature of this edition is the fact that it can be obtained with or without the key bound in with the method, as may be desired.

A. S. BARNES & CO. will publish shortly a work entitled "The Mind and Art of Poe's Poetry," by Professor John Phelps Fruit, of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo. The author believes "that every genius has a message for the world, and stands more in need of interpretation than of having his measurements taken by dogmatic criticism." He is, therefore, of the opinion that to trace the lucubrations of a poet's brain from their first manifestation to their full attainment in his finished work is not only fascinating, but as profitable as fascinating, and that to get 'the right good' of the poet is to 'plunge soul-forward, headlong' into his works."

A STRIKING instance of the spread of the English language and its reaction on international publishing is the simultaneous publication of editions of "Richard Carvel" in New York, London, San Francisco, and Toronto, while negotiations have just been concluded for a special edition in India, and for one also in the British Colonies. Winston Churchill was practically an unknown man just one year ago this month. Such, however, is the outcome of the success of his first novel, "The Celebrity," which, by-the-by, was written during a holiday interval while "Richard Carvel" was on the stocks. Mr. Churchill has given four years' hard work on both sides of the water to the writing of the latter book.

FRANK APPELL, for several years with Brentano's at New York, has become manager of their Chicago branch, at 218 Wabash Avenue. Mr. Appell served his apprenticeship in the book business with the late W. R. Jenkins. After Jenkins died Appell was considered competent to take charge of the retail department of Sabiston & Murray, with whom he remained until they went out of business. About four years ago he took a position at Brentano's, where he won high praise as a first-class bookman. For some time he had entire charge of the stock at the Union Square store. By his knowledge of the book business, his ability as an executive, and his agreeable manners, Appell will no doubt greatly advance the interests of his principals and make many friends for himself.

THE Book Department of the H. B. Claflin Co. have just ready the fifteen-volume edition of Kipling's books, published by arrangement between the author and his authorized publishers—D. Appleton & Co., The Century Company, and The Doubleday & McClure Company. The edition consists of 20,000 sets. Each volume will have stamped on the cover the swastica, adopted by Kipling as his sign-manual and underneath it the autograph of the author. A six-volume set of Kipling's works will be issued probably on July 1. A five-volume set and a volume of his "Soldiers' Stories" are also promised for July. To make the attractions of this set the more compelling Mr. Kipling has rewritten numerous portions of the most popular stories contained therein. In September they will publish a large and beautiful calendar stamped in brass from a design by Kipling's father. About 5,000 of these, it is understood, will be put on the market. The relief depicts a "Jungle Book" scene, and is a most striking and effective piece of work. The cover of the calendar pad will be embellished with a fine photogravure of Kipling.

D. APPLETON & CO. have just ready a work on "Alaska and the Klondike," by Angelo Heilprin, professor of geology at the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia. It was for the purpose of discriminating between fact and fancy in the reports relating to the new Eldorado, by means of a personal knowledge of the region and its varied conditions that Professor Heilprin, an experienced traveller and the leader of the Peary Relief Expedition of 1892, made his journey through the region. He presents the results of his observations in a series of graphic chapters which describe the features of the journey, the character of the country, and the life of the mining camps. To those specially interested in the practical possibilities of the region, the book will make a special appeal. Students will find it an adequate presentation of the Klonkike gold problem made by a geologist, and it will prove valuable to prospectors and others practically interested, since it furnishes assistance not to be found in any other publication. The volume contains a number of illustrations from photographs and a new map of the gold regions. They have also just ready a new volume in Appleton's Home-Reading Books, entitled "Uncle Sam's Soldiers," in which O. S. Austin, Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, gives, in the form of an interesting story for young people, a large amount of information concerning the army, its organization, method of training, etc.; and, in the Town and Country Library, a charming love-story by Anna Robeson Brown, entitled "A Cosmopolitan Comedy."

AUCTION SALES.

[We shall be pleased to insert under this heading, without charge, advance notices of auction sales to be held anywhere in the United States. Word must reach us before Wednesday evening, to be in time for issue of same week.]

JUNE 19, 3 P.M.—Americana, including American drama, imprints, political tracts, etc. (379 lots.)—Bangs.

JUNE 20–23, 3 P.M.—A collection of books from the estate of the late Mrs. Helen S. Conant, etc. (1300 lots.)—Bangs.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, enclosures of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Standard Intermediate-School Dictionary.

Abridged from the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary. This is the latest and most perfect intermediate-school dictionary. It gives the orthography, pronunciation, meaning, and etymology of 38,000 words and phrases. There are 800 new illustrations. The design has been to meet all of the most recent and exacting educational requirements. 8vo, cloth, 541 pages, $1.00.

Gen. James Grant Wilson, President of the American Author's Guild: "I deem the Standard Intermediate-School Dictionary superior to any similar volume that has yet come under my notice. I fail to see any feature of the work that can not be commended."

Poems by Richard Realf.

More than one hundred and fifty stirring lyrics and beautiful songs and sonnets of war, love, and comradeship. Edited by Col. Richard J. Hinton. 12mo, cloth, cover design, deckle edges, gilt top. Price, $2.50 net.

The Times, New York: "Richard Realf had in him a kind of composite spirit that suggested a blend of Gerald Massey with Robert Burns. He wrote always with fluency and fire, and there was such a fresh and felicitous touch at his command that he rarely failed to hit a high mark."

The Imperial Republic.

By James C. Fernald, author of "The Spaniard in History," etc. 12mo, cloth, with five maps. Price, 75 cents.

The Chicago Tribune says: "It is a spirited and unanswerable brief for expansion. Mr. Fernald's style is polished, forceful, full of magnetism. His outlook is broad, and bold, and frank. His patriotism is infectious, his knowledge accurate and voluminous, his logic sound and close-woven."

My Young Man.

By Louis Albert Banks, D.D. Practical and straightforward talks to young men in their relationship as a son, brother, member of society, lover, husband, citizen, etc. 12mo, cloth, cover design, 75 cents.

Washington Post: "The aim of these addresses, or character studies, is to arouse in young men a love and respect for things that they are too apt to regard lightly."

Why Men Do Not Go to Church.

By Cortland Myers, Minister at the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, N. Y. 16mo, cloth. Price, 60 cents.

Central Christian Advocate, St. Louis, Mo.: "They deal brightly and practically with the faults of the church, the faults of the man, and the faults of society, which, it is claimed, hinder church-going."

The American Colonial Handbook.

A ready-reference handbook of facts and figures, historical, geographical, commercial, and political, about our new possessions. By Thomas Campbell-Copeland, Associate Editor of "The Standard Dictionary." 16mo, cloth, pocket size. Price, 50 cents.

Chicago Times-Herald: "We predict that the little volume will prove a treasure to business men, editors, politicians, and all such men as desire a ready-reference manual of our new possessions."

The Gospel in the Fields.

By R. C. Fillingham. Talks on the delights of nature and her inspirations. 12mo, cloth, gilt top, deckle edges, cover design, $1.25.

The Methodist Times: "There is a holiday spirit pervading the reflections. . . . Fresh as they are saintly."

The Best Key to Educational Books.

THE

American Educational Catalogue

For 1899,

whose value to the trade is proved by the fact that it is now in its thirtieth year, and that claims to be the best practical aid to the dealer in or buyer of school books.

With its alphabetical arrangement by authors, its separate class-index, carefully sub-classified to an extent not followed by any other catalogue, its completeness and accuracy, it is presented as the best finding-list, the most complete order-list, and the most satisfactory class-catalogue for school use.

The catalogue is made entirely new each year, to omit books which have dropped out of use and to include all live books, and all new books (ready or to be ready for the Fall) are added in their proper alphabetical place.

The page giving the key to publishers will not be given in imprint editions unless specially ordered.

This Catalogue is specially planned to be of service for circulation by retailers among schools and private buyers. The imprint edition possesses not only temporary value, but will serve its purpose during the whole year. No imprint edition of less than 100 copies can be supplied. Orders for editions should be sent to us at once.

CASH TERMS:

Imprint edition—without publishers' advertisements:
With sole imprint of ordering firm, and stitched, per 100 copies, $5.00; per 1000, $40.00.

There is no extra charge for printing name, business card, etc., on the imprint page; the last page is left blank at the disposal of the dealer, but any copy for that page, advertising special lines or general business, will be set up and printed thereon for $5.00, or for $1.00 if plate is sent.

Copy for imprint and shipping directions should accompany the order.

NOTES IN SEASON.

BENJ. H. SANBORN & Co., Boston, have just published a novel entitled "Mary Cameron: a romance of Fisherman's Island."

THE FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY will publish shortly a volume of sermons, entitled "Life Indeed," by Dr. Edward B. Coe, senior minister of the Collegiate Reformed Church of New York.

FREDERICK A. STOKES COMPANY have just ready a volume on "What Women Can Earn," by Mary E. Wilkins, Grace H. Dodge, Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, and others; "Our Conquests in the Pacific," by Oscar K. Davis; "Pabo the Priest," by J. Baring Gould; also "An Eclipse of Memory," by Dr. Morton Grinnell.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS will publish shortly in its excellent series of British Anthologies, edited by Edward Arber, the Spenser, Dryden, and Pope anthologies. They have in preparation the Dunbar, Surrey and Wyatt, Goldsmith and Cowper volumes. The Shakespeare, Jonson, and Milton anthologies were issued a short time ago.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS have just ready a second edition, revised and enlarged, of Miner Bruce's work on "Alaska, its History and Resources, Goldfields, Routes and Scenery," with a number of illustrations and a folded map; and two nature books—"Our Insect Friends and Foes," by Belle S. Cragin, and "Ornamental Shrubs," by Lucius D. Davis—both of which have already been fully described by us.

KAZMAR & Co., Pontiac Building, Chicago, announce an entirely new book by the author of "Mr. Dooley in War and Peace," entitled "What Dooley Says." A longer title had been selected for this new book, but it was finally decided to use the present short one, out of deference to trade convenience. "What Dooley Says" will be published simultaneously in England and copyrighted there, to prevent the publication of unauthorized editions.

GINN & Co. will publish at once a handbook on "Clay Modelling," for schools and classes, by Anna M. Holland, teacher of modelling in normal and public school classes in Boston. The course of work described in this book is the result of fifteen years' experience in teaching the subject. It embodies manual and artistic training in clay, with exercises adapted to the powers of children seven years of age and upwards. The book is fully illustrated with models which show a carefully graded, yet elastic programme of work, with constant recognition of individual needs.

THE DIBDIN CLUB (M. L. Greenhalgh, secretary, 110 East 87th Street, New York,) has just issued a leaflet entitled "Henry Harrisse, a biographical and bibliographical sketch," by A. Growoll. The leaflet contains an authoritative biography of the author of that splendid bibliography—"Bibliotheca Americana Vetustissima"—and a short title list of all of his writings down to the present time, comprising seventy-one numbers. A portrait of Mr. Harrisse, printed on Japan paper, forms the frontispiece. One hundred copies were printed, of which less than half are offered for sale at fifty cents a copy.

THE MONTGOMERY PUBLISHING CO., 23 Park Row, New York, has just published "The Choate Story-Book," with a biographical sketch of Ambassador Joseph H. Choate, by Will M. Clemens. The English edition of this book, entitled the "Joe Choate Jest-Book," was suppressed by the publisher in deference to Mr. Choate's wishes. They have also published a new edition of Charles Knowles Bolton's "The Reign of the Poster," and a cheap issue of "The Vampire," by Kipling. They have in preparation a collection of "Kipling Parodies" and a "Kipling Bibliography." The latter volume will contain no less than 200 titles and will be published in a limited edition for collectors only. They also announce a Chinese love-story, with the scenes laid in Mott and Doyers Street.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles. D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S. Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.) D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. 48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

Abbott, Katharine M. Trolley trips: the historic New England coast, Long Island shore, Narragansett Bay, Connecticut Valley, Buzzard's Bay, and Massachusetts. Lowell, Mass., published by the author, Katharine M. Abbott, 1899. c. 4-123 p. il. obl. T. pap., 10 c. [2006

A little book in line with "Trolley trips on a Bay State triangle" and "South shore trolley trips." Describes a hundred places of interest to be reached by trolley or steamer along the points indicated in title. Full information is given of routes, etc.

Alden, Mrs. Isabella MacDonald, [Mrs. G: R. Alden, "Pansy," pseud.] Yesterday framed in to-day: a story of the Christ, and how to-day received him. Bost., Lothrop Pub. Co., [1899.] c. 3-356 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [2007

Other writers have attempted to portray the actions of the world of to-day should Christ appear in it to labor, heal, and bless as he did in the yesterday of nineteen centuries ago; "Pansy" has placed him there. Into the to-day of railroads and telegraphs, phonographs and electric lights, she brings a central figure —Jesus the Christ. She has placed in contact with this central light the people of to-day, who appreciate it no better than did those of Old Judea, with the result that all who read must consider and decide upon for themselves.

American and English railroad cases; a collection of all cases affecting railroads of every kind, decided by the courts of appellate jurisdiction in the U. S., Eng., and Canada; ed. by T: J. Michie. V. 12, new ser. Northport, N. Y., G: R. B. Michie & Co., [1899.] c. 8+918 p. O. shp., $5. [2008

Atlantic reporter, v. 42. Permanent ed. Jan. 25-Apr. 26, 1899. St. Paul, West Pub. Co., 1899. c. 20+1191 p. O. (National reporter system, state ser.) shp., $5. [2009

Contains all the reported decisions of the supreme courts of Me., N. H., Vt., R. I., Ct, and Pa.; court of errors and appeals, court of chancery, and supreme and prerogative courts of N. J.: supreme court, court of chancery, superior court, court of general sessions, and court of oyer and terminer of Del, and court of appeals of Md. With tables of Atlantic cases published in v. 87, Md. reports: 56, N. J. equity reports. A table of statutes construed is given in the index.

Bible. New Testament. The great discourse of Jesus the Christ, the Son of God: a topical arrangement and analysis of all his words recorded in the New Testament; separated from the context, by A layman. 9th ed. enl. and rev. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1899. 380 p. 12°, cl., $1.25. [2010

Brown, Anna Robeson. A cosmopolitan comedy. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 3+304 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 266.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c. [2011

While the story has its opening chapters in Paris, it is quickly transferred to the United States. The Château Gui, built by a French seigneur of the time of Louis XIV., on the New England coast, is the picturesque scene of the comedy. The Princess Sarrazine, an American girl who had married a Russian, comes here to pass her widowhood. Her wealth restores to its former beauty this home of one of her ancestors. The Princess is a vain woman fond of gems, and has by intrigue obtained possession of a valuable pearl belonging to a Cuban patriot. The time is 1898, and the story is colored by the events of the Spanish war. The comedy revolves around the pearl and its supposed theft.

Bruce, Miner W. Alaska: its history and resources, gold fields, routes and scenery. 2d ed. rev. and enl. [New issue.] N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. '95. 10+237 p. il. O. cl., $2.50. [2012

Originally published by Lowman & Hanford Stationery and Printing Co See notice. "Weekly Record," P. W., June 15, 1895, [1220.] This edition is enlarged by over one hundred pages.

Champness, Rev. T: Tales of adventure from the Old Book. Chic., The Bible Institute Colportage Assoc., [1899.] c. 4-121 p. S. (Colportage lib., v. 5, no. 75.) pap., 15 c. [2013

Stories adapted from the Bible.

Church unity: the progress and suspension of the negotiations between the Protestant Episcopal and Presbyterian churches. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub. and Sabbath School Work, 1899. 3-45 p. O. (Church papers, no. 3.) pap., 10 c. [2014

Cole, Anne Frances. Uncle Earle's monopoly. Cin., O., The Editor Publishing Co., 1899. c. 4+267 p. il. D. cl., $1. [2015

An account of a summer spent together by several college boys, and an equal number of girls, just out of school. A couple of romances are developed.

Cragin, Belle S. Our insect friends and foes: how to collect, preserve, and study them. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 19+377 p. il. D. cl., $1.75. [2016

Sets forth the pleasure to be derived from a systematic study of the habits of insects, and gives many points of practical value to the beginner. No attempt has been made to mention any except the commonest species of insects, nor all of these. The habitat, in most cases, is included in the description, but, as a rule, the species are those found in the states east of the Rocky Mountains and north of the Gulf States. The scientific names are given for such insects as are illustrated, and in addition there is a list of popular names and their scientific equivalents. Books for reference (1 p.).

Cunnington, Rev. E. E. The modern chess primer. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, Ltd., 1899. 356 p. 16°, cl., 80 c.; bds., 60 c. [2017

Davis, Lucius Dan. Ornamental shrubs for garden, lawn, and park planting; with an account of the origin, capabilities, and adaptations of the numerous species and varieties, native and foreign, and especially of the new and rare sorts, suited to cultivation in the United States. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 6+388 p. il. O. cl., $3.50. [2018

As this is not designed to be a scientific treatise, no attempt is made at strictly botanical classification or description. What is written is more especially for the large number of people who, though interested in plants and flowers, have little or no knowledge of botany, and neither time nor inclination to acquire it. The phraseology is plain and the descriptions are

Dietler, Hans. The regulation and nationalization of the Swiss railways. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1899.] 62 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 250.) pap., 50 c. [2020

D'Ooge, B: L. Helps to the study of classical mythology; for the lower grades and secondary schools. Ann Arbor, Mich., G: Wahr, 1899. c. 9+180 p. D. cl., 45 c. [2021

A bibliography based on practical experience. The author is a professor in the Michigan State Normal School. As the myths of all nations manifest themselves first in religion, secondly in art, and third in literature, these reading references are grouped in the above classes. One section is devoted to the study of mythology in the grades, and an introductory chapter gives hints for teaching the subject in the lower grades. The books suggested in the body of the work are given in one alphabet at the end, with publishers and prices; there are also blank pages for additional references, and a good general index.

Gale, Norman. A June romance. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. c. 2+188 p. il. nar. S. (Blue cloth books.) cl., 75 c. [2022

A story of English country life. Ralph Anderson fresh from Oxford goes to Falconhurst, the home of Major Ellaby, as private tutor to the Major's son. Meeting Alice Ellaby, sister of his pupil, he falls in love with her, and tells of his wooing in a diary, which covers the time from June 1-30.

Gash, A. D. The false star: a tale of the occident. Chic., W. B. Conkey Co., 1899. c. 578 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [2023

The plot of the story is laid in Utah. It is apparent that the author's object is to place before the public the teachings and practices of the Mormon church; the deceptions practised by it, the purpose of its adherents in obtaining statehood for Utah, and the necessity of the American people righting the wrong; also, to counteract the false teachings of the army of missionaries of that church, scattered throughout the world, by showing that they teach one thing in Utah and another in the mission field.

Georgia. Supreme ct. Reports of cases at the Mar. term, 1898, v. 104, Stevens and Graham, reps. Atlanta, The State Library, 1899: c. 20+925 p. O. shp., $5. [2024

Gittings, J: G. Personal recollections of Stonewall Jackson. [Also] sketches and stories. Cin., O., The Editor Pub. Co., 1899. c. 4+311 p. por. D. cl., $1. [2025

Contents: Reminiscences of Stonewall Jackson, and four short stories, entitled: Rose Trevillian; The light that failed; On the trail; Trelawney.

Harrison, Mrs. Constance Cary, [Mrs. Burton Harrison.] The Carcellini emerald: with other tales. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., [1899.] c. 2+314 p. il. D. cl., $1.50. [2026

The Carcellini emerald was a jewel of fabulous price, which had once belonged to a celebrated cardinal; its history and the story of its unaccountable loss and strange discovery is told in the initial story. The other tales are: An author's reading and its consequences; Leander of Betsy's pride; The three Misses Benedict at Yale; A girl of the period; The stolen Stradivarius; Wanted: a chaperon.

Heilprin, Angelo. Alaska and the Klondike: a journey to the new Eldorado, with hints to the traveller and observations on the physical history and geology of the gold regions, the condition of and methods of working the Klondike placers, and laws governing and regulating mining in the northwest territory of Canada; il. from photographs, with a new map of the gold regions. N. Y., Appleton, 1899. c. 7+315 p. O. cl., $1.75. [2027

The title covers the contents of the volume. The author has attempted to portray in its true aspects a region of which many exaggerated and distorted accounts have been written. His journey was made in the summer of 1898, covering the period from the end of July to the middle of October.

Helferich, H., M.D. An atlas of fractures and dislocations; tr. from the 3*d rev. German ed.*, by Jonathan Hutchinson. N. Y., W: Wood & Co., 1899. 130 p. il. 8°, cl., net, $3. [2028

Hitchcock, Mary E., [Mrs. Roswell D. Hitchcock.] Two women in the Klondike: the story of a journey to the gold fields of Alaska. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 14+485 p. pors. il. map, O. cl., $3. [2029

Mrs. Roswell D. Hitchcock, widow of the late Commander Hitchcock, U. S. N., describes the adventures of herself and Miss Edith Van Buren, a grandniece of ex-President Van Buren, during a perilous and eventful journey taken in the summer of 1898. Owing to the waters of the Yukon being low the two women were delayed for some time at Dawson, where they located miner's claims and lived as squatters. Besides the interesting incidents of travel included, there are graphic descriptions of the Klondike region, and accounts of native Indian customs and superstitions, mining methods, etc.

Holder, C: F: Stories of animal life. N. Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. 261 p. D. (Eclectic school readings.) cl., 60 c. [2030

Derived mainly from personal experience with the various animal forms described. Intended as an elementary study in zoölogy or as a supplementary reader for those who have studied animal life in either the field or through the text-book.

Homer, [Gk. Homeros.] The twelfth book of Homer's Odyssey; ed. for the use of schools by R: A. Minckwitz. Bost., Ginn & Co., [1899.] c. 18+89 p. S. (School classics.) cl., 40 c. [2031

With the exception of a few unimportant changes the text is that of Ameis-Hentze, published by Teubner, Leipzig. The German punctuation has been made to conform to American usage. Besides the Greek text, the story of the Odyssey is given, with a vocabulary, introduction, etc.

Hubbard, Elbert. Meissonier. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1899. c. 171-208 p. S. (Little journeys to the homes of eminent painters, v. 5, no. 4.) pap., 10 c. [2032

Hubbard, Elbert. Rembrandt. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, [1899.] c. 53-111 p. S. (Little journeys to the homes of eminent painters, v. 5, no. 2.) pap., 10 c. [2033

Hubbard, Elbert. Rubens. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons. [1899.] c. 113-169 p. S. (Little journeys to the homes of eminent painters, v. 5, no. 3.) pap., 10 c. [2034

Hubbard, Elbert. Titian. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, [1899.] c. 209-243 p. S. (Little journeys to the homes of eminent painters, v. 5, no. 5.) pap., 10 c. [2035

Hume, Frances. The experience of Dorothy Leigh. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, Ltd., 1899. 261 p. 12°, cl., $1.25. [2036

Hutchison, R. A. Memory talks on spiritual power; or, the Holy Spirit and the church. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1899. 204 p. 12°, cl., $1. [2037

Illinois. All the laws of the state passed by the 41st general assembly, convened Jan. 4, 1899, adjourned sine die Apr. 14, 1899; with headnotes and references to Hurd's revised statutes of 1898, by Ja. B. Bradwell. [Chic.,] Chicago Legal News Co., 1899. c. 307 p. O. shp., net, $2; pap., $1.50. [2038

Illinois. Supreme ct. Reports of cases, v.

177; cont. cases in which opinions were filed in Dec., 1898, and Feb., 1899, and cases in which rehearings were denied at the Feb. term, 1899; I: Newton Phillips, rep. Springfield, I: Newton Phillips, 1899. c. 708 p. O. shp., $2.25. [2039

*Kentucky criminal law and procedure, both statute and common law, by Ja. M. Roberson. Cin., W. H. Anderson & Co., 1899. c. 2 v., 43+656; 657-1307 p. O. shp., $12. [2040

*Lewes, G: H: The life of Maximilien Robespierre; with extracts from his unpublished correspondence. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, Ltd., 1899. 371 p. 12°, pap., 40 c. [2041

Lorimer, G: Claude, D.D. Christianity as a world-power: annual sermon preached before the Baptist missionary and publication societies at San Francisco, May 28, 1899. Phil., American Baptist Pub. Soc., 1899. c. 2-44 p. O. pap., 10 c. [2042

Lothrop, Mrs. Harriet Mulford, ["Margaret Sidney," pseud.] The stories Polly Pepper told to the five little Peppers in the little brown house; il. by Jessie McDermott and Etheldred B. Barry. Bost., Lothrop Pub. Co., [1899.] c. 2+469 p. D. cl., $1.50. [2043

The initial volume of a new Pepper series, distinct and separate from the original series of the famous "Five little Peppers," and yet connected with it in character and interest. It embraces twenty-six short stories for quite young children.

MacDougall, Rev. Donald. The conversion of the Maoris. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub. and Sabbath School Work, 1899. c. 9+216 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.25. [2044

The origin of the Maori, says the author, is lost in obscurity. He, however, traces the history of the barbaric race from 1400 to 1898, dwelling upon native customs, and weird rites and superstitions, and showing finally the part of the modern missions in the conversion of the Maori from cannibalism to Christianity.

*Mahan, Alfred Thayer. The life of Nelson. Popular ed. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1899. 16+764 p. il. 8°, cl., $3. [2045

*Maine. Railroad laws of the state; comp. by E. C. Farrington, 1899. Augusta, Kennebec Journal Print, 1899. c. 200 p. O. shp., $2.75; bds., $2. [2046

Milne, W: J. Grammar school algebra: a course for grammar schools, and beginners in public and private schools. N. Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. 154 p. D. hf. leath., 50 c. [2048

Designed to present the elementary facts of the science of algebra in a way that interest will be awakened in the processes.

Munroe, Kirk. Shine Terrill: a Sea Island ranger. Bost., Lothrop Pub. Co., [1899.] c. 3-317 p. il. D. cl., $1.25. [2049

The story has its scene in the south among the Sea Islands of the Georgia coast from the Altamaha River to Fernandina. The young hero, "Shine Terrill"—the boy of a Georgia plantation—proves himself at once bright, handy, apt, and helpful; even while laboring under unnecessary apprehension over a crime he did not commit, he never loses his manliness or yields to temptation. Incidentally in the story appear Cap'n Crotty and Jabe of the "Ready Rangers" story, and "Shine Terrill" is, to a certain extent, a continuation of that tale.

*Nirdlinger, C: F: Masque and mummers; essays on the theatre of here and now. N. Y.. De Witt Publishing House, 1899. c. 10+370 p. 8°, cl., $1.50. [2050

Peterman, Alex. L. Elements of civil government: a text-book for use in public schools, high schools, and normal schools; and a manual of reference for teachers. Michigan ed. N. Y., American Book Co., [1899.] c. '91. 2-261 p. D. cl., 60 c. [2051

*Randolph, Jos. F. A treatise on the law of commercial paper, cont. a full statement of existing Am. and foreign statutes together with the text of the commercial codes of G. B., France, Ger., and Spain. 2d ed., with appendix. St. Paul, West Pub. Co., 1899. c. 3 v., 252+925; 28+926-2019; 16+2020-3048 p. O. shp., $18. [2052

Richter, H: Graphic shorthand: an adaptation of F. X. Gabelsberger's German stenography to the English language. Pt. 1, Corresponding style. N. Y., International News Co., 1899. 72 p. 16°, cl., $1. [2053

Some of the advantages of this system over American and English systems are these: the characters are taken from the ordinary current writing instead of being formed from geometrical strokes, and it is therefore easier to write; vowels are indicated in the consonantal outline, and not subsequently dotted in; besides, where a vowel occurs is invariably indicated.

Roberts, W: H:, D.D. Rules for judicatories and forms of records and certificates for church sessions. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., 1899. c. '97. 2+399-444 p. S. pap , 5 c. [2054

An extract from the author's "Manual for ruling elders."

*Rollins, Montgomery, comp. Laws regulating the investment of bank funds; a compilation of the laws of various states in the Union restricting the investment of funds of the banks, trust, safe deposit companies, etc., and so arranged and bound that changes in the same can be made from time to time without necessitating a new binding. Bost., Montgomery Rollins & Co., [1899.] c. S. im. mor., $2 50. [2055

Sheets paged for each state treated, and perforated in two places, and fastened together in a leather cover with paper fasteners.

Rook, Clarence. The Hooligan nights: being the life and opinions of a young and unrepentant criminal recounted by himself as set forth by Clarence Rook. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1899. c. 6+276 p. D. cl., $1.25. [2056

The real story of a London "tough" and thief, told by himself to Clarence Rook, a journalist. As a study of a type indigenous to Lambeth, and of a special dialect, the book is notable. "Young Alf," the leader of the "Hooligans," meets Rook night after night in different obscure parts of London, and tells his adventures and exploits, which do not at any time "point a moral."

Russell, W: Clark. Captain Jackman; or, a tale of two tunnels. N. Y., F. M. Buckles & Co., 1899. c. 4-240 p. D. cl., $1. [2057

Captain Jackman was commander of the East India merchantman Lovelace, until he stole £1500 of her money and lost the command. The story tells of his romantic meeting with Ada Conway, a retired naval officer's daughter, and the miraculous rescue of the pair in a cave called the Devil's Walk; of their later elopement, and of the tragedy of Bugsby Hole, a cave in Cornwall which is the last scene of an exciting sea tale.

Santayana, G: Lucifer: a theological tragedy. Chic., H. S. Stone & Co., 1899. 5+187 p. S. cl., $1.25. [2058

Founded upon the popular acceptation of the triumph of Christ over Lucifer, who is represented as a banished soul. The caste is composed of the risen Christ, Michael the Archangel, and Saint Peter, who are ranked with angels and saints; with the devils and witches are Lucifer, Mephistopholes, Azazel, Belial, Turel; the heathen deities and their attendants are represented by Zeus, Hermes, Ares, Hera, Athena, Aphrodite.

Scott, Sir Walter. The lady of the lake. N. Y., Cassell & Co., Ltd., 1899. 3-191 p. T. (Cassell's national lib., new ser., v. 6, no. 307.) pap., 10 c. [2059

Shinn, Roswell. A treatise on the American law of replevin, and kindred actions for getting possession of chattels; being a complete statement of the general principles of the common law of replevin, as modified by the state statutes and the construction and application of the same by courts of review. Chic., T. H. Flood & Co., 1899. c. 7+957 p. O. shp., $6. [2060

Sites, Clement Moore Lacey. Centralized administration of liquor laws in the American commonwealths. N. Y., published for Columbia University by The Macmillan Co., 1899. 4-162 p. O. (Columbia University studies in history, economics, and public law, v. 10, no. 3.) pap., $1. [2061

Smith, Jeremiah. Cases on selected topics in the law of persons. Cambridge, The Harvard Law Review Pub. Assoc., 1899. c. 13+718 p. O. cl., net, $3. [2062

Wetmore, Mrs. Helen Cody. Last of the great scouts: the life story of Col. William F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill,") as told by his sister. Duluth, Minn., Duluth Press Printing Co., 1899. c. 13+267 p. pors. 8°, cl., $1.25. [2067

Whistler, Ja. McNeill. Eden versus Whistler, the baronet and the butterfly: a valentine with a verdict. N. Y., R. H. Russell, 1899. 9+79 p. il. sq. D. cl., $1.25. [2068

The artist Whistler, well known in literary circles through his clever little work, "The gentle art of making enemies," is again his own hero. Commissioned by Sir William Eden to paint a portrait of his wife, he fell out with his patron on account of the amount of the check sent him (no regular contract having been made), and refused to surrender the portrait. The matter went into the French courts, a verdict being rendered. This is a satirical history of the affair, all the letters and documents in the case being given.

Wilder, Rob. P. Among India's students. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1899. 81 p. 16°, cl., 30 c. [2069

Worthington, Eliz. Strong. How to cook husbands. N. Y., The Dodge Publishing Co., 1899. c. 6-190 p. il. S. cl., $1; leath., $1.25. [2070

The story of the rather eventful courtship of a woman of thirty-four is supposed to be told by herself. The interest centres in her way of describing the difficult task of choosing a husband, and in an episode which led to a misunderstanding after she had made her selection; pending the reconciliation, the heroine brings the experiences of some married friends to bear upon the subject, and introduces her personal opinions about the management of a husband. By the author of the "Biddy club."

SPAIN'S CONSUMPTION OF BOOKS AND PAPER FROM 1896–1898.

ACCORDING to H. Harrison, Commercial Attaché to Her Britannic Majesty's Embassy at Madrid, native industries in Spain have not suffered as greatly as was feared they would do in spite of the wars and consequent general excitement and heavy taxation. This may be gathered from the following table showing the importation in the past three years of paper, books, maps, and pulp for paper. It is interesting to note in this connection that upwards of three-quarters of the pulp for the manufacture of paper in Spain is imported from Norway and Sweden, the balance is brought from Germany, Belgium, and Great Britain.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

JUNE 24, 1899.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers depend on the WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of "The American Catalogue" and so forms the basis of all trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF PUBLISHERS.

SUCCESSFUL, socially speaking, as were the first two international publishers' congresses—at Paris in 1896, and at Brussels in 1897—the third congress that held its sessions in London from June 7 to June 9, was, according to general report, the most satisfactory one thus far held. This is measured by the amount of work accomplished; socially it more than held its own with those that preceded it. Especially encouraging was the support given to this congress by the countries interested in its work, representatives being present from France, Germany, Italy, Austro-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Holland, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, the United States and Canada. The contingent furnished by England was, naturally, considerable.

In the various sections papers of great interest were read by men long familiar with the subjects discussed. Thus there were papers on the promotion of national bibliographies, on the protection of new ideas in form and get-up, on the exclusive right in titles, on the international protection of publishing rights—a matter of increasing importance—on agreements between authors and publishers, on the development of publishing in Canada and the Canadian copyright question, on the need for more complete protection of copyright in educational works, and on other matters more or less directly affecting the publishing trade. As will be gathered from the synopsis of the papers printed elsewhere in this issue, the members of the congress paid attention rather to practical matters than to theorizing; and this practical spirit, as the president of the congress, John Murray, well said, did more than the finest theorizing could do to assert the true position of publishers in the world of letters. This position, as Mr. Murray further pointed out, has at all times found recognition from the most distinguished writers, and is recognized to-day in spite of certain disparagements from authors who display a curious ignorance of the real work of publishers.

While the practical work of the congress was encouraging, the social features were no less satisfactory. The opportunity offered to establish good-fellowship between members of the same profession of different nationalities cannot fail to bring good results, and to make for profitable relations. According to the London Publishers' Circular, whose very full and enterprising report of the proceedings of the congress forms the basis of the briefer report given by us in this issue, "from first to last the proceedings were marked by the utmost harmony, and the fact that they concluded without hitch is no small compliment to the members of the organizing committee. Another and a long step has been taken in the consummation of those international relations between publishers which modern conditions render so essential.

TENNESSEE TEXT-BOOK LAW AGAIN.

THE paragraph on this subject which we published in our issue for June 10, for which our authority was an Associated Press despatch, we find did not accurately state the facts. The American Book Company has not at any time been in a "fight" with the Governor of Tennessee, nor did the Governor cause the Legislature "to pass a law excluding the publications of the American Book Company from all the public schools in the State."

The facts, as we learn them from a better authority, are these: Tennessee, at its late session of the Legislature, passed a law providing for State uniformity of text-books, the books to be selected by a State Commission. No books were excluded from competition, and no publishers were excluded from bidding. The American Book Company is free to compete with all other publishers for the adoption. The American Book Company has had no controversy with the Governor of the State nor with the Legislature. Upon the motion of the School Boards in the leading cities of Tennessee—Nashville, Memphis, Knoxville, and Chattanooga—the city attorneys have rendered opinions that these cities do not come under the provisions of the new law. With this the American Book Company has had nothing whatever to do, and has never at any time proposed "to test the law in the courts," but on the contrary its books will be bid for the approaching State adoption.

THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF PUBLISHERS.

THE work commenced by the Congress of Publishers at Paris in 1896, and continued at its second session in Brussels in 1897, was resumed on Wednesday, June 7, when the Third Congress was called to order at Stationers' Hall, London. Delegates were present from America, Austro-Hungary, Belgium, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Norway, Japan, New Zealand, Russia, Sweden, and Switzerland. The American delegation was appointed by the American Publishers' Copyright League, New York, and consisted of W. W. Appleton, R. R. Bowker, F. H. Dodd, J. H. Harper, and G. H. Putnam. There were present besides, D. C. Heath, Henry B. Barnes, C. F. Chichester, of the Century Co., Dr. William Sheldon, representative in England of D. Appleton & Co., and Herbert S. Stone.

In his opening address, John Murray, president of The Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland, and presiding officer of the Congress, touched upon the two preceding conferences, and upon those things which the present one might hope to accomplish and those other things which lay beyond its power; saying in this connection: "If we had this power, [to legislate,] there is one object above all others to the attainment of which we should apply it. I mean to drawing within the fellowship of the Berne Convention those nations which still hold aloof. If, for example, we could do anything to persuade our good friends and cousins in the United States, who every year are taking a more prominent part, both as readers and writers, in the world of letters, to adhere to the Convention, we should by this act alone have earned a high place among the successful congresses of history. I feel sure that in making this statement I shall have the sympathy and the assent of those American representatives whom we are happy to see among us to-day, and of that large body of enlightened and educated men whom they represent. They are as anxious as we are to see America take her proper place in this respect, but we know that they have to overcome a vast and powerful opposition—not fully instructed in all the arguments of the case, and trained from infancy in a school of Protection which is adverse to such changes.

"The past year, however, has seen such development in the international position of the United States, and in the views held by Americans on international subjects, that we need not despair of its extension to literary matters, and I am sure you will join with me in expressing a hope—a respectful and ardent hope—that some of us may live to see all nations possessing any literature included in the bond of the Berne Convention."

The various purposes which it was hoped the Congress might promote, but which it could hardly expect to accomplish, were touched upon. Among them were the formation of a clear and scientific system of international bibliography—sorely needed by all students; the investigation of the best and newest methods of producing and illustrating books; the increasing of the facilities for distributing and circulating books—not only in each individual kingdom but in foreign countries; the steady improvement of the relations between authors and publishers, which, to quote Mr. Murray's words, "history has proved to be an eminently satisfactory and honorable relationship in the past, in spite of a few exceptions, and of the strenuous but unsuccessful efforts of a few misguided persons to embitter it;" and especially the question of copyright in America and Canada—"one of the greatest importance just now to all English-speaking peoples." But all these diverse purposes did not, Mr. Murray thought, define the two principal results and aims of these congresses. "First, that we may come to know one another personally—that we may speak face to face—and establish a true international friendship and camaraderie, so that if trade difficulties arise in any country the representatives of the publishers may apply to their confrères in other lands and receive the benefit of their counsel and their experience. And secondly, that we may assert to the world at large the true position which we hold in the world of letters."

Of educational books, Mr. Murray said: "There is a curious confusion in some minds between what is low-priced and what is cheap. The two terms are by no means synonymous; a guinea book may be far cheaper in certain circumstances than a sixpenny one. I cannot take a better example of the difference than certain classes of school-books 'made to sell'—designed to meet an enormous popular demand, which the Education Acts have created. In some cases these books, written by unskilled hands—badly printed on bad paper, and illustrated with the commonest of cuts—are low in price, but, economically speaking, a terribly dear purchase. Too often the economy in cost is more than balanced by loss of eyesight, or by mental bewilderment on the part of the poor children who use them.

"It is right and proper that standard works should be provided at as low a price as is compatible with reasonably good production, and within the means of those for whom they are intended; but there are whole departments of literature to which the lowest prices are not applicable, as the public to which they appeal have no right to ask for their intellectual recreation and instruction at the price of 6*d.* or 1*s.*"

In conclusion, the part taken by publishers in the development and improvement of literature was referred to. "Publishers," said Mr. Murray, "are a modest race; but, perhaps, some of you some day will tell the world how much toil and anxiety is involved in the production, the adornment, and the circulation of a book, how much vigilance is required to watch and protect the rights of literary property. I may mention, en passant, that the Publishers' Association has been compelled to appoint fully authorized agents in every leading colony and dependency throughout the British Empire to watch over the interests of literary property, and protect it from piracy and infringement. Last, but not least, it may some day be told how much many books have owed, not only in outward appearance but also in intrinsic worth, to the advice and experience of men of our craft."

Mr. Murray's address was followed by the report of the Brussels Conference by its secretary, Ernest Vandeveld.

Wednesday evening a banquet was given the delegates and others attending the Congress by the Stationers' Company. The speakers, in the order of their toasts, were the Right Hon. J. Bryce, who responded to the toast, "The Third International Congress of Publishers;" René Fouret, President of the Cercle de la Librairie; Carl Engelhorn, President of the Börsenverein; W. Rider, the Master of the Stationers' Company; G. H. Putnam, M. Brunetière, the Right Hon. W. E. H. Lecky, John Murray, M. Bruylant, Albert Brockhaus, Sir E. M. Thompson, and Sir Courtenay Boyle.

"Literature" was proposed by G. H. Putnam, who said it was a great honor that had been accorded him in not only being able to appear there that night with the greetings of the associated publishers and literary workers of the United States—a clime which not so many centuries ago was supposed to be altogether outside the pale of literature—but to be further honored with the responsibility of bringing forward this subject for the consideration of such an assembly. He would only remind himself and them that it might be considered particularly the work of the publisher to introduce literature. The task of considering literature he should certainly leave to the authorities whose names he had to couple with the toast. He had thought at times the task of a publisher might be compared to that of a manager of a menagerie. He was supposed to present lions from time to time to the public—lions that were not quite so big, but might roar as loud. Now and then the menagerie had its difficulties. Going backwards from the king of beasts, they were not certain that their swans would remain swans. Authors might occasionally remind them that literature existed without publishers—long before publishers. That was true. Authors and great authors came into the world and did their work, and went out of the world long before they had reached what he might be allowed to call the higher stage of creation when the publisher was developed. But he would remind their literary friends that it was only when the publisher appeared upon the scene that they knew anything about literature in the shape of profit. It was only then that the writers, who before had to content themselves with prestige, began to be able to speak about profit, and, in a word, of publishers. In a meeting composed largely of publishers, it was an honor to remember how much the literary man of past ages was indebted to the publishers in making literature a property.

M. Brunetière thought that authors did not realize their indebtedness to publishers—"until, as has recently been the case in France, they ventured upon publishing for themselves. As a matter of fact, the publisher was always indispensable, and, if the expression may be used, is doubly so to-day, when the competition is so keen."

On Thursday the Congress split into three sections. Section A took up the consideration of technical matters, which was opened by Wilhelm Müller in a paper on "The promotion of national bibliographies as the most suitable foundation for the solution of the bibliographic question." He urged the various national book-trade bibliographies now existing should be produced in a uniform style not only in internal methods but in outward form, and submitted a series of resolutions, stating as the sense of the conference:

"(1) That it is desirable that periodical national bibliographies should be published in every country. (2) That these bibliographies should be published in a uniform manner; that care should be taken to reproduce the exact sense of the title-page in each heading; that it must contain no abbreviations or references; and that it must have a classifying sign to indicate the contents and aim of the work. (3) That the separate headings should be so arranged that they may be easily utilized as a reference catalogue by detaching the headings in the bibliography."

In the discussion which followed, Messrs Hoffman, Le Soudier, Murray, and Edward Bell participated. R. R. Bowker, of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, said that international bibliography had advanced a step—a very considerable step—through the arrangement made possible by their friend Mr. Marston on the English side, and he thought that with 1900 they would begin a new system of international bibliography in America, altering somewhat the present plans of the "American catalogue." It was rather a happy circumstance that that Congress should suggest certain uniformities in methods that would enable them to bring together more than before those several bibliographies. In America they had now their annual catalogue, and the suggestion of Sampson Low, Marston & Co. was that they should combine in one volume both the English and American bibliographies, so that the American bookseller would have before him an Anglo-American bibliography. He suggested, however, that to introduce the question of classification at once would mean the postponement of the realization of a very desirable system. In America librarians had given very great attention to the publication of classified catalogues, and it had been found to be impossible to obtain any one system for general use. Classification by the decimal system was most in vogue, but it was not universal, and they found their efforts to bring about uniformity in the methods of recording titles met with greater progress than if they attempted to deal with the question of classification. In THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, the American trade publication which corresponded to the Publishers' Circular in England, they would probably in 1900 use the Linotype machine, which, as was generally known, formed the type for each title in one block. They would then, at the end of the year, he thought, use those same blocks for their annual publication, and probably keep the same material for five years for a publication at a lapse of that period which would form a permanent English catalogue of the character suggested by Sampson Low, Marston & Co. It had been suggested in America that they should take a step forward by binding with the American and English bibliographies those of France and Germany. This proposal was now under consideration, although the demand of the American trade for those foreign bibliographies was not great enough to justify their addition. He might add a word as to the designation of sizes of books. All of them might not know that the American Library Association had adopted a decimal system of notation of size very much in line with the proposals brought before the Brussels Congress. They had in America three methods of size notation corresponding to different degrees of exactness—the actual sizes in centimetres where the actual description was desired, provision by a letter where the size was designated in an impracticable form, and the old-fashioned way of giving numericals for the old public designation, which was arranged from the folding of the sheets.

As a result of the discussion the resolutions submitted by Wilhelm Müller were adopted with a slight modification of the second clause in the specification that the classifying sign provided for should be "adopted later on."

The law in France regarding "The protection of new ideas in form and get-up" was then set forth by Joseph Bourdel, of Paris, and its ineffectual operation shown. The following resolution was proposed by him and adopted:

"As a consequence of the decisions of the Brussels Congress, the London Congress votes that the principle of material property in innovations with regard to form or model which are exemplified by a publication should be formally recognized by the legislatures of the different countries."

Edward Bell read a paper, entitled "On exclusive right in titles," and moved the following resolution:

"That some method should be adopted for the registration of all distinctive titles, carrying with it the exclusive right of use during the term of copyright."

Titles Mr. Bell divided into two distinct classes, those which simply describe the contents of the book, and others which aim at some originality or singularity, and, so far from describing the contents, often seem intended to excite curiosity as to what they may be. An immense amount of invention and ingenuity is expended upon titles of this kind, and publishers rightly attach considerable importance to them. Such imperfect protection as titles now receive is afforded not by the laws of copyright, but those which deal with fraudulent representation. If a publisher, B, issues a book under the same name as one previously published by A, and it is shown that he does so with intent to deceive the public, and to sell a spurious production instead of the genuine one, A can claim and obtain damages. But if B has published his book innocently, A has no claim upon him and cannot oblige him to change his title.

After considerable discussion the resolution was carried unanimously.

The next paper was by M. Lucien Layus, of Paris, "On the alienation of works of art and the right of reproduction and the property of drawings ordered for illustration work." It considered the law of several countries on this point, and contained two resolutions, the first as follows:

"The Congress of Publishers express the wish that all the countries of the Union should agree to recognize that the alienation of a work of art should not by itself carry with it the transfer of the right of reproduction."

This resolution was passed with a few dissentients.

The second resolution of M. Layus stood originally as follows:

"The Congress is of opinion that a drawing ordered by a publisher from an artist for the illustration of a publication should remain the property of the publisher."

After a general discussion, in which the president and the vice-president took part, Edward Bell proposed the addition at the end of the resolution of the words "unless otherwise stipulated," and with this addition the resolution was carried unanimously.

S. S. Pawling, of London, read a paper embodying the resolution "That it is advisable that some uniform custom be adopted with regard to overs on printing, to provide for the inevitable loss (through disappearance and soiling of copies) that must fall upon the publisher under a royalty agreement by the handling of large quantities of books." This was carried, with the omission of the word "uniform."

A. D. Innes read the last paper of that meeting, on the subject of cheap literature, and a vote of thanks was extended to him.

Section B held sessions on both Thursday and Friday, devoted to questions concerning literary and artistic properties. In the discussion which followed the first paper, by Tito Ricordi and P. Vallardi "On the international protection of publishing rights," Mr. Putnam put before the Congress with clearness and at considerable length the obstacles in the way of an immediate and thoroughly satisfactory amelioration of copyright conditions in the United States. Quite frankly he admitted, in matters of national policy, the Typographical Union had greater influence than that enjoyed by authors and American publishers. He might say that the present law, as to the type-setting of American books, was passed, not at the instance of the publishers, but to prevent the opposition of the Typographical Union—an opposition that was strong enough to prevent the sanctioning of any international copyright law whatever. It was believed by those interested in bringing their country into the same kind of literary relations with the other great literature producing countries of the world, that it would be wiser to secure as they did in 1891, an enactment of an imperfect law rather than to put up with what would have been an indefinite period of the delay of any law whatever. Those who did not believe in the protective system were of opinion whatever the outcry was it was exaggerated, and their advice to the legislature would take the shape of a wider and more liberal policy. Something of the kind had been done towards the removal of the large grounds of complaint on the part of the authors of Continental countries. While for the authors of England the restrictions were an inconvenience, for the authors of France, Germany, and Italy they were an absolute injustice. For the English authors there was a difficulty in securing a publishing agreement sufficiently long in advance to enable the type-setting provision and the simultaneous publication provision both to be carried out safely. But still, to the English authors, it had only been an inconvenience, and it was an inconvenience decreasing in its importance. With their friends on the Continent the case was different. It was not practicable, except in a very few cases, to secure consideration of a French, or German, or Italian book far enough in advance to enable the author's American publication arrangements to be arrived at; and often, although the American publisher found himself encouraged to submit a proposition for the American edition of a Continental work, he was then confronted with the very difficult requirement of having to have the book put into type in the language of origin in order to secure for it the full protection, because, unfortunately, as the law was worded, the copyright of American translations protects only that particular translation in case the work had been published abroad in its origina.

language prior to the publication of translation in the United States.

Several suggestions and proposals had been made on the part of those interested in a wider copyright protection, who had fully appreciated the difficulty on the part of Continental authors, for the lessening at least of the difficulty. He was able to report, on behalf of the Publishers' Association, that a resolution was adopted not many months back expressing the approval of that association of any such modification of the existing law as might obviate the difficulty to some extent in that way. Without getting rid of the typesetting provision, and without getting rid of the necessity for the publication of the American edition in the United States not later than the date of the publication of the book in English outside of the United States, it was recommended that a sufficient time should be given after publication of the work in the original for the preparation of a translation. What the time should be was a matter of detail. Assuming that there was to be a term of six months or twelve months, a further suggestion was not later than the date of publication in the country of origin, two copies of the book in the original language printed entirely in the country of origin should be deposited at Washington, in order to identify the undertaking for which they expected later to secure copyright. That would not in itself secure copyright, but it would be a preliminary step, and if within the time authorized a translation should be printed from type set within the limits of the United States the entire work should be protected, and no unauthorized translation should thereafter be permitted, but for the convenience of those who preferred to read the book in the language of origin—for the convenience of their German citizens, for instance—importation in the original language should still be permitted, while the control of the American translation should be limited to the publisher acting for the translation. He hoped that at the next Congress they might be able to report that some such modification had been made.

"Agreements between authors and publishers" were then touched upon by M. Leclerc, who gave in full the articles of agreement arrived at in France in 1898; by Mr. Murray, who reported failure and distrust in England; and by Mr. Putnam, who claimed that in America authors and publishers worked together in substantially harmonious agreement.

The burning question of Canadian copyright was next discussed by F. R. Daldy, of London, historically and in relation to the grievances of all concerned. Professor Mavor, representing the Canadian authors, was then called upon by the chairman. He said there was a difference between the law officers of the Crown and the Canadian law officers with respect to the right of Canada to legislate for copyright in Canada, and there was no doubt that publishers on both sides held extreme views. When his society turned their attention to it they considered whether some middle path might not be arrived at which would satisfy reasonable people on both sides of the water. They laid down four principles to guide them. They thought it useless, considering the present population of Canada, to propose a manufacture clause and therefore set that aside. In the second place, they thought the system of licensing was far too complicated to be worked out satisfactorily. Thirdly, they thought it would be a great pity for Canada to do anything to lead to the withdrawal of the Berne Convention, and fourthly, they thought it would be a great pity to disturb the existing relations as regarded copyright between England and the United States. They went to some of the publishers, and asked them to point out where the shoe pinched, and it appeared that the publishers had a reasonable grievance. They said that, when they bought what they supposed to be Canadian rights, sometimes before they could get their books on the bookshelves English editions were in the market side by side with the Canadian editions. There was no suggestion that the English publishers acted otherwise than in perfect good faith, but wholesale dealers were in the habit of purchasing large numbers of books, and sending some to the Cape and Australia and some to Canada. It appeared that something could be done in connection with that, by explaining it to the English publishers, and asking them to assist in passing legislation to carry it into effect. If the clause was carried in England, the Canadian Government would pass an act to enforce it there.

These statements met with favor from the section, which adjourned after listening to the Canadian publisher's point of view as presented in a paper by Mr. Morang, of Toronto.

The Friday session was opened by D. C. Heath, of Boston, with a paper on "The need for more complete protection of copyright in educational works." The question seemed to him to need attention rather for a preliminary discussion at this session of the Congress, and preparatory to a paper on the subject at the next session, than for any contemplated immediate settlement.

As a start he made the suggestion that the Government be asked to require the publisher of any new educational book to file at the Stationers' Hall or Bureau of Copyright, by whatever name called, or, perhaps better, with the Bureau of Education, detailed specifications showing on what plan a given book has been made or is to be made. Whenever another book on the same subject should be projected or published, specifications for it should be carefully compared with its predecessors of the same type, and the publisher of the proposed book informed in due time, supposing he is likely to infringe upon someone else's right. Having been furnished with the specifications of the book which he is likely to imitate too closely, if he still persists in issuing his book the first publisher would have a much better case against him in a court of equity than is now possible. The specifications should be filed in the Educational Department rather than in a Copyright Department of the Government, for the double reason that the Educational Department would more readily discover the similarity of the books, and because it would already have—at least, this is the case with us—the necessary machinery for the work.

Mr. Bell said what they wanted was protection for that not covered by the copyright laws. There were many cases in which the contents of a book were not covered by the copyright laws. What publishers wanted was some means of protecting ideas not covered by the ordinary copyright—that fell under the category of the form and get-up of books.

Arthur Waugh followed with a paper on "The length of quotations in reviews," deprecating the making of too long extracts from books reviewed, which provoked considerable discussion.

No more papers were read before Section B. The resolutions agreed to at its two sittings, as a result of papers and discussions, were:

"That the Congress of Publishers desire to refer to an International Convention the task of studying all the customary regulations in each country between authors and publishers, and presenting a copy with a systematic summary of them to the next Congress."

"That it is eminently desirable, in the interests of the English owners of copyright and for the maintenance of the Convention of Berne, that some satisfactory arrangement should be entered into with Canada with regard to copyright matters. On these grounds the Congress desires to give its cordial support to the proposition brought forward by Professor Mavor."

"That the Programme Committee of the next Congress be asked to provide a paper by some one of our leading school-book publishers on 'the need for more complete protection of original ideas in educational works.'"

Section C, for the consideration of legal and administrative questions, was presided over by J. Bielefeld, of Karlsruhe.

After some discussion on the "Report on the resolution of the last Congress on the localization of copyright," presented by W. Heinemann, Otto Mühlbrecht, of Berlin, read a paper on "Participation in the Convention of Berne." The United States, Russia, Holland, Sweden, and Denmark were mentioned as specially affecting the interests of publishers, and resolutions were submitted, which, after some discussion, were adopted as follows:

"(1) A memorial to be drawn up in the French language, containing the statements of your referrer and the preliminary negotiations and resolutions of the Congress, such memorial to be signed by all the corporations sending delegates to the Third Congress, one hundred copies of which memorial are to be printed."

"(2) A printed copy of the memorial to be sent to the office of the Convention of Berne for publication in the official organ of the same, the Droit d'Auteur. Copies also to be sent to the Governments belonging to the Convention of Berne, and also to those Governments whose participation in the Convention of Berne is desirable, politely requesting such Governments to give the subject serious consideration The remaining copies to be sent to prominent individuals, with the request that they will use their efforts and influence to promote the aim in view in their respective spheres of activity."

"(3) The Cercle de la Librairie de Paris to be requested to take in hand the execution of the statements herewith to be submitted."

The discussion regarding this paper was chiefly on conditions in Holland and America. Frederick Macmillan, of Macmillan & Co., London, agreed with Mr. Putnam that the difficulty was with the American printers, who were a very strong body, and were under the impression that if free copyright were given—that was to say, if the United States joined the Berne Convention—it would injure them, inasmuch as the English publishers would attempt to send over printed copies of their books for sale in America. Of course a great many English books went out to America now; but when a book was going to have a large sale in the United States—the kind of sale for which a copyright was of real importance—it was printed there, and would be, whatever might be the condition of the law. The sort of book necessary, the proper size of it, the difficulty of working at such a distance, was so great, that little temptation would be offered to the English publisher to send over printed sheets. Of course, with small editions, it would continue to be done, as was the case at present, the only difference being that the works sold would be copyright, instead of the copyright being lost. Under certain circumstances a copyright might be really valuable, though no American publisher would take the risk of bringing out an American edition of a new book; and so, if the book happened to make a great success, the copyright would be lost under present conditions. It did not often happen, but it did happen, and it was most desirable that America should join, in order to do away with this system. The American Typographical Union, who were at the back of the opposition, were entirely mistaken in thinking the change would have any injurious effect upon the printing business.

The "Formation of a professional school of booksellers" was next presented in a report by F. Baranger, of Paris, who submitted a motion outlining and authorizing such a school. Ernest Vandeveld, of Brussels, said that a school of this kind had existed in Brussels, and that none of the booksellers' clerks would attend it. The majority of them thought they knew their business perfectly well, and did not require further instruction. A. Nutt, of David Nutt, London, thought that a professional school would be useless where it was not objectionable. The book trade was not a purely technical trade, and it would be a great mistake to have an academic system of education. It would be very much better to raise the status of the book trade, so as to attract men who had received a good general education.

M. Baranger withdrew the motion, on the understanding that the decision of the Brussels Congress should be endorsed.

Frederick Macmillan's paper on the bookseller, the book agent, and the instalment-man, entitled "The effect of various methods of distribution on the general sale of books," drew forth a discussion of the German system of book distribution which was thought to be a model one, worthy of imitation.

A paper "On the presentation of books to national libraries," by Edward Marston, reviewed the demands made upon publishers in this direction in the leading countries, and considered this compulsory presentation an unfair burden upon English publishers. Replies received to a circular sent out by Mr. Marston, in which he asked "How many copies of every such new work must be deposited for registration or given to the national or other libraries?" show that in Belgium and Bulgaria no free copies are required; in Norway only one; while Denmark, France, Greece, Holland, and Portugal demand two, as does the United States; Italy, Roumania, and Spain, three; Austria, Servia, and Sweden, four; England, five; and Russia, five, six, or seven, according to the subject of the book and the size of the edition. In the majority of the German states, and in all but one of the Swiss cantons, no free copies of books need be delivered. Forcible expressions of opinion were given by members of the Congress, the English publishers especially feeling that they were heavily and unjustly taxed.

Mr. Murray felt certain that the English Government would do nothing in the matter.

The following resolution was passed:

"That this section of the Third International Congress of Publishers having heard the evidence submitted by Mr. Marston is of opinion that this question of acquire-ment of copyright should be separated from that of a depôt legale."

Considerable interest was manifested in the best means for maintaining the sale of books at the published price. E. Lyon-Claesen, of Paris, in a paper on the subject, thought that all publishers agreed in recognizing the importance of maintaining prices, nevertheless the cases of works recently published and offered at reduced prices by the retailers are numerous. The discount allowed by publishers to booksellers and other retailers is constantly taken advantage of in extra allowances to customers. In the interest of publishers it is necessary to restrain this abuse as much as possible, and if international measures were taken for maintaining the full published prices the movement would be very opportune and useful; and surely an understanding on these lines could easily be realized. As to the means to be employed for preventing or at least restraining the sale under published price of new works the methods are numerous, although sometimes rather difficult in application. The strongest and most efficacious is incontestably the total suppression of discounts to booksellers who do not respect the actual published prices, at least during a reasonable period from the issue of a book. Such a measure was taken by the "Cercle Belge de la Librairie" on account of the foundation of a co-operative society whose aim was the sale of books considerably under the published price. These measures were crowned with success, and this co-operative society was forced out of existence.

"We do not mean," continued Mr. Lyon-Claesen, "to interfere with commercial liberty; but the price fixed by the publisher is a part of the book which is quite a special product, and the sale of which cannot possibly follow the same rules as ordinary manufactured articles. It is a mistake to believe, as it is superficially argued, that a buyer has the absolute right to sell at a price fixed by himself. In the case of a book there exists a tacit convention concerning the price to be obtained from the public. The retailer benefits, moreover, from the discount or allowance already made by the publisher, and not from any artificial increase in price made by the retailer on his purchase price, as may be the case with other wares having no fixed and official price."

Mr. Macmillan expressed himself as strongly in favor of net books; and a resolution was adopted providing:

"That the Congress desires to see an International League founded between publishers and booksellers for maintaining the full published prices, and pledges itself to support any measure tending to keep up the published prices of recently published works. The Congress suggests that the different associations of publishers be invited to carefully consider the question in view of the next session of the Congress."

At the Friday sitting K. J. Trübner, of Strassburg, presided. It being necessary to curtail the programme, Mr. Heinemann offered to withdraw his paper, and it was reserved for the next Congress. I. Bielefeld, of Karlsruhe, then explained the management of the Deutscher Verlegerverein, its inquiry office, the proceeding by dunning letter, the collection on joint account, and its solvency list; and G. H. Putnam spoke of the work done along similar lines in New York by the Stationers' Board of Trade, which included publishers and booksellers. Mr. Bielefeld submitted a resolution, which was adopted, substantially as follows:

"(1) The Congress deems it advisable to have solvency lists with the names of all retail booksellers drawn up in all countries where the book trade is sufficiently organized. These lists are to be in the style of those published by the German Publishers' Association, but, of course, particularly adapted to the wants and requirements of each country."

"(2) Provided that the formalities of law in each country be not violated, one copy of these lists shall be exchanged between the publishers' associations in the various countries, in order to enable their presidents or managers to give their members all required information about foreign booksellers."

"(3) As long as this exchange of lists cannot be carried into effect, the presidents or managers of existing publishers' associations be requested to answer, or to have answered by a member, all inquiries about booksellers in their country, provided that such inquiries be made on the part of inquiry offices and on one of the conventional forms set by the association."

The last paper read was a protest against "Discount to private customers abroad," written by P. Vallardi, of Turin, and it elicited the following resolution:

"That this Congress, convinced of the grave results which threaten the international book trade if the practice is allowed to spread of giving discounts to private customers, discounts which in some cases are equal to those which booksellers are entitled to, pass a resolution to the effect that the publishers and booksellers, whether syndicates, associations, or individual traders, shall be urged to do their utmost to nip in the bud this practice, which would inevitably become a serious danger to our international commerce in books."

A vote of thanks was given to Herr Bielefeld as President of the Section.

The concluding meeting of the Congress was held on Friday afternoon, under the chairmanship of John Murray.

After some discussion the Chairman read the following resolutions, viz.:

"That a bureau be created by each Congress to carry out the resolutions of the present and previous sessions, under the authority of its organizing committee."

"That this bureau should remain in activity until the meeting of the next Congress, when the organizing committee of the Congress should have to receive the papers and documents of the bureau, and be responsible, on its part, for the erection and proper organization of a new permanent bureau for the next two years."

"That the maintenance of this bureau should be effected by pro rata contributions from each national association."

"The Congress accepts the principle of the motion and resolves that a commission be appointed ad hoc to carry out the details of the proposed scheme. Also that the nomination of such commission be left to the organizing committee of the present Congress, who shall report to the different bodies."

The resolution was carried.

The Chairman said their friends from Germany had invited them to hold the next Congress in that country, and they would all combine with them in offering their cordial thanks. They had met in Paris and Brussels and London, and it seemed to be the natural course of things that they should next meet in Germany.

After some discussion it was agreed that the next Congress should be held in two years' time.

A. Brockhaus, on behalf of the German delegates, offered the Congress a cordial welcome to his country.

In the evening a reception was held by the members of the Publishers' Association at the Guildhall, and on Saturday a party of about eighty visited the Royal Library and Castle at Windsor.

KIPLING SUES ELBERT G. HUBBARD.

THERE was filed in the United States Circuit Court at Utica, N. Y., on the 15th inst., the complaint in a suit brought by Rudyard Kipling and his publishers, D. Appleton & Co., against Elbert G. Hubbard, of East Aurora, Erie County. The complaint recites that Kipling is an English subject; that he is an author, carrying on the business of writing books, comprising tales, sketches, ballads, verse, and other literary compositions, and that he has been fifteen years in such business, schooling himself in the requirements of his said business and in acquiring and developing a style of composition peculiar to himself.

In or about 1892, the complaint goes on to recite, Kipling collected a number of his verses and ballads, corrected and revised them, adding thereto a number of new verses and ballads, and published the collection under the name "Ballads and Barrack Room Ballads," Macmillan & Co. doing the publishing. Macmillan & Co. duly copyrighted the book.

In 1893 Kipling again revised "Ballads and Barrack Room Ballads" and added other verses, and on March 29 last The Macmillan Co. sold and delivered to Kipling all of the plates, stock, etc., of the above-mentioned work. The complaint alleges that Elbert G. Hubbard, the defendant, who is a printer, and manager of the Roycroft Press, published Kipling's "Ballads and Barrack Room Ballads," "The Seven Seas," "The Last Chanty," "The Dipsy Chanty and Other Selected Poems," despite the copyright on the work, now held by D. Appleton & Co.

Kipling, through his counsel, asks for a writ of subpœna ad respondum. The trial of the action will occur in Utica within a short time.

The suits which Kipling has already brought against American publishers are but the beginning of an attempt on his part to suppress as far as possible the wholesale piracy to which his writings and rights are subjected. His attorney, therefore, has entered into an attempt to suppress the abuse, first bv persuasion, next, if the apparently offending publishers will not be persuaded, by recourse to law. It is conceded by those into whose hands Kipling's interest in this respect has been placed that there may be a large number of suits brought in all parts of the country. Many of the persons addressed have agreed to discontinue their alleged infringements without the compulsion of the laws, suits against others are pending, correspondence with others is in progress, and some have as yet received no attention.

BRANCH OF THE DUTCH ALLIANCE.

THE American Branch of the General Dutch Alliance was organized on the 14th inst. in New York City, in the office of Augustus Van Wyck, who was elected President. Other officers are: First Secretary, the Rev. Dr. Geerhardus Vos of Princeton, and Second Secretary, Cornelius W. Vander Hoogt of Maryland.

The object of the society is the cultivation of fraternal feeling between the United States and the Netherlands. It will also study the Dutch language and literature, history and old Dutch law. Under the care of the society clubs with these subjects as themes of study will be organized. Columbia has signified her willingness to co-operate by the appointment of a professor of the Dutch language and literature.

Last fall the New York members of the Holland Society entertained Dr. Abraham Kuyper, a member of the Dutch Parliament and a professor in the University of Amsterdam. At a dinner given in his honor at the Metropolitan Club by Warner Van Norden, at which members of the Holland Society were present, Dr. Kuyper proposed that an American branch of the General Dutch Alliance, a belles-lettres institution of Holland, be formed. The suggestion was adopted.

COMMUNICATIONS.

PROTEST FROM A BOOKSELLER AGAINST DISCRIMINATING PRICES.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 19, 1899.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: Does it not look as if some of the oldest and largest publishing houses were determined to drive the regular bookseller out of business, when such prices as the following are quoted on a popular line of books?

1000 volumes, 17 cents each. 250 volumes, 25 cents each.
500 " 22 " " 100 " 27 " "
Less than 100 volumes, 28 cents each.

Is there any other business in existence where there is such a difference in price on account of quantity? At 17 cents each there would be a good profit to the manufacturer; the charge of 25 or 27 cents is simply an extortion. And how it plays into the hands of the department stores! What can the poor bookseller do with such books if he pays 25 or 27 cents each, when others have bought them for 17 cents? The probability is that this line will be advertised at 19 or 21 cents each at retail. What do the publishers mean?

BOOKSELLER.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

J. SAWTELLE FORD has purchased from J. Fred Waggoner the Western Stationer, and incorporated it with his journal, which is now entitled The Stationer and Printer and the Western Stationer. The Stationer and Printer, from the start—nearly twenty years ago—has always been an enterprising and a helpful up-to-date guide to the Western stationers and printers. The absorption of one of its competitors will no doubt strengthen the survivor, and so benefit the wider circle of its readers.

THE firm of E. L. Kellogg & Co., New York and Chicago, celebrates its twenty-fifth anniversary this summer. The business of the firm in all its departments has in these years been devoted to the purpose of advancing the cause of education, and friends of the schools everywhere will be glad to extend to them hearty wishes for a future of growing prosperity. Aside from the weekly School Journal, with whose publication the firm began, there are now regularly issued by them six other periodicals. The silver anniversary is to be commemorated by the issuing of an illustrated number dated June 24. Aside from a retrospective sketch of the firm's educational work, there will be articles on the progress of the schools and the teaching profession in the last quarter of a century, and several other notable contributions.

THE fifty-seventh bound volume of The Century, for the six months ending with April, is particularly strong in the amount of authentic material it contains relating to the engagements on land and sea during the Spanish-American war. The names of Sampson, Shafter, Sigsbee, Hobson, Greene, and others, certainly are a guarantee of first-hand accounts of the chief events of the West Indian and Philippine campaigns. Besides this war material, we have Professor Wheeler's notable series of historical studies of which Alexander the Great is the theme. James Bryce, writing on England's colonial experiments, presents the observations of one who is not only a student of the art of government, but also an experienced parliamentarian, cabinet officer, and traveller. Equally "expert," in their several ways, and of equal popular interest, are Walter Wellman's account of the beginning of his expedition "On the Way to the North Pole;" Paul L. Ford's "Many-Sided Franklin," with a chapter on each of several of the "many sides" of a character and career without parallel in American history; John C. Van Dyke's "Old English Masters," accompanying Cole's engravings; and Charles Henry Hart on "Gilbert Stuart's Portraits of Women," with engravings by Henry Wolf. Lewis Carroll's unpublished letters to little girls, Mark Twain's "From the London Times of 1904," "Absolute Zero" (an illustrated description of the possibilities of liquid air), Noah Brooks's entertaining reminiscences of Mark Twain and Henry George in California, "The Carlyles in Scotland," Tissot's "Christmas at Bethlehem," and short stories by Jacob Riis, Ruth McEnerv Stuart and Mary Hallock Foote, are a few other of the many attractions of this volume. Among the serials are Mr. Crawford's "Via Crucis" and Mr. Stockton's fantastic tale "The Vizier of the Two-horned Alexander;" and among the innumerable illustrations—several of them printed in tint—the first in order is Miss Beaux's frontispiece portrait of Dr. Weir Mitchell.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ATHENS, GA.—D. W. McGregor, bookseller and stationer, who a short time ago assigned his business to C. D. Flanigan, is again in business for himself at the old stand, having succeeded in making satisfactory arrangements with his creditors.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The William J. C. Dulany Company, of 8 Baltimore Street, has been chosen printer to the city of Baltimore.

BEVERLEY, MASS.—The Beverley News Company have moved into their new store, where, besides stationery and news, they will carry a large line of paper-covered books.

BOSTON, MASS.—William Lee and his former associate, Charles I. Shepard, have formed a partnership and occupy quarters in the Tremont Building. They will make genealogical researches and perhaps will publish matter in this line.

CARROLLTON, MO.—W. H. Chapman, bookseller, has made an assignment.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.—The Eastern Book Concern has been incorporated to print books, papers, periodicals, etc. Capital, $50,000. James D. Potts, Bel'e L. Potts, and August R. Keller are the incorporators.

NEW YORK CITY.—The sheriff has received four attachments, aggregating $24,508, against the Henry T. Thomas Company, publishers. The attachments were obtained on the ground that it is a foreign corporation, organized under West Virginia laws four years ago. The sheriff took charge of the company's office at 38 Park Row. The company was capitalized at $100,000, but had no rating at Bradstreet's. The company published two expensive works, "Venice of To-Day," by F. Hopkinson Smith, at $25 to $500 a set, and "Sporting Incidents," giving colored illustrations of hunting, riding, and driving of the "400." The company formerly was located at 31 East Seventeenth Street, but moved to 38 Park Row in December, 1897.

PLATTSBURG, MO.—Web Burnett has bought the Post-Office Book Store, and will add a news-stand and increase the stock at once. Mr. Burnett has for the last four years been in the employ of W. W. Shaw, bookseller and stationer, of Paris, Mo.

PORTSMOUTH, O.—Rev. A. Schapiro, having retired from the firm of Schloss & Company, has opened a bookstore at the corner of Second and Chillicothe Streets.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.—Frank J. Murphy, of the firm of Murphy, booksellers, has been succeeded by M. Guerra, Jr. The new firm-name is Watlington & Guerra.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—George S. Graves on the 15th inst. sold his interests in the Phelps Publishing Company of this city and Chicago and the Orange Judd Company of New York, Chicago, and this city, to Herbert Myrick and associates. The two companies are publishers of The Springfield Homestead, a local semi-weekly; The Farm and Home, a semi-monthly with a Western edition published in Chicago; The American Agriculturist, a weekly; The Orange Judd Farmer, a weekly; and The New England Homestead. The companies also publish agricultural books. No change in the personnel or management of the two companies is involved in the transaction except that Frederick Harris of the Third National Bank of Springfield becomes Treasurer of the Orange Judd Company and H. H. Bowman of the Springfield National Bank Treasurer of the Phelps Company, and the introduction of W. G. McIntyre, also of Springfield, Tillv Haynes of Boston, and Howard Mansfield of Brooklyn, N. Y., into the directorate of the concerns.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—T. W. Leete on the 22d inst. was appointed receiver of the Prang-Taber Art Company. The stockholders and directors have found that the company ran $32,000 behind as a result of its operations here. The assets are reported to be worth $450,000, while the liabilities are put at $176,000. The company has on its books $90,000 worth of orders for the fall. The company's deficit is ascribed to the cost of removal, loss of business in the interim, and the difficulty of getting results out of help not acquainted with their plant.

TROY, N. Y.—H. Miles Nimms, agent, bookseller, is offering to compromise with creditors at 40 cents on the dollar.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

CLEMENT SHORTER is to publish, sooner or later, a bibliographical catalogue of his library, which is sure to be of considerable interest to his brother bookmen. Something of this sort, it will be remembered, was done by Charles F. Blackburn, some five or six years ago, in a little volume called "Rambles Among Books"—the said books being those which he had himself collected.

CATALOGUES OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND BOOKS.—A. S. Clark, 174 Fulton St., New York, Miscellaneous. (No. 48, 32 p. 8°.)—Lemcke & Buechner, 812 Broadway, New York, Bulletin of World Literature, April. (No. 4, 1146–1522 titles.)—Maggs Bros., 159 Paddington Green, London, Eng., Old-time literature. (No. 165, 997 titles.)—Martinus Nijhoff, The Hague, Economie Politique–Socialisme. (No. 294, 450 titles;) also, Works on war from the earliest times to the present. (500 titles.)—Bernard Quaritch, 15 Piccadilly, London, Illuminated and Decorated Mediæval Manuscripts, and rare and valuable books relating to the fine arts, sports, and general literature. (No. 190, 489 titles, 6*d*.)—John Skinner, 44N. Pearl St., Albany, N. Y., Americana, genealogy, old school-books, and old English imprints. (No. 15, 146 titles.)—Simmel & Co., 18 Rossstr., Leipzig, Aegyptologie, Afrikanische Sprachen, Ethnographie, Geographie u. Geschichte Afrikas. (No. 186, 879 titles;) also, Exakte Wissenschaften. (No. 185, 1226 titles.)—George D. Smith, 4 E. 42d St., New York, Miscellaneous. (No. 20, 277 titles.)—Albert Sutton, 8 Deansgate, Manchester, Eng., Miscellaneous, including Masonic books and book-plates. (No. 66, 828 titles.)—v. Zahn & Jaensch, Dresden, Saxony, Alte Drucke, Holzschnitt u. Kupferwerke d. 15.–18. Jahrh. (No. 105, 3777 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HAROLD FREDERIC'S "In the Market Place," published by the Frederick A. Stokes Company, is now in its third edition, (18th thousand.)

A THIRD edition of "Richard Carvel" is on the press for immediate issue. The second was exhausted within a week of the publication of the book.

JOHN PIERPONT MORGAN has just purchased one of the finest private libraries in London for $150,000. It is reported that it contains the finest first folio Shakespeare extant.

WILLIAM ELLIS JONES, 5 South Twelfth Street, Richmond, Va., invites subscriptions to the "Word-Book of Virginia Folk-Speech," by Dr. B. W. Green, of Warwick. Only 300 copies will be printed.

THE MONTGOMERY PUBLISHING COMPANY, New York, of which Will M. Clemens is treasurer, has in preparation "The Romance of Atlantis," by Elizabeth Birkmaier. The story of the lost island empire is graphically portrayed, and the love romance upon which the tale is based is said to be cleverly drawn.

CHARLES A. CLAPP, of the firm of E. P. Dutton & Co., New York, has been advised by his physician to take a rest. He will, therefore, soon visit his old home in Massachusetts, and thence will go to the White Mountains. Mr. Clapp has never recovered from the attack of the grip from which he suffered last winter.

THE HOME PUBLISHING COMPANY report that the first edition of Archibald Clavering Gunter's latest novel, "M. S. Bradford, Special," published on the 17th inst., was exhausted in three days. It has proved the most immediate success of any of Mr. Gunter's books since the publication of his "Mr. Barnes." A new issue will be ready at once.

THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA, Philadelphia, is ably carrying on the task of popularizing Judaism and keeping its best spirit alive. It has recently published Abrahams's "Jewish Literature," an introductory sketch of Jewish literature from the "Mishna" to Mendelssohn, brightly written, clear and accurate. Each of the twenty-five chapters of the book has a pointed heading and closes with a little English bibliography guiding to further study.

W. QUACKENBUSH, 58 John Street, New York, has published a little book called "Watermarks," which contains a list of watermarks available to the trade in the United States. The book is made up in six sections, showing the watermarks of manufacturers and of dealers in Boston, Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia, and of a number of other cities, the latter being bunched under the title "Miscellaneous." The book is of service to every buyer and seller of paper.

DODD, MEAD & CO. will publish in the fall Sir Walter Besant's new story, "The Orange Girl," which, like the author's "Dorothy Foster," is a tale of the eighteenth century—of the time when the debtors' prisons were kept teeming with wretched humanity, and when men, women, and children were hanged for trifling offences. The heroine of the tale belonged to the criminal class; she began her career as an orange girl at Drury Lane Theatre. Her inherently fine and noble nature is intensified by the vicious character of her surroundings. Of course the time of action permits the author to bring into play as a setting for his scenes much of old London, with which he is so familiar.

HENRY HOLT & CO. will publish in the near future a work of considerable present interest in Krausse's "Russia in Asia;" also, a novel by Ernest Dowson and Arthur Moore, entitled "Adrian Rome: a contemporary portrait." The fact that this year (August 28) is the 150th anniversary of Goethe's birthday is commemorated on the title-page of a biography to be issued at once by Henry Holt & Co., entitled "Johann Heinrich Jung's [genannt Stilling] Lebensgeschichte, eine wahrhafte Geschichte von ihm selbst erzählt: zum hundert-und-fünfzigsten Geburtstage Goethes, im Auszuge herausgegeben mit Wörterbuch von Sigmon M. Stern, Director of Stern's School of Languages of New York City." The author was one of Goethe's most intimate friends, and gives many delightful glimpses of him in these pages.

THE Collegiate Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, New York, has published "A Brief Account of Our Historic Church," which gives a succinct idea of the growth of the denomination, from the the organization in 1566 to the present, including a sketch of the establishment of the first church in New York City in 1628. Among the interesting pictures with which the book is illustrated are New York in 1679, the First Garden Street Church of 1693, the Second Garden Church of 1807, the old Middle Church on Nassau Street in 1729, the North Church on Fulton Street, the Middle Church in Lafayette Place in 1839, the handsome edifice at Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street, the church of West End Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street, the Knox Memorial on Forty-first Street near Ninth Avenue, and portraits of former ministers of the Collegiate Church.

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY, Philadelphia, has in preparation the following: "Dickey Downy, the Autobiography of a Bird," by Virginia S. Patterson, with line and color illustrations; "Christ in Creation," a discussion of ethical monism, by Augustus H. Strong, LL.D.; "Around the World and Palestine," an account of travels, by Robert Stuart MacArthur, D.D.; "The Celestial Lamp and Other Sermons," also by Dr. MacArthur; "Hilltop Farm," by Mrs. S. B. Titterington, with four illustrations; "Romanism in Its Home," by George B. Eager, D.D.; "Pen Pictures of Mormonism," by Rev. M. L. Oswalt; "Institutes of Moral Philosophy," by Lyman B. Tefft, D.D., of Hartshorn Memorial College; "The Messiah in the Psalms," by Henry M. King, D.D.; "Doctrines and Ordinances of the New Testament," by O. P. Eaches, D.D., a new volume in the Bible Handbook Series; "Ward Hill at College," by Everett T. Tomlinson, with nine illustrations by Frank McKernan; and "A Manual of Church History," by Prof. A. H. Newman, D.D.

ON July 7 of last year Prof. Charles Waldstein, of Cambridge University, England, delivered a lecture on "The English-Speaking Brotherhood" at the Imperial Institute, London, at which Lord Rosebery took the chair and delivered an address on the same subject, now reprinted in the volume of addresses by that statesman. An abridged version of Professor Waldstein's address appeared in the August number of The North American Review. It is now to be brought out in full, by John Lane, in a volume under the title of "The Expansion of Western Ideals and the World's Peace." Professor Waldstein, who was once a student at Columbia University, is now in this country to edit the large publication of the American excavations in Greece at Argive Heraeum. In order to take charge of the American School at Athens in 1889, he resigned the directorship of the Fitzwilliam Museum, a life position he had held for six years. The English university authorities, however, generously permitted him to take charge of the American work while still maintaining his Chair of Archæology, by giving him six months' leave of absence every winter.

JOSEPH J. LITTLE, President of the Board of Education of New York, has published a pamphlet entitled "A Statement of Facts regarding the Indictments for Criminal Libel found by the Grand Jury against Nicholas Murray Butler, Professor of Philosophy in Columbia University, and others, upon the complaint of Joseph J. Little, President of the Board of Education of the City of New York." In an introductory note the author states the purpose of his pamphlet as follows: "So many personal friends and others are constantly asking me, by letter and in person, for a statement regarding the indictment . . . that I have prepared this formal statement as a reply to the inquiries of all who have failed to obtain a correct understanding of the case through the imperfect statements that have appeared in the daily press." Mr. Little desires it to be known that his principal objection was not so much to being called a fine old educational mastodon and as antediluvian as to the intimation, that he holds to be clear in the article in the Educational Review which he complained of, that he is among those "easily impressed by the cohesive power of public plunder."

FOREIGN NOTES.

GEORGE ALLEN, of London, has in preparation an edition of Homeric hymns translated by Andrew Lang.

THE copy of the Kilmarnock edition of Burns, which sold in Edinburgh last year for $3860, is again in the market.

WILLIAM HEINEMANN, London, will publish at once Brandes's work on Ibsen and Björnson, translated by William Archer.

METHUEN & CO., London, have in preparation "The English Turf," a work by C. Richardson, dealing with the evolution of the race-horse, and describing the art of breeding.

THE CLARENDON PRESS, Oxford, will publish at once the second series of Dr. Edward Moore's "Studies in Dante," and before long a large-type reprint of the "Divina Commedia" from Dr. Moore's "Oxford Dante."

CHATTO & WINDUS, London, have in press an account of Emile Zola's eleven months' exile in London, where he enjoyed perfect obscurity in a hotel near Fleet Street, written by Ernest Vizetelly, the translator of "Paris."

DENT & CO., London, will publish shortly an English edition of Dr. Horst Kohl's "Guide Through Bismarck's Reflections and Reminiscences." It will contain a considerable amount of matter not previously given, together with a photogravure of the last portrait of the Iron Chancellor by Lembach, painted in 1895.

VLADIMIR TSHERTKOFF, Tolstoy's agent in England, is protesting vigorously against the manner in which Tolstoy's new novel, "Resurrection," is being treated by the editor of Cosmopolitan. According to Mr. Tshertkoff, the liberties taken by the Cosmopolitan do not end at the excision of passages, but go on to "alterations and modifications of a nature quite unnecessary from even an extreme puritanical standpoint."

AN interesting Stevenson manuscript of thirty pages, all in his own handwriting, entitled "Markheim," will be sold at Sotheby's July 5. The story appeared originally in an annual, and is supposed to be the first shape that "The Strange Story of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" took in Stevenson's mind. The same sale includes thirty-six unpublished letters from Dickens, 1857 to 1861, and six from Thackeray, all addressed to John Hollingshead. Dickens' manuscript, "The Battle of Life," was sold on the 13th inst. for $2000; "Pickwick," in original parts, each inscribed by Dickens to Mary Hogarth, $525, and Forster's "Life of Dickens," in an extra illustrated form, for $2500.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted," subscribers only are entitled to a free insertion of five lines for books out of print, exclusive of address (in any issue except special numbers), to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents per line, and amount should be enclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents per line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents per line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

Under the heading "Situations Wanted," subscribers are entitled to one free insertion of five lines. For repeated matter and advertisements of non-subscribers the charge is 10 cents per line.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents per nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

Parties desiring to receive answers to their advertisements through this office must either call for them or enclose postage stamps with their orders for the insertion of such advertisements. In all cases we must have the full address of advertisers, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal only on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly," does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

THE KISS

AND ITS HISTORY.

By CHRISTOPHER NYROP, PH.D.,

Professor of the Roman Languages and Literature at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Officer of Public Instruction of France; also Honored by the Gold Medal for Merits of Roumania.

This pretty volume has been, without a single exception, most favorably received by the leading newspapers of the United States, from which we quote only a few extracts:

"Prof. Nyrop writes of the kiss with the fervor of a poet, the judgment of an epicure, and the learning of a pundit."—The Chicago Times-Herald.

"It is so replete in its historical facts, admirable in its analysis of objects and motives . . . as to be a delightful study for any reader."—The Inter-Ocean.

"It is a pretty little volume . . . and gives a great deal of curious information. Prof. Nyrop writes pleasantly, and knows how to border along delicate themes without offence."—The Chicago Chronicle.

" . . . Interesting and not nauseating."—The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"If Prof. Nyrop has overlooked any kiss that ever happened, it will be detected by some one who knows more about the subject than I do."—The Louisville Courier-Journal.

"It is now possible for young and romantic people to learn all that is known about kissing, and in book form."—The Boston Globe.

THE

For 1899 (Twenty-Seventh Year.)

Large 8vo. With Duplex Index.

"The Publishers' Trade List Annual" for 1899 will contain:

The latest CATALOGUES OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names and smaller lists at the end of the volume.

These Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase or sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we are now applying it to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Only those subscribing and forwarding amount now are entitled to subscription rate of $1.50; after publication day, and on orders for which we have to collect after that date, the regular price will be $2.00 net.

Remittances should be made by Check, Money Order on New York, or Registered Letter, as we cannot be responsible for any losses. Receipt for remittance will be sent by return mail.

☞ Unless special shipping directions are received, copies ready for delivery will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for $1.20 per copy extra.

"One of the most time-saving and profitable instrumentalities used by the trade."
—AMERICAN NEWS CO.

We have also the agency in this country for "WHITAKER'S REFERENCE LIST." A few copies are left. The price for the present is $5.00 net, in two volumes. Those desiring this useful work of reference are advised to order at once, as it will shortly be out of print.

"THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY,"

59 DUANE STREET, P. O. BOX 943, NEW YORK.

Prisoners and Captives

has reached its ninth thousand since it was first published in this country six weeks ago. It is in all respects worthy of the author's masterpiece, "The Sowers," and was issued by Mr. Merriman's English publishers at twenty-one shillings. Our price, $1.25.

The Measure of a Man can be recommended to all women and about fifty per cent. of mankind. The hero is strongly but consistently drawn, and his veneration and worship of his lady love and the sacrifices he makes in her behalf are sure to recommend him to the friendly consideration of the gentler sex. E. LIVINGSTON PRESCOTT is the author. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

Martyrs of Empire is a novel dealing in an intelligent, interesting, and convincing manner with the "open air" life of the ranchmen of Australia. To the reader whose experience has been partly in out-of-the-way places "Martyrs of Empire" will make a particularly strong appeal. It is a stirring story and at the same time good literature. HERBERT C. MCILWAINE. 12mo, cloth, $1.25.

The Angel of the Covenant

By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, is a work of rare distinction. It is a great historical picture, in which fact and fancy are welded together in a fine realization of the spirit of the time of which it treats, the 17th Century. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.
